§ 2000. In General

- a. In general
- b. Personal liability and ownership of property
- c. Particular kinds of taxes

a. In General

Generally speaking, all persons and property within its corporate limits are taxable by a municipal corporation under legislative sanction and constitutional restrictions.

All persons and all property within the corporate limits, whether real or personal, if taxable by the state, ordinarily are subject to municipal taxation under authority conferred by the legislature,⁶² although the property or taxpayer derives no benefit from the tax imposed.⁶³ In order to be the subject of such municipal exaction, however, the property must be taxable within the contemplation of the regulatory statute or ordinance⁶⁴ which is subject to the rule of strict construction,⁶⁵ although provisions imposing municipal taxes will be construed in the light of their context,⁶⁶ and with due regard for other statutes creating exemption from taxation.⁶⁷ Property may not be taxed in violation

The statute imposing four-mill tax for county and city purposes on loans, credits, securities, etc., does not intend to tax all personal property since opening clause limits property subject to tax to "the classes of property hereinafter enumerated" and statute describes property concerned with great particularity, avoiding general phrases, and where general phrases are used, they are linked with context so as to limit the generality of their application.—In re Pennsylvania Co. for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities, supra.

Leased tangibles

A literal construction of statutory provision regarding taxation of tangible personal property leased for profit is not to be adopted where it would result in subjecting to local

of the owner's organic rights.⁶⁸ The determination of what articles or transactions are taxable is a legislative function, and administrative municipal tax authorities have power to determine only what articles fall within the field selected for taxation by the legislature,⁶⁹ and, where the facts are undisputed, the question whether any particular article falls within the field is a question of law.⁷⁰

The power to tax real and personal estate does not require the municipality to tax both kinds of property,⁷¹ and, unless prohibited by law, each may be taxed separately.⁷² The option given to municipalities by a constitutional provision to substitute for the ad valorem tax on personalty a tax based on income, licenses, or franchises necessarily carries with it the power to define the class of property as to which the substitution is made.⁷³ Authority to tax real property does not confer any power to tax personal property.⁷⁴ The question whether particular property is personalty or realty for purpose of taxation is to be determined by construing and applying the pertinent taxation statutes,⁷⁵ and not by ascertaining whether, under the strict rules of the common law, the property should, as between individuals, be termed "real estate" or "personal property."⁷⁶ Property which is taxable for one purpose must be held to be taxable for all purposes of general taxation.⁷⁷ However, a city cannot tax the same property twice unless authority to do so is conferred by the express words of a statute or by necessary implication.⁷⁸

Property under highway. Property of a taxpayer placed under a public highway is none the less taxable because it is suffered to remain there under a permit revocable by the city,⁷⁹ or because after the lapse of a fixed term it becomes the property of the city,⁸⁰ especially where, in the agreement with the city, the taxpayer covenants to pay taxes thereon.⁸¹

One owning property on the tax date may become personally liable for municipal taxes thereon, and continue liable, even though he sells the property; on the other hand, the purchaser or lessee of property may become liable for taxes on his interest as beneficial owner.

In accordance with rules governing questions of ownership as affecting general taxation of property, as discussed in the C.J.S. title Taxation §§ 92-106, also 61 C.J. p 204 note 40-p 219 note 44, which rules ordinarily control as to matters respecting ownership of property for purposes of municipal taxation,⁸² one owning property on the tax date may become personally liable for the taxes thereon,⁸³ and such liability may continue, even though he sells the property to another before the taxes become payable.⁸⁴ The record owner of real estate on the date when taxes accrue and become due may be liable therefor, even though he sells the property during the year.⁸⁵ On the other hand, the purchaser's interest in property is subject to tax after he acquires a beneficial ownership, even though legal title may not yet have passed to him.⁸⁶

In this connection it has been said that a municipality may treat either the real or the registered owner as primarily liable for taxes,⁸⁷ although as between the two the latter is secondarily liable, and may recover from the real owner sums paid by him on account of municipal taxes.⁸⁸

A lessee of realty who places improvements thereon may be subject to tax as beneficial owner of the improvements, even though the lease provides that they shall become the property of the landowner, where the landowner's actual possession of the improvements is delayed until termination of the lease,⁸⁹ and this rule has been applied where the lessor is a tax-exempt institution.⁹⁰ On the other hand, it has been held that, where the lease provides that improvements shall be the property of the landlord, they are taxable to him and not to the tenant,⁹¹ and that, even though improvements are placed on realty by a tenant under a lease providing that they shall remain the tenant's property with right of removal, they may become subject to tax as part of the realty.⁹² Where the lessor has paid all taxes on leased property, it is not subject to further tax in the hands of the lessee.⁹³ Personal property has been held taxable only to the owner thereof as of the assessing date,⁹⁴ and only in the hands of those specified by statute.⁹⁵

c. Particular Kinds of Taxes

A municipal corporation may have power to impose particular kinds of taxes, such as capitation, franchise, street, or other taxes.

In addition to its power to tax persons and property within its corporate limits, as discussed supra subdivisions a and b of this section, a municipal corporation may or may not have power to impose other particular kinds of taxes, such as capitation, inheritance, and other taxes discussed infra this subdivision, or income, sales, and other taxes, infra § 2020.

§ 2002. Residence and Place of Business

For municipal tax purposes, a taxpayer is assessable where he resides on the annual date fixed by statute; where business is carried on in a number of municipalities, the term "place of business" has been construed as the place where the business is carried on by its owners under their own control and on their own account.

A taxpayer is assessable where he resides on the annual date fixed by statute,²⁰ even though a change of territory may operate to change his residence before the assessment is completed.²¹ In this connection it has been said that for the purpose of fixing his status for municipal taxation, a person is deemed to have only one domicile at a time.²² It is immaterial in what part of the municipality the taxpayer lives, provided only his residence is within the municipal limits,²³ and one who moves into the municipality before the beginning of the fiscal year and brings personal estate with him thereby subjects such property to the municipal tax,²⁴ even though it has already been taxed for state and county purposes.²⁵ A beneficiary's personalty is, in the absence of a statute to the contrary, taxable at his own residence rather than that of his guardian,²⁶ or the executor,²⁷ or trustee;²⁸ but some statutes modify the rule as to property held in trust.²⁹

Where business is carried on in a number of municipalities, it has been held that the term "place of business," as used in a statute, must be construed as the place where the business is carried on by its owners under their own control and on their own account;³⁰ it is not the place where unused property is stored,³¹ or the place where only a few of their many business transactions are consummated by them,³² where the greater part of the business is transacted in some other city, unless, as in the case of distilled spirits, withdrawal of property from a warehouse subjects it to taxation in the city in which the warehouse is located.³³ A domestic corporation may be present in a municipality for tax purposes, even though its principal office is elsewhere.³⁴

§ 2003. Property outside Corporate Limits

- a. Realty
- b. Personalty

a. Realty

Ordinarily a municipal corporation may not tax realty beyond its corporate limits.

As a general rule, municipal taxes may not be levied on land situated beyond the corporate limits,³⁵ and the legislature has no power to authorize a municipal corporation to tax for its own local purposes lands lying beyond the corporate limits.³⁶ In some jurisdictions, however, it has been held not to be a violation of the constitution to authorize a municipality to tax property outside of its boundaries but adjacent thereto and within certain defined limits for purposes beneficial to the property taxed,³⁷ as, for example, property within a school district, for the construction and maintenance of schools,³⁸ property within a certain distance of a city's boundaries, for the purchase of the securities of a railroad serving the entire district,³⁹ or property irrigated by water distributed by the municipality.⁴⁰ A city has no prescriptive right to levy a tax on land outside its boundaries merely because it has exercised municipal authority over the owner of such land for twenty years;⁴¹ nor can it base such right on the owner's use of streets extended by the city beyond its corporate limits, the city consenting to such use.⁴² An assertion by a municipal corporation of a right to tax does not afford proof that its boundaries include certain land.⁴³

Property partly beyond limits. Where real estate lies partly within and partly without the corporate limits, the part lying within the limits is taxable by the municipality,⁴⁴ and the portion lying outside is not.⁴⁵ If the portions are not readily separable,⁴⁶ or if the municipal assessment is merely an adoption of a gross assessment made by state or county authorities,⁴⁷ the whole assessment is void; as is also a supplemental assessment, separating the parts within and without the city, but made without authority of law.⁴⁸

Different municipalities. The property of one municipality may not be taxed by another municipality.⁴⁹

Estoppel. Repeated failure of a municipality to tax lands, and public recognition of their being outside the boundaries, do not estop the municipality from subsequently taxing such lands as in fact within its boundaries.⁵⁰

b. Personality

In some jurisdictions a municipal corporation may tax personal property belonging to its residents and physically situated beyond the municipal borders.

In some jurisdictions, personal property situated outside the municipal limits is not taxable by the municipal corporation,⁵¹ although the owner has his domicile therein,⁵² and the rule that personal property follows the person of the owner has been held not to apply as an absolute rule of law in such case.⁵³ Under the statutes of other jurisdictions, the situs of personal property for the purpose of taxation is the domicile of the owner rather than the actual situs of the property itself, and personalty outside the city owned by persons residing in the city is taxable therein,⁵⁴ unless the property is outside the state,⁵⁵ or the owner is making a mere temporary sojourn in the city;⁵⁶ and, as discussed infra § 2005, personalty inside the city owned by nonresidents is not taxable. It has also been held that the proper place to tax personalty is the residence of the owner,⁵⁷ provided it has not secured a situs for taxation elsewhere, in which latter event it is to be taxed where situated.⁵⁸ The situs at the date of the accrual of the tax is the test of taxability,⁵⁹ except in so far as such rule may be made inapplicable by statutes controlling in the case of removal of residence within the fiscal year.⁶⁰

Intangibles may have their situs at the domicile of the owner for purposes of municipal taxation.⁶¹ Under statutes providing for the taxation of intangible personal property in the city where the owner resides or has his principal place of business, an investment of capital in tangible property outside the city which is held for purposes of manufacture is deemed to be intangible property⁶² and taxable in the city where the owner resides or has his principal place of business,⁶³ rather than in the city where the property purchased is situated.⁶⁴ The fact that leased land is outside of the city limits will not affect the city's right to tax the lease as personalty when owned by a person having his place of business within the city limits.⁶⁵ The legislature, however, may not authorize municipal taxation on business not carried on within the corporate limits.⁶⁶

Personal property merely temporarily within the city limits is regarded as property outside the limits for the purposes of municipal taxation.⁶⁷

Property of decedent's estate. Under statutes providing that, where an owner dies, the situs of his personal estate, for the purposes of municipal taxation, is that of his domicile at the time of his decease, the situs of deceased's personal estate, so determined at the time of his death, remains fixed during the administration of his estate,⁶⁸ even though the property is removed from the city by his personal representatives.⁶⁹

Real and personal property of residents of annexed territory is subject to tax.—Peterson v. Swan, 2 N. W 2d 70, 231 Iowa 745.

Effect of amendment of statute

The fact that statute was amended expressly to permit additions to tax rolls of land annexed to village did not require construction of statute as not having permitted such additions before amendment.—Leary v.

debtedness existing at the date of the annexation, as discussed supra § 79. For the purpose of determining the liability for taxes of property owners in annexed territory, the territorial limits of the city, as far as their location is concerned, are fixed by the terms of the statute extending them,⁷¹ and, as between the date when a tax was authorized and the date when it was actually levied, boundaries are to be considered as they exist on the day of the actual levy,⁷² rather than the day authority to tax was granted.⁷³ Annexation made subsequent to the invalid levy of a tax on property outside the corporate limits of a municipality does not cure the invalidity of such tax.⁷⁴ Where a town has duly levied its tax and assessed personal property therein taxable on a given date, it has been held that a city thereafter organized so as to include part of such town may not levy a tax for city purposes on any of the personal property so assessed and taxed by the town for the same year.⁷⁵ Property annexed prior to the commencement of the tax year but after enactment of an ordinance fixing the rate of taxation for that year is subject to taxation at the same rate as other properties in the municipality.⁷⁶

Residents of territory annexed to a city cannot escape taxation because the portion of the territory occupied by them has not yet been assigned to a ward of the city,⁷⁷ or because they do not yet enjoy all the benefits of the city government,⁷⁸ or where they are estopped from denying the liability of their property for the tax.⁷⁹ Long-continued neglect of the municipality to tax annexed lands will not estop it from subsequently doing so.⁸⁰

Proof of annexation. The mere platting of land for addition does not amount per se to annexation, within the meaning of the foregoing rules,⁸¹ but it may with other circumstances constitute evidence of annexation.⁸²

An invalid annexation ordinarily affords no ground for taxing the territory attempted to be included within the municipal boundaries,⁸³ and the invalidity of a tax levied on land beyond the corporate limits is not cured by an extension of the city limits to include the property taxed, where such extension is invalid.⁸⁴

b. Detached or Divided Territory

Ordinarily property within a territory detached from a municipal corporation is no longer subject to tax by it.

created by statute are construed to be temporary only.⁸⁷ A constitutional provision that cities and towns shall make their own assessments for municipal purposes on property within their limits does not forbid municipal taxation of land which was by statute included in the limits of the municipality, although the jurisdiction and authority of the municipality are ousted from the land, where rights have been acquired predicated on de facto power to tax the land before the municipal jurisdiction and authority over the land have been ousted.⁸⁸ In a proper case a municipality may reserve the right to tax lands then within its borders, even though they may subsequently be excluded.⁸⁹

Where bonds have been issued and thereafter some of the lands are excluded because they are not so located that they can derive benefit, the municipality lacks power to tax them to pay bonds issued while they formed part of the municipality unless it appears that the owners have in some way estopped themselves;⁹⁰ but, if the lands have been benefited by the improvement for which the bonds were issued, or are so situated as to be susceptible of receiving municipal benefits, they are subject to tax.⁹¹ In this connection it has been held that a constitutional command that, when a municipality is abolished, provision should be made for protection of its creditors contemplates that on withdrawal of lands from a municipality they should continue liable for taxation for the municipal debts unless creditors are otherwise protected.⁹² Conditions as they existed during incorporation of the land in the municipal borders are the controlling factor in determining taxability of lands under such circumstances.⁹³ However, it has been held that lands illegally added to a municipality and subsequently excluded were subject to tax where they were benefited by public improvements for which municipal bonds were issued during the de facto jurisdiction of the municipality over such subsequently excluded lands.⁹⁴

§ 2005. Property of Nonresidents

Real and personal property of nonresidents, which has a situs within a municipal corporation, is subject to municipal taxation.

A municipal corporation may tax the real estate of nonresidents situated within its limits.⁹⁵ In accordance with the rules discussed in the C.J.S. title Taxation §§ 108-110, 189-196, also 61 C.J. p 220 note 56-p 221 note 72, p 340 note 7-p 359 note 79, a municipality may tax the personalty of a nonresident where such personalty has a situs within the municipality,⁹⁶ but not where it lacks such a situs.⁹⁷ Where the holder of the equitable title is, by statute, required to pay the taxes thereon, a trustee need not list personal property for taxation where the beneficial owner resides elsewhere;⁹⁸ and under statutes providing that the situs of the property of a decedent's estate, for purposes of municipal taxation, is that of his domicile at the time of his death, as discussed supra § 2002, a particular municipality in which decedent was not domiciled cannot tax the property of his estate.⁹⁹ Statutory authority to tax debts does not authorize a tax on a debt where the creditor is a nonresident, although the trustee is a resident;¹ but notes, accounts, and other choses in action in the hands of an agent of a nonresident doing business in a city, and which were received in the course of the business so conducted, have been held taxable by such city, at least where the city has general authority to tax property of every kind situated within its limits;² and, in some jurisdictions, by statute, it would seem also that moneys, notes, and credits,³ or personality generally,⁴ in the hands of a resident agent of a nonresident owner is taxable, and the agent is personally liable for the tax. In some jurisdictions, by statutes held to be valid,⁵ shares of stock of domestic corporations belonging to nonresidents are taxable in the city where the corporation has its principal office.⁶ So, by statute, in some jurisdictions, it would seem that persons living outside the corporate limits but whose ordinary avocations are pursued within the limits of the municipality are taxable the same as actual residents.⁷ Such statutes have been held valid,⁸ but are not applicable to money held by a nonresident administrator in his representative capacity.⁹

Personalty in transit. While the state may for purposes of taxation separate from the domicile of the owner the situs of personalty kept in transit, and provide for the municipal taxation of such personalty at a situs other than such domicile,¹⁰ unless it does so a municipality may not give such personalty a separate situs so as to subject it to taxation,¹¹ and, where personalty kept in transit lacks a municipal situs, it is not properly the subject of municipal taxation.¹²

c. Exemptions in General

Exemption from municipal taxation is ordinarily predicated on statutory authorization, and, where the exemption statute is purely permissive, municipal grant is also requisite.

Where statute grants to a municipal corporation power to exempt certain property from municipal taxes, such a statute is merely permissive, and, in order for such property to be exempt, the municipality must also grant the exemption.¹³ Also, a grant of a similar exemption under an earlier statute which has been superseded will not suffice to grant an exemption,¹⁴ and the fact that for many years annual ordinances have exempted certain lands from taxation for the respective years does not preclude their taxation thereafter.¹⁵ A taxpayer not prejudiced by an exemption of certain property belonging to another, as where his taxes have not been thereby increased, may not object to such exemption.¹⁶ A person or corporation seeking exemption is not entitled to the benefit of an ordinance granting it until applicant has fulfilled the requirements laid down by such ordinance.¹⁷

Where the annexation of territory to a municipality is lawful, the owner of the annexed property is entitled to such exemptions or privileges as the statute grants to other property owners within the city similarly situated,¹⁸ including exemptions under statutes enacted after the annexation;¹⁹ but an exemption may not be claimed for annexed property which is not within the terms of the exempting statute.²⁰ Where general law exempts certain classes of property from taxation, including parks, legislation authorizing the establishment of public parks by municipalities outside their boundaries is not invalid on the ground that the municipality exercises an unlawfully delegated power to exempt such parks from local taxation, since the power exercised by the municipality is that of establishing parks, not of exempting from taxation, and the exemption is a mere incident of the lawfully exercised power of establishing the park.²¹

§ 2007. Power to Grant

A municipal corporation lacks inherent power to grant exemption from taxation.

A municipal corporation has no inherent power to grant an exemption from,²² or commutation of,²³ taxes, even by way of compromising a tax suit,²⁴ and no omission of the city council to levy and collect taxes can operate to confer on a taxpayer the right of exemption by estoppel;²⁵ nor will a failure to assess taxes against a taxpayer for a long period of time raise any presumption that the city has released him from his obligation to pay, where the city is shown to have had no power to exempt.²⁶

The state, however, has power, as an attribute of sovereignty, to grant exemption from taxation, as discussed in the C.J.S. title Taxation § 216, also 61 C.J. p 384 note 20—p 385 note 40, and it may, as considered in Constitutional Law § 140, delegate its power of exemption to municipal corporations which in the exercise of such delegated powers, and if acting within constitutional limitations,²⁷ may grant exemption from municipal taxes.²⁸ It has been held that municipal power to exempt may be implied,²⁹ although it has also been held that the power to exempt does not exist unless expressly conferred,³⁰ and that the power to exempt may not be implied from the power to tax.³¹ A power to exempt land sold by the city to another will not be implied from a power to sell such land on such terms as the city shall deem proper.³²

The power to exempt does not exist where it would conflict with some constitutional, statutory, or charter provision,³³ although in some states a prohibition against exemption, as worded, is construed to apply only to a certain class of taxes,³⁴ or to except such exemptions as are based on a consideration of public service.³⁵ A constitutional prohibition is not violated by an abatement of a landowner's taxes as a means of refunding to him overpayments on account of a local assessment;³⁶ nor is a constitutional prohibition against exemptions from general taxation violated by a statute exempting certain property from local assessments,³⁷ or by a failure to make an assessment, where under the statute the council is given discretionary power with respect thereto.³⁸ Where its charter prohibits a city from granting an exemption from general taxes, a provision for the payment by a public utility of a fixed annual charge, "in lieu of all other taxes" will be construed to refer to taxes for the use of the streets,³⁹ and not general taxes.⁴⁰

The power to exempt may not be exercised with respect to property which under the constitution is nonexempt,⁴¹ or after the power to tax is barred by the statute of limitations.⁴² Where, by statute, property can be exempted from municipal taxation only by a vote of the citizens, an agreement for exemption without such vote is a nullity.⁴³ It is not competent, by the petition for incorporation, to exempt from taxation for municipal purposes property which otherwise, under the law, would be subject to such taxation.⁴⁴

Annexed territory. Where the legislature has annexed territory to a municipality, the latter lacks power to provide that none of such territory shall be annexed without consent of the owners and that, if they consent, taxes on their property shall be remitted for a specified period.⁴⁵ Statutes respecting assumption of the indebtedness of annexed territory will be upheld as against the contention that they provide for exemption of property within the annexed territory in contravention of constitutional provisions, where the terms of the statutes do not extend an invalid exemption.⁴⁶

The rule of strict construction ordinarily applies to statutes and ordinances providing for exemption from municipal taxation.

Statutes and ordinances granting exemptions from taxation are strictly construed,⁴⁷ and no claim for exemption can be sustained unless it is within the express letter or the necessary scope of the exemption laws.⁴⁸ A provision claimed to confer an exemption will be construed not to be applicable to the particular case unless the intention to render it applicable clearly appears.⁴⁹ On the other hand, an exemption statute or ordinance will not be construed so strictly as to defeat its purpose,⁵⁰ and a statutory provision that state taxes therein authorized shall be in lieu of municipal taxes is not subject to the rule of strict construction,⁵¹ since it prescribes a method of taxation⁵² rather than an exemption.⁵³

Commencement and termination of exemption. The general rules, as discussed in the C.J.S. title Taxation §§ 237, 238, also 61 C.J. p 406 note 65—p 407 note 5, ordinarily govern the commencement and termination of exemption from municipal taxes.⁵⁴

§ 2009. Property Exempt

The property which is exempt from municipal taxation depends on the provisions under which the exemption is claimed.

The property which is exempt from municipal taxation depends on the provisions under which the exemption is claimed.⁵⁵ A statute exempting specific property will be construed to include an exemption of essential parts thereof,⁵⁶ and an exemption of the "operative property" of a car company has been held to include land⁵⁷ with railroad tracks and other incidents necessary thereto.⁵⁸ Where a municipal tax is assessed on property, a part of which is exempt, and there is no way to distinguish the exempt part, the whole will be exempt.⁵⁹ A municipal tax on exempt property is void.⁶⁰

§ 2010. Taxes within Exemption

Statutes exempting from taxation in general have been construed in some instances not to apply to municipal taxes, and statutes exempting from state and county taxes have been construed as not affording an exemption from municipal taxes. An exemption from municipal taxes has been considered as applicable only to general municipal taxes.

Statutes exempting from taxation in general have been construed in some instances as not to apply to municipal taxes.⁶¹ In other instances the statute has been held to apply to such taxes.⁶² Statutes exempting from state and county taxes have been construed as not affording an exemption from municipal taxes,⁶³ and statutes levying a tax in lieu of state and county taxes do not operate to exempt from municipal taxes.⁶⁴

An exemption from municipal taxes has been considered in some cases as applicable only to general municipal taxes as distinguished from special taxes for other purposes than the maintenance of the city government,⁶⁵ and from assessments for local improvements,⁶⁶ but the exemption applies to a special tax levied on the entire city for a local improvement,⁶⁷ or for aid to a railroad.⁶⁸

Under statutes authorizing exemption from municipal taxes for a limited period, the municipal corporation may grant an exemption for a lesser period.

Statutory exemptions may be limited to a particular period of time, fixed by the terms of the statute. Where a statute authorizes an exemption from municipal taxes for a specified number of years, a vote of the council to exempt for a lesser time is valid;⁷³ but the granting of the exemption for a period not less than the statutory limit is a grant for the full statutory period.⁷⁴ Under authority to exempt property for a term of years, the term of exemption does not necessarily commence running from the passage of the statute;⁷⁵ but, if the exemption is voted within a reasonable time thereafter by the municipal council, it may begin then.⁷⁶ Where the statute is construed as granting an exemption for a term of years beginning on the happening of some future contingency, the exemption becomes operative at that time.⁷⁷

§ 2012. Repeal or Revocation

In the absence of contract rights, a municipal exemption from taxation may be repealed or revoked at any time.

The general rule is that an exemption from municipal taxation may be repealed or revoked at any time.⁷⁸ Where the exemption is granted by the state on the application of the municipal corporation and the taxpayer, both acting under an agreement between themselves only, and the state is not a party, the subsequent repeal by the state is valid;⁷⁹ but, where an exemption was an inducement to a contract based on a consideration and entered into between the municipality and the person claiming the exemption, the municipality has no right to revoke the exemption within the period for which the exemption was granted.⁸⁰

Repeal by implication. A statutory power to exempt is repealed by implication by inconsistent provisions contained in a subsequent constitution⁸¹ or statute.⁸²

§ 2013. Remission of Taxes by Contract

While a municipal corporation may agree with a taxpayer to pay for benefits received an amount equal to the taxes on his property, in the absence of valid legislative authorization it may not agree to exempt his property from taxation.

It is well settled that a municipal corporation may agree with a taxpayer that, as a price of services to be rendered or commodities furnished by the taxpayer to the municipal corporation, the latter will pay a sum equal to the amount of the taxes to be levied on the property of the taxpayer, where the sum stipulated to be paid is a fair and just allowance and the stipulation is bona fide and not in the nature of an evasion of a prohibition against exemption from taxation;⁸³ but a distinction is made between a contract to pay for benefits received an amount equal to the taxes on the property of the person or corporation conferring the benefits and a contract granting an exemption therefor,⁸⁴ and it has been held that the latter is not within the power of the municipality to make,⁸⁵ without valid legislative authority.⁸⁶ A remission of taxes which is based merely on a contract which, at the time of its execution, the city council had no authority to make, is void,⁸⁷ and it will not be validated by a subsequent authorizing statute which is not retroactive in its operation.⁸⁸ A municipality may not indirectly remit taxes by a provision that certain realty shall remain outside its borders for a specified period where the municipality lacks power to make such an agreement.⁸⁹

Under valid legislative authorization, a municipality may contract to exempt property from taxation,⁹⁰ and, where the contract is entered into before the effective date of the statute authorizing it, it has been held that the contract will be valid,⁹¹ although it may not operate to confer exemption until such effective date.⁹² In order to be valid, a contract remitting taxes must not impose conditions contrary to public policy.⁹³ The extent of the remission from taxes depends on the terms of the contract.⁹⁴ Rights to the remission of taxes based on contract are assignable according to some authorities,⁹⁵ and, according to others, are not.⁹⁶

topped from asserting the invalidity of the contract by the acceptance of benefits thereunder,⁹⁷ but it has been held that a city which has classified a taxpayer for a long period of years as among those entitled to exemptions under an ordinance is estopped thereafter from placing a different construction on its own ordinance and subjecting him to the tax,⁹⁸ and that a taxpayer who has accepted the benefits of an exemption for a shorter period than that named in the resolution granting it is estopped from afterward claiming it for a longer time.⁹⁹

§ 2014. Proceedings

A property owner claiming an exemption from municipal taxation must plead and prove his exemption.

Under the various statutes it has been held that the proper method to establish or enforce an exemption from municipal taxation is by a bill to restrain the assessment and collection of taxes,¹ or by abatement proceedings.² A property owner claiming an exemption must plead³ and, likewise, the forbear to impose taxes on particular property, or to impose them only under given limitations, or on certain given conditions."—Tampa Shipbuilding & Engineering Co. v. City of Tampa, supra.

barred by limitations.—Sisters of Mercy v. Town of Hooksett, 42 A.2d 222, 93 N.H. 301.

Motion to dismiss

Where neither party to religious corporation's proceedings for abatement of taxes, assessed by town against petitioner's property, on ground of exemption thereof from taxation, put in issue question whether town officers assessed property disproportionately to assessments of other property in same town, town's motion to dismiss petition because plaintiff offered no evidence of assessed or true value of any other property in town was properly denied.—Sisters of Mercy v. Town of Hooksett, supra.

property owner claiming an exemption must prove⁴ his exemption. It is never presumed that the right to tax is abandoned or surrendered by the municipality unless it clearly appears that such was the intention;⁵ and a contract of exemption will not be inferred from facts which do not lead irresistibly and necessarily to the existence of the contract;⁶ but, on the other hand, when the making of a contract remitting taxes is established, the presumption is in favor of its validity.⁷ A memorandum, indorsed on the assessment roll of a municipal corporation, to the effect that the property of a corporation, not included in any constitutional or statutory exemption, is exempt from taxation, is incompetent to prove that it is in fact exempt,⁸ and cannot operate as notice of such fact to purchasers of municipal bonds.⁹ The findings¹⁰ and judgment¹¹ in proceedings to establish an exemption must be in accordance with, and be supported by, the pleadings and evidence.

such exemption does not rest on statute but on general principles of justice and expediency.¹⁴ Thus, in the absence of consent, ordinarily a municipality may not tax the property of another municipality,¹⁵ a county,¹⁶ the state,¹⁷ agencies of the state,¹⁸ the United States,¹⁹ or agencies of the latter.²⁰

On the other hand, in the absence of a constitutional prohibition, the legislature may expressly authorize municipal taxation of state and county property,²¹ even though the general legislative policy in the state is against the taxing of public lands for local improvements,²² and even though the enactment of the authorizing statute involves the repeal, by implication, of an earlier statute exempting such property.²³ While a sovereign government may not be taxed by a municipality without its consent,²⁴ where it consents to local taxation of its own or its instrumentality's property, such property becomes subject to municipal taxation in the same manner and to the same extent as other property of like character,²⁵ and the governmental instrumentality becomes subject to the usual incidents of collection.²⁶

Necessity of public use. In order for property of one municipality located in another to be free from taxation in the latter, it must appear that such property is devoted to a public use²⁷ or that it is held with the design within a reasonable time to devote it to such use.²⁸ When property formerly devoted to a public purpose is transferred to use in private enterprise, ordinarily it becomes subject to municipal taxation.²⁹

Property owned by taxing municipality. It has been held that a municipality may not tax property owned by itself;³⁰ but other authority holds that a

Building on private land

The fact that building constructed pursuant to contract between United States Navy and owner of realty with government money, was constructed brick by brick, and hence was not easily removable, did not make the building realty subject to tax assessment against owner of realty by city, if to do so would be contrary to the intention of the parties; and where contract for construction of brick building on realty with government money provided that no part of building or equipment was to become a fixture, that title was to vest in the United States, and that owner of realty was to pay rent for use of building, city could not assess building for taxation either against owner of realty or the United States Government.—*City of East Orange v. Validity of exemption from taxation property belonging to any municipal corporation, exemption of real and personal property of housing authorities from local taxation under statute providing for low-rent housing or slum clearance projects is valid, and such provision is not rendered invalid because of the possibility of a foreclosure in which title to the property might be lost, since the status of the property as tax-exempt while in the hands of the authority is not altered by its possible status after disposition by the authorities.—Housing Authority of Los Angeles County v. Dockweiler, 94 P.2d 794, 14 Cal.2d 437.

Under state constitution exempting

Slum clearance

The use of property owned by Federal Public Housing Authority for a low-cost housing slum-clearance project constituted a public use authorized under federal Constitution, although private individuals received direct benefit from the project, and, hence, property was exempt from municipal taxation.—U. S. v. Boyle, D.C.Ohio, 52 F.Supp. 906, affirmed City of Cleveland v. U. S., 65 S.Ct. 280, 323 U.S. 329, 89 L.Ed. 274.

38. Md.—Pittman v. Housing Authority of Baltimore City, supra.

Taxing power not bargained away
Objection against tax exemption of houses built under slum clearance statutes would not be maintainable if project was within municipal powers, since property would be owned by a public agency, formed for exercise of police power; and an objection that city bargains away its taxing power in granting tax exemption in its contract with local authority constructing houses under slum clearance laws is not maintainable, since exemption is of property of public agency for accomplishment of public municipal purposes and expressly provided for by statute.—Matthaei v. Housing Authority of Baltimore City, 9 A.2d 835, 177 Md. 506.

39. Va.—Mumpower v. Housing Authority of City of Bristol, 11 S.E. 2d 732, 176 Va. 426.

Acknowledgment of constitutional right

Provision of agreement between city and housing authority exempting property of authority from taxation does not surrender police power or bind future councils on legislative matters, since provision merely acknowledges legal right of authority under the constitution to such exemption.—Mumpower v. Housing Authority of City of Bristol, supra.

"Excess lands"

Lands acquired by the state for the construction and improvement of state highways and known as "excess lands" in that they were held trolling in determining whether or not it is exempt under such provisions.⁴¹ On the other hand, where the property does not fall within the terms of the exemption provision, it will not be exempt thereunder,⁴² as where devotion to a public purpose is made essential and the property is not devoted to such a purpose.⁴³ Property of the United States awaiting disposition after the United States has ceased its active use for governmental functions has been held exempt from taxation under a state statute exempting property of the United States used for governmental functions, on the theory that disposal of such property is in itself a governmental function,⁴⁴ and the leasing of such property to private persons subject to cancellation in event of sale does not render it subject to municipal taxation.⁴⁵

c. Property Sold to or by Government

Ordinarily land sold to, or otherwise vested in, the government, as for delinquent taxes, is not subject to municipal taxation; but after the government has sold land to a private owner it becomes subject to municipal tax.

Lands sold to, or vested in, the government for delinquent taxes may not be taxed by a municipal corporation while the title thereto is in the government,⁴⁶ unless otherwise provided by law,⁴⁷ or unless title is not actually acquired by the government,⁴⁸ as where the government fails to perfect by the state after the completion of the highway for disposition by the highway commissioner were not subject to municipal taxation, notwithstanding title to the lands was taken in the name of a trustee.—People v. Sparks, 20 N.W.2d 136, 312 Mich. 140.

The word "moneys," in section of state employees' retirement act exempting "moneys" in fund created thereunder from state and municipal taxes, was used comprehensively and synonymously with word "property" and hence includes real estate.—Commonwealth v. Dauphin County, 6 A.2d 870, 335 Pa. 177.

Lands taken by taxing city

Properties which are bid in by city treasurer at a tax sale or against which city holds tax liens are subject to taxation even though annual city taxes are not extended to them, since it is not necessary that property be on tax rolls in order to be subject to taxation; and the governing body of a city could amend charter at any time so as to make annual taxes extendable to properties which were bid in by city treasurer at a tax sale or against which city held tax liens.—L. L. F. Realty Co. v. Fuchs, 75 N.Y.S.2d 356, 273 App.Div. 111.

Removal from tax rolls

City, by removing from tax rolls properties which were bid in by city treasurer at a tax sale or against which city holds tax liens does not exempt properties from taxation but merely withholds charging them with their share of taxes accruing during period tax liens against them are held by it.—L. L. F. Realty Co. v. Fuchs, supra.

48. Mo.—Kansas City v. Tiernan, 202 S.W.2d 20, 356 Mo. 138.

Deed not conferring title

Where city bid in property at city tax sale and city treasurer issued to city a tax deed, but taxes for which sale was made were transferred to back tax records and carried as delinquent taxes, city did not acquire title by such deed and property was not exempt from taxation.—Kansas City v. Tiernan, supra.

Period allowed for redemption

Taxing statutes plainly indicate the legislature did not intend that land purchased by county commissioners for unpaid taxes should be tax exempt during the period allowed for redemption; and the title acquired by county at tax sale is not absolute where the right to redeem is present and such land is not public property within the ordinary, accepted meaning of the term or within statute exempting public

its title after a sale to it,⁴⁹ in which cases the property is taxable provided there is no contractual obligation of the grantor to exempt the land.⁵⁰ Lands under contract of sale by the United States to a purchaser have been held not subject to municipal taxation as long as title thereto remains in the United States,⁵¹ although it has also been held that where the land is occupied and used for private purposes it becomes subject to municipal tax despite retention of title by the United States.⁵² Property sold by the government to a private owner becomes subject to tax after such sale,⁵³ and property held by a private owner pending sale to the government remains subject to municipal tax.⁵⁴

d. Leased Property

Ordinarily a municipal corporation may tax land rented to private persons by the government in so far as the lessee's interest is concerned.

A municipal corporation may tax a lessee of government land with respect to his interest therein,⁵⁵ in the absence of a stipulation in the lease exempting his interest from taxation.⁵⁶ It has been held that a city may tax even the land itself to which it holds title where the lease contains a clause for perpetual renewal and a covenant by the lessee to pay all the public taxes.⁵⁷ Statutes providing that property owned by a municipality and leased for business purposes is taxable to the lessees to the same extent as though they were owners in fee have been construed as contemplating a dominant use of the premises for business purposes in order to render them so taxable.⁵⁸ The fact that the government leases its property to private persons does not preclude exemption where the property constitutes part of a state fund for governmental purposes and the rentals are applied to such purposes.⁵⁹ Where land is exempt from municipal taxation on the date set for assessment, because it is then public property, the fact that it is subsequently leased to a private owner as of the assessment date does not subject it to tax.⁶⁰

Improvements made by the lessee on the land under an agreement that they shall be the property of the lessor have been held not taxable.⁶¹

§ 2016. Bridges and Approaches Thereto

Bridges and their approaches within the corporate limits are taxable by a municipal corporation in the absence of statutory or other provision for exemption.

Unless the constitution or a statute provides otherwise,⁶² a bridge within the corporate limits is subject to municipal taxation⁶³ although it derives no material benefit from the municipal government⁶⁴ and although it is devoted to a public use,⁶⁵ provided it is owned by private interests⁶⁶ and not acquired by eminent domain.⁶⁷ A bridge outside the corporate limits cannot be taxed,⁶⁸ but the portion of the bridge to the thread of a river which it crosses may be taxable where such portion is deemed to be within the municipal limits.⁶⁹ Where a statute confers on a city power to tax the real estate of corporations, except such as is indispensable to the exercise of the corporate rights of public or quasi-public corporations, it has been held that land used as an approach to a bridge is not taxable.⁷⁰ Where, however, the statute exempts the right of way of a street railway company, it has been held that the term "right of way" refers only to such rights of way as the company has in the public streets,⁷¹ and that a bridge is not to be included in the exemption.⁷²

§ 2017. Agricultural and Unplatted Lands

In some jurisdictions municipal taxation of agricultural lands within municipal limits is permitted, irrespective of benefit, while in other jurisdictions benefit is made a prerequisite. Statutes exempting rural or agricultural lands from municipal taxation or favoring such lands with a lower rate have in some instances been held valid and in others invalid.

In some jurisdictions agricultural and unplatted lands within the corporate limits of a municipality are taxable according to their value, the same as other lands, although they receive little or no benefit from such taxation.⁷³ In other jurisdictions, however, agricultural and unplatted land within the boundaries of a municipality cannot be taxed by the municipality where it receives no benefit from the municipal expenditures;⁷⁴ and, conversely, under such view the land is taxable, although used for agricultural purposes, if it falls within the range of municipal benefits.⁷⁵ A benefit accrues to the owner, within the meaning of the rule, where his property is so near the settled and improved parts of the municipality that the corporate authorities cannot open and improve its streets and extend to the residents its usual police regulations and advantages without incidentally benefiting such owner or his property;⁷⁶ and in such case the owner's intention to continue the land in its present unimproved condition does not entitle him to an exemption from the tax.⁷⁷ Land held for future sale as city property is not within the exemption.⁷⁸ The exemption applies only to taxes required for strictly municipal purposes from which the property receives no benefit,⁷⁹ and not to taxes in aid of the construction of a railroad.⁸⁰

In a number of jurisdictions there are, or at times have been, statutes which exempt rural lands from municipal taxation, at least in certain cases, or prescribe for them a rate lower than that imposed on other property in the municipality.⁸¹ Such statutes have, in some instances, been declared unconstitutional, as violative of provisions requiring equality and uniformity of taxation,⁸² but under other constitutions the courts have upheld the power of the legislature to prescribe different rates of taxation for city purposes as between property which is within the range of municipal benefits and that which is not.⁸³ Where the statute fixes a lower rate for rural or suburban portions of a city than for the fully developed portions, the rate to be levied on a particular portion depends on its character as to density of population⁸⁴ and not on its distance from the center of the city,⁸⁵ and, if the statute itself stipulates conditions precedent to the levying of the full city rate on any portion, the existence of such conditions must be proved before the full rate will attach.⁸⁶

The statutes under consideration are not retroactive in operation.⁸⁷ While they have been strictly construed against the right of the city to levy the full rate,⁸⁸ the taxpayer's rights are not to be extended by implication beyond the express limitations of the statute.⁸⁹ An exemption of a particularly described class of property is not extended by implication to property not within the classification,⁹⁰ nor does it apply to land apparently, but not really, within the classification.⁹¹ An exemption from particular taxes named is not extended by implication to other taxes.⁹² So also, in the case of an exemption from all municipal taxes except particular taxes named, the exception is not extended by implication to other taxes.⁹³ A statute authorizing the city to levy a particular tax "on all property within such city" has been construed not to repeal by implication an earlier special statute exempting agricultural lands,⁹⁴ or classifying city property into urban and suburban property subject to different tax rates.⁹⁵

Annexed lands. Under the rule that municipal taxation of agricultural lands is conditioned on benefits received, agricultural and unplatted lands, brought within municipal limits by annexation, are subject to municipal taxation when, and only when, they receive municipal benefits.⁹⁶

§ 2018. Educational, Charitable, and Religious Institutions

- a. In general
- b. Character of institution
- c. Property exempt

a. In General

Under constitutions, statutes, and ordinances so providing, property of charitable, educational, and religious institutions may be exempt from municipal taxation.

Under constitutions, statutes, and ordinances so providing, property of charitable, educational, and religious institutions may be exempt from municipal taxation,⁹⁷ and the power to exempt is not limited to cases where benefit resulting to the public is an exact equivalent of the added burden imposed on other properties in the taxing districts by such exemption.⁹⁸ The mere grant of authority to exempt such institutions from municipal taxation is not mandatory.⁹⁹ Statutes exempting such institutions from general taxation have been held to exempt them from municipal taxation,¹ but there is also authority to the contrary.²

"Charitable purposes." The legal meaning of "charitable purposes," as the phrase is employed in provisions for exemption from municipal taxation, is not limited to free service to the poor, but may include other services beneficial to the general public.³

Where exemption is conferred on charitable, educational, religious, or similar institutions, in order to be entitled to the exemption the organization or institution must be of the kind specified in the exemption law or ordinance.

Where exemption is conferred on charitable, educational, religious, or similar institutions, in order to be entitled to the exemption the organization or institution must be of the kind specified in the exemption law or ordinance.⁴ Even if its purposes of incorporation and by-laws would permit an organization to operate as a public charity, that fact alone will not entitle it to exemption from taxation, but it must in addition show that it is in fact so conducted that in actual operation it constitutes a public charity.⁵ An institution falling within an exempt category is entitled to exemption⁶ even though it may lack some of the attributes ordinarily associated with such institutions.⁷ Under some provisions exemption from municipal taxation is extended to include schools charging tuition as well as those which are free,⁸ and the fact that an institution makes charges incidental to its educational activities will not deprive it of the right to exemption.⁹

Cemeteries. Cemeteries and cemetery associations may be exempt from municipal taxation.¹⁰ Where the statute exempts all burial grounds and Business college operating for profit was not exempt from municipal taxation as a charitable institution.—City of Trenton v. State Board of Tax Appeals, 21 A.2d 644, 127 N.J. Law 105, affirmed City of Trenton v. Rider College, 25 A.2d 630, 128 N.J. Law 320.

College as seminary of learning

A college, empowered to confer degrees, is entitled to exemption from municipal taxation as a seminary of learning as against the contention that the term "seminary" necessarily refers exclusively to a school of preparatory or precollege rank.—Sisters of Mercy v. Town of Hooksett, 42 A.2d 222, 93 N.H. 301.

Inclusion of dancing and swimming in curriculum

Facts that an association taught swimming, dancing, etc., and that fees were paid for such services or that the recipients of such service paid for lodging did not prevent the exemption of the property of the association from taxation, since swimming and dancing are generally taught in schools and have come to be a recognized part of our system of education.—Young Women's Christian Ass'n v. Baumann, 130 S. W.2d 499, 344 Mo. 898.

Normal school conducted by a sisterhood for its novitiates with a high school background, wherein they have normal and religious training and are instructed in domestic sciences and housekeeping, is entitled to exemption from municipal taxation as a seminary of learning.—Sisters of Mercy v. Town of Hooksett, 42 A.2d 222, 93 N.H. 301.

Sanitarium charging fees above cost

A sanitarium for treatment of mental and nervous diseases which charged fees above cost for most of its service, and whose income exceeded expense, was not exempt from taxation by town as an educational institution or as a scientific, literary, or benevolent association, notwithstanding sanitarium was operated by nonstock, nonprofit corporation and that knowledge acquired by treatment was promulgated to the medical profession.—Rogers Memorial Sanitarium v. Town of Summit, 279 N.W. 623, 228 Wis. 507.

Veterans' organization

An organization incorporated, among other things, to maintain harmonious and fraternal relations with veterans of the United States armies, and to promote principles of peace and patriotism, was not organized exclusively for the moral and mental improvement of men, women, and children, or for charitable purposes, within meaning of statute granting exemption from taxation, and hence was not entitled to be exempt from taxation by city on its realty and building.—Jersey City v. Polish Army War Veterans, Post 51, 11 A.2d 136, 18 N.J.Misc. 40.

Wrongful exemption of others

The fact that property belonging to other organizations on parity with plaintiff club was exempted from taxation by municipality did not justify exempting property of plaintiff club from taxation as a religious, charitable, or educational institution, where it was not such, since two wrongs do not make a right and property owners had remedy by mandamus to coerce tax assessors to levy proper assessments against such other property.—University Club v. Lanier, 161 So. 78, 119 Fla. 146.

Religious organization

Land owned by corporation organized for religious, charitable, and educational purposes and operated as retreat for religious training for membership or for teaching was exempt from municipal taxation, notwithstanding active membership was composed of three persons who were in absolute control of corporation and corporation was incorporated under membership law rather than religious corporations law, and was not recognized sect or denominational church, and religious purposes were not open to public.—People ex rel. Outer Court of the Order of the Living Christ v. Miller, supra.

Cafeteria

Fact that an association charged for meals prepared by girls in training for cooking and waitress work did not prevent its exemption from taxation, and the conduct of cafeteria by an association otherwise exempt from taxation did not render it subject to taxation, since the conduct of the cafeteria was incidental to, and a part of, its educational activities.—Young Women's Christian Ass'n v. Baumann, supra.

10. When exemption begins

Although cemetery property becomes exempt from city taxation during the taxable year, the exemption does not commence until the ensuing year and taxes assessed prior thereto are neither diminished nor prorated.—Laureldale Cemetery Ass'n v. Matthews, 47 A.2d 277, 354 Pa. 239.

Use forbidden

all mausoleums, vaults, crypts, or structures intended to hold or contain the bodies of the dead, not used or held for private or corporate profit, the nonprofit status of a cemetery association under such statute entitling it to exemption is not destroyed by the circumstance that its members were former officers of a profit corporation whose entire assets were purchased by the association¹¹ or by the fact that its bondholders were former shareholders of such profit corporation.¹² The profit which will preclude exemption under statutes of this character is a profit arising from use and operation of the property by the cemetery association,¹³ and, in the absence of sale at inflated values,¹⁴ any profit which may have accrued to a predecessor corporation or its shareholders from sale of all assets to the nonprofit association will not deprive the association of its exemption.¹⁵ Reasonable compensation paid for services or labor rendered in connection with the association and the burial grounds will not constitute profit within the meaning of the exemption statute.¹⁶

Hospitals. Under permissive constitutional and statutory provisions, hospitals may be exempt from municipal taxation.¹⁷ Realty used exclusively for hospital purposes may be exempt from municipal taxation even though the hospital furnishes no free service to the poor.¹⁸ Hospitals devoted to the care of the sick and injured which aid in maintaining public health and make contributions to the advancement of medical science are rightly regarded as charitable and benevolent within the meaning of tax laws,¹⁹ and a hospital not conducted for profit which devotes all of its funds exclusively to maintenance of the institution is a public charity entitled to exemption from municipal taxation irrespective of whether patients are required to pay for services rendered.²⁰ Where the legislature, instead of generally exempting the property of hospitals, prescribes the terms on which an exemption as a hospital will be granted, such provision is controlling.²¹

c. Property Exempt

The property which is exempt from municipal taxation as property used for charitable, educational, and religious purposes depends on the provisions of law granting the exemption.

Interest not profit

With respect to exemption from city and other local taxation, nonprofit status of cemetery association was not affected by fact that bonds secured by purchase-money mortgage issued by association called for four per cent interest which approximated annual dividend previously paid by profit cemetery corporation from whom the association's assets were purchased, since bondholders were entitled to a reasonable interest on the debt, and four per cent was not exorbitant, especially in view of a provision against accumulation of interest if not fully earned.—Laureldale Cemetery Ass'n v. Matthews, supra.

17. Noncompliance with health regulations of the municipality in which it is located will not preclude exemption of a mental hospital and its property from municipal taxation where such property is devoted to hospital purposes and the institution in all essential respects complies with the requirements of the exemption statute.—Jewish Mental Health Soc. v. Village of Hastings-on-Hudson, 5 N.Y.S.2d 567, 255 App.Div. 77, affirmed 18 N.E.2d 857, 279 N.Y. 764.

Relation to free work

A city tax exemption is not required to bear any relation to free charitable work rendered, as city officials have no discretionary power to determine whether exemption shall or shall not be granted, but exemption must be determined by law.—People ex rel. Doctors Hospital v. Sexton, supra.

State aid

A hospital for the mentally ill which did not receive state aid was not entitled to tax exemption under general exemption provision applying to charitable corporations, in view of specific provision exempting property of hospital societies receiving state appropriations; and charter provision increasing amount of property which hospital might hold and providing that property should be entitled to tax exemption in accordance with provisions of general statutes meant that property should not be exempt from taxation unless made so by some provision of the general statutes.—*Institute of Living v. Land in excess of one acre

Land in an incorporated city in excess of one acre could not be exempted from taxation under 1875 constitution, although it was used exclusively for religious worship or for purposes purely charitable.—*Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Mo., Ohio and Other States v. likewise, controls as to the ownership,²⁵ and use²⁶ of the property of a charitable, educational, or religious institution essential to entitle it to be exempt from municipal taxation. Under some statutes exempting property of charitable or similar institutions occupied for such charitable or similar purposes, it has been held that the property must be occupied directly for such purpose²⁷ and that exemption will be denied where the property is occupied by the institution for commercial purposes even though the proceeds are devoted to charitable or similar purposes.²⁸ Where, however, the statute does not require realty to be used exclusively for charitable or similar purposes, but does require application of the entire net income to such purposes in order to secure exemption, where the entire net income of realty is devoted to the specified purposes the fact that part of such property is used for commercial purposes will not preclude exemption.²⁹

Outstanding lien does not preclude ownership by institution under tax exemption requirements.—Jersey City v. Trustees of Congregation Anshei Sfard, 26 A.2d 169, 20 N.J.Misc. 212.

Purely formal ownership

(1) An office building owned by a charitable corporation was not exempt from municipal taxes under statute, where transfer to charitable corporation by vendor was scarcely more than a form, and vendor was the actual owner in real interest, and charitable corporation was to receive income from building only if net earnings should exceed limits prescribed by vendor, which would absorb practically all income that might reasonably be anticipated over many years, since, under the statute, property must both belong to, and be used exclusively for, the named purposes to be exempt from taxation.—Odd Fellows Benevolent & Charitable Ass'n v. City of Nashville, 114 S.W.2d 791, 173 Tenn. 55.

(2) The fact that legal title is in the institution claiming exemption will not suffice to support such claim where it appears that the property is occupied and used by a different organization for purposes not within the purview of the statute.—*Cornell University v. Readiness for use

Where building to be used as a home for aged, indigent persons was acquired and remodeled and was ready for use by middle of September, and institution was ready, able and willing to accept inmates at that time, but, none was actually admitted until November, building was actually used for charitable purposes within statute exempting from taxation buildings "actually used" for charitable purposes, as of the assessing date October 1, so as to be exempt from city taxes notwithstanding there was not then resident in building, any object of its charity.—Trenton Ladies Sick Benefit Soc. v. City of Trenton, 17 A.2d 809, 19 N.J.Misc. 176.

Pecuniary profit

A building owned by a holding company and used by four fraternal organizations for their exclusive use for lodge purposes was not disqualified for exemption as "used for pecuniary profit" within the meaning of statutory provisions because of the payment by each of such fraternal organizations of fixed annual sums of money to the holding company for maintaining the building, and the payment of principal and interest by holding company on account of bonds issued for original construction of building did not constitute a "use of property for pecuniary profit."—*Craftsmen's Club of Rahway v. A lot and lodge building belonging to trustees for a fraternal association were exempt from municipal taxes where property was used for purposes for which association was organized, and not more than seventy-five per cent of the floor space was rented, and rents were used for charitable and fraternal purposes.—Rogers v. City of Leesburg, Lake County, 27 So.2d 70, 157 Fla. 784.—State ex rel. Cragor Co. v. Doss, 8 So.2d 15, 150 Fla. 486.

exclusively for religious worship, for schools, or for purposes purely charitable, and statutes providing that such property shall be exempted, the law is satisfied if the uses are either charitable, religious, or educational,³⁰ and the same use may partake of more than one of such purposes.³¹ The fact that others than those for whose benefit a charitable or similar organization holds property derive an indirect benefit therefrom is not fatal to the exemption of such property.³² Statutes providing a state-wide rule of exemption from local taxation for real estate owned and occupied by charitable or similar corporations for the purposes of their incorporation do not, in the absence of constitutional requirement or express statutory provision, limit the exemption to realty used in such manner as to benefit the inhabitants of the municipality in which the real estate is situated.³³

Property owned by school district

Statute conferring power on fourth-class school districts to expend funds to purchase or build a residence for principals, teachers, or janitors and to charge a rental therefor does not alone confer any immunity from taxation, provision therein declaring that property acquired under act shall be held by school district the same as other school property relating to matters of title and conveyancing, not taxation. Ordinarily under the various constitutions, statutes, and ordinances providing for exemptions, property constituting a house of public worship is exempt from municipal taxation,⁵⁴ but the occasional use of property for religious services has been held insufficient to exempt it,⁵⁵ and property not reasonably necessary for occupancy and enjoyment of a church may be denied exemption.⁵⁶ Under some statutes it is necessary, in order for property to be exempt, that the religious corporation own the legal title to the property,⁵⁷ and it has been held that a private corporation is not entitled to claim an exemption of property leased to the congregation of a church and used for religious purposes.⁵⁸

Chapel

A religious and educational corporation's chapel, used for religious services by its community of sisters and novitiates daily and on Sundays by such sisters, convent visitors, students at its educational institutions, and residents of its charitable homes in same city, is house of public worship, exempt from taxation, although not a church in the accepted sense or attended by parish members.—Sisters of Mercy v. Town of Hooksett, supra.

"Public" character

A house of worship is "public" within the meaning of statutes exempting public houses of worship from municipal taxation, where it is not used solely by the members of a religious order owning it and their private guests and is not used at all for the profit of members of the order, and where there is free admission for that indefinite portion of the general public who are the beneficiaries of the educational and charitable institutions conducted by the order.—Sisters of Mercy v. Word "necessary" in statute exempting from city and school taxes all churches with ground thereto annexed necessary for occupancy and enjoyment thereof does not import an absolute necessity and is not so broad as to comprehend that which is merely desirable, and means a reasonable necessity.—First Baptist Church of Pittsburgh v. Light and air

(1) Sufficient ground to afford light and air may be included in the realty of a church entitled to exemption as necessary for the use and enjoyment of the religious edifice.—First Baptist Church of Pittsburgh v. City of Pittsburgh, supra.

City of Philadelphia, 35 A.2d 276, 348 Pa. 252.

Entrance and exit

(1) Sufficient ground for entrance into, and exit from, church is properly included within property entitled to exemption as necessary to its use and enjoyment.—First Baptist Church of Pittsburgh v. City of Pittsburgh, 20 A.2d 209, 341 Pa. 568, 134 A.L.R. 1169.

Pa.—First Baptist Church of Pittsburgh v. City of Pittsburgh, supra.

57. Multiple uses as affecting ownership

A religious corporation using realty for purposes stated in tax exemption statute was the "owner" of the realty within meaning of the statute, so as to be exempt from taxation by city, notwithstanding recital in deed to corporation that the premises were to be used as a house of worship according to the tenets of orthodox Judaism, and as a free school of religion, and as a place of dwelling of the rabbi or sexton thereof.—Jersey City v. Trustees of Congregation Anshei Sfard, 26 A.2d 169, 20 N.J.Misc. 212.

Title in state governing body

Where trustees of church conveyed title of parsonage of church to state governing body for safe-keeping because church was in financial difficulties, and parsonage continued to remain in possession of the pastor of the church, the parsonage was not exempt from taxation by city, since it is necessary under the act that legal title, and not merely equitable title, be in religious corporation whose clergyman occupies the parsonage, for the exemption to apply.—Jersey City v. New Jersey Baptist Convention, 12 A.2d 150, 18 N.J.Misc. 209.

§ 2019. Money, Invested Capital, and Choses in Action

Under permissive statute, moneys, choses in action, and invested capital are taxable by a municipal corporation; but as a general rule a municipality cannot tax securities issued or owned by government.

Moneys and choses in action owned by residents are generally taxable by a municipal corporation,⁵⁹ since they are regarded as "property" within the meaning of that term as used in charter or statutory provisions relating to taxation;⁶⁰ and such items having a situs within the municipality have been held subject to tax although they are owned by foreign corporations.⁶¹ In some jurisdictions, however, it has been held that, in the absence of express statutory authority, moneys and choses in action are not taxable,⁶² and, of course, they are not taxable where the statute in express terms exempts them.⁶³

Capital employed by merchants in a city is taxable under an authority to the city to levy a tax "upon any property" therein,⁶⁴ but may not be taxed as "tangible personal property."⁶⁵ "Cash capital" includes money owing to the taxpayer and drawing interest,⁶⁶ as well as money on hand.⁶⁷

municipality cannot tax its own bonds⁶⁸ or a judgment obtained against itself.⁶⁹ A city cannot tax bonds issued by the state⁷⁰ or mortgages in which the funds of the state have been invested.⁷¹ Stock issued by the United States under the provision of the constitution authorizing congress to borrow money is not subject to municipal taxation.⁷²

§ 2020. Income, Earnings, Receipts, and Sales

In the absence of authority delegated by the legislature, a municipal corporation has no authority to levy an income tax or to tax earnings, receipts, or sales.

In the absence of express or implied authority delegated by the legislature, a municipal corporation has no power to levy an income tax,⁷³ even where, under the terms of a statute providing for the levy, assessment, and collection of an income tax by a state officer or officers, intangible personal property producing the income and otherwise taxable by a municipality is thereafter made exempt.⁷⁴ Authority to impose a gross income tax will not be implied from authority to tax property and levy a poll tax⁷⁵ or from authority to tax property, privileges, and professions capable of being taxed for state purposes.⁷⁶ Under power delegated by the legisla-

Term "tangible personal property," as used in constitutional provision segregating tangible personal property for local taxation, is a restricted or technical term and does not include capital used in business in view of legislative interpretation of the term and practical construction by administrative officials, although capital includes some items of personal property tangible in fact.—City of Roanoke v. James W. Michael's Bakery Corporation, supra.

Trucks, furniture, and fixtures

Delivery trucks, furniture, and fixtures of bakery company constituted capital used in business, and were not tangible personal property, within constitutional provision segregating tangible personal property for local taxation, and therefore such items were not subject to municipal taxation.—City of Roanoke v. Direct tax

Ordinance imposing on power company ten per cent tax on charge made for every sale of electricity in city and prohibiting passing of tax to consumer or consideration thereof in determining rate was a direct tax on gross income, and beyond ture, however, a municipality may be authorized to tax incomes.⁷⁷ The persons⁷⁸ and income⁷⁹ taxable depend on the provisions exacting the tax. Under an ordinance imposing a tax on the salaries, commissions, and other compensation of residents of the municipality, all residents are subject to tax,⁸⁰ and the doctrine of governmental immunity does not apply to municipal corporations so as to exempt the compensation of municipal residents who are employed by governmental agencies.⁸¹ A

Extent of power

The city may tax only such income as is authorized by statute.—Brooklyn Union Gas Co. v. McGoldrick, 59 N.Y.S.2d 243, 270 App. Div. 186, appeal granted 72 N.Y.S.2d 259, 272 App. Div. 873, appeal dismissed 74 N.E.2d 177, 297 N.Y. 469, appeal dismissed 80 N.E.2d 342, 297 N.Y. 936, affirmed 80 N.E.2d 669, 298 N.Y. 536.

Provision for review

Income tax ordinance is not invalid on ground that it contains no provision for hearing, appeal, or judicial review, where ordinance requires receiver of taxes to bring suit for recovery of amount he claims, since, in such suit, taxpayer necessarily has his opportunity for hearing, appeal and judicial review.—Dole v. City of Philadelphia, 11 A.2d 163, 337 Pa. 375, opinion supplemented 11 A.2d 767, 337 Pa. 375.

Repeal

Repeal of statute authorizing a city to impose tax on salaries earned by residents of the city would deprive city of all authority to impose such tax.—Marson v. City of Philadelphia, 21 A.2d 228, 342 Pa. 369.

Franchise tax

A local law imposing a franchise tax, measured by gross income, against utilities was held valid.—New York Rapid Transit Corporation v. City of New York, 58 S.Ct. 721, 803 U.S. 573, 82 L.Ed. 1024, rehearing denied 58 S.Ct. 939, 304 U.S. 588, 82 L.Ed. 1548—*Brooklyn & Queens Transit Corporation v. Utilities

(1) Under laws imposing a tax on the gross income of utilities doing business as such within a municipality, the company must constitute a utility within the meaning of the law in order to be subject to such municipal taxation.—Empire City Subway Co. v. City of New York, 6 N.Y.S.2d 55, 168 Misc. 775.

(2) Where parcel deliveries of parcel delivery company were confined largely to the city commercial zone, and only seven per cent of its total gross income was from out-of-city transportation, and company's competitors who had no out-of-city deliveries were not required to pay a utility tax, company was not a utility subject to the tax under city utility tax law.—United Parcel Service of N. Y. v. Joseph, 70 N.Y.S.2d 22, 272 App. Div. 194, reargument denied 72 N.Y.S.2d 260, 272 App. Div. 874. Affirmed 80 N.E.2d 533, 297 N.Y. 1004.

79. Income derived from federal government

(1) A municipality has the power to tax income of its residents even though derived from the federal government.—City of Philadelphia v. Schaller, 25 A.2d 406, 148 Pa. Super. 276, certiorari denied 63 S.Ct. 43, 317 U.S. 649, 87 L.Ed. 522.

(2) When the disability of the state to tax federal incomes was removed, powers originally granted, broad enough to include all income regardless of source, were sufficient to enable city to tax federal incomes.—Kiker v. City of Philadelphia, 31 A.2d 289, 346 Pa. 624—City of Philadelphia v. Schaller, 25 A.2d 406, 148 Pa. Super. 276, certiorari denied 63 S.Ct. 43, 317 U.S. 649, 87 L.Ed. 522.

Earned income

(1) An ordinance has been construed as imposing a tax on earned income only.—Pennsylvania Co. for Insurance on Lives & Granting Annuities v. City of Philadelphia, 31 A.2d 137, 346 Pa. 406.

(2) Earned income implies some labor, management or supervision in production thereof, not income derived merely from ownership of property.—Pennsylvania Co. for Insurance on Lives & Granting Annuities v. City of Philadelphia, supra.

(3) Voluntary offerings of money and other articles of value received by a priest, in addition to and not in lieu of a regular fixed salary, do not constitute earned income or net profits earned.—Ross v. City of Philadelphia, 25 A.2d 834, 149 Pa. Super. 33.

(4) Regulation promulgated by city's receiver of taxes that marriage fees, baptismal offerings, and other moneys received by clergymen, religious workers, or evangelists, for performance of religious services, or in connection therewith, are considered as income from a profession or activity, the net profits of which are taxable under the terms of the ordinance could not be sustained as embraced within the scope of city's income tax ordinance levying tax on net profits earned on businesses, professions, or other activities, since the regulation exceeds the basic purpose of the ordinance which is the imposition of a tax on earned income alone.—Ross v. City of Philadelphia, supra.

(5) The fact that income is received by one acting in a fiduciary capacity will not deprive it of its quality as earned income.—Pennsylvania Co. for Insurance on Lives & Granting Annuities v. City of Philadelphia, 31 A.2d 137, 346 Pa. 406.

81. Pa.—Marson v. City of Philadelphia, supra.

Absence of competing claims

The doctrine of governmental immunity was not applicable to city ordinance imposing tax on salaries earned by city residents, as applied to commonwealth officers and employees residing in city, since ordinance did not give rise to competing claims between commonwealth and nation.—Marson v. City of Philadelphia, supra.

Refusal to collect at source

Refusal of commonwealth to furnish city with list of commonwealth employees residing in city and to collect at the source, with respect to commonwealth employees residing in city, city tax on salaries earned by city residents, did not render unconstitutional the ordinance providing for such tax, or show that statute authorizing such ordinance was not intended by legislature to give city the power to enact an ordinance subjecting commonwealth employees residing in city to the tax.—Marson v. City of Philadelphia, supra.

municipality may not, however, impose a tax on income received by a nonresident from services performed within a federal area to which the federal government has been granted exclusive jurisdiction⁸² unless congress grants its consent.⁸³

Under an ordinance expressly taxing net profits derived by residents of the municipality from business, profession, or other activity conducted by such residents, a corporate trustee operating real estate as mortgagee or owner to protect the assets of estates committed to its care pending liquidation and sale of assets, is a "resident" within the meaning of the ordinance,⁸⁴ and, where acting as mortgagee in possession, the trustee is taxable as the proprietor of the business within the meaning of the ordinance.⁸⁵ Where such an ordinance undertakes to define the word "business," the ordinance definition is controlling as against other and general definitions of the term,⁸⁶ and a corporate trustee managing realty for trusts committed to its care is engaged in business so as to subject the net profits to tax,⁸⁷ and, under an ordinance definition of "person" as every natural person, copartnership, fiduciary, or association, a corporate trustee is a person subject to tax on income.⁸⁸

Provisions for collection of a municipal income tax at its source through deductions from compensation to be made by an employer have been held valid.⁸⁹

Earnings. A municipality has been denied power to impose a tax on the earnings of nonresidents in respect of their activities within the municipality.⁹⁰

Receipts. Authority to tax receipts will not be implied from a power to tax goods, wares, and merchandise, and all articles of trade and commerce,⁹¹ or from a power to tax auction sales and sales of merchandise,⁹² but authority to tax the gross amount of sales, receipts, or earnings has been held to be conferred on a municipality by a grant of full power to tax inhabitants or those who hold taxable property as shall appear expedient,⁹³ or by a grant of authority to license, tax, and regulate occupations.⁹⁴ A municipal tax on the gross receipts of parking lots is not invalidated as to corporations by imposition of a state tax on

Activity and taxpayer's participation

Where city ordinance, imposing taxes on earned net profits of businesses conducted by city residents, defined "business" as "enterprise" or

"undertaking" "conducted for profit", which words signify activity and participation by taxpayer, city tax receiver's regulation, classifying as taxable enterprises involving employment of labor by trustee or requiring active management and supervisory efforts, was within spirit and letter of ordinance.—Pennsylvania Co. for Insurances on Lives & Granting Annuities v. City of Philadelphia, supra.

Provision of income tax ordinance requiring collection of tax at source from employees working within city does not render ordinance invalid on ground that deduction is equivalent to an attachment of wages prohibited by statute, since statute applies to debts only, and taxes are not debts in ordinary sense of word.—Dole v. City of Philadelphia, supra.

Relief of employee from liability

An income tax ordinance is not invalid on ground that it imposes duty on employer to deduct tax from salaries and wages, but does not relieve employee from liability where employer fails to pay tax to city, since provision holding employee liable on failure of employer to pay tax to city would be interpreted as applying only to cases where employer has neglected to make deductions, or where employer is not subject to jurisdiction of city and cannot be compelled to make deductions.—Dole v. net corporate income, since the two taxes are on different privileges.⁹⁵

Sales. A city cannot levy a tax on sales where the statute expressly prohibits it,⁹⁶ nor can it levy a tax on auction sales of particular property which are expressly exempted from the operation of a statute authorizing a tax on auction sales generally.⁹⁷ Power to tax sales is not conferred by a mere grant of authority to levy on real and personal property⁹⁸ or taxable property.⁹⁹ The power to impose a municipal sales tax may be granted by statute,¹ and express power to tax sales in the city includes authority to tax sales of goods stored in a warehouse in the city, and owned by persons domiciled in the city,² even though the contracts of sales are entered into by agents outside the city.³

§ 2021. Corporate Stock and Property

Within certain restrictions, corporate stock and property may be the subjects of municipal taxation.

Shares of stock of foreign corporations have been held taxable in the hands of their owners as personal property,⁴ but the stock of domestic corporations has been held nontaxable where the legislature has put the shares of domestic and foreign corporations in different classes and provided against taxation of the shares of the former.⁵ The capital stock of a corporation has been held not taxable as a corporate asset under a general provision authorizing the taxation of all real and personal property.⁶ In jurisdictions where the capital stock of a corporation is taxable as a corporate asset, a city which has taxed the stock cannot also tax the personal property belonging to the corporation.⁷ Where a municipal tax on the property of a corporation is authorized, a tax for the current year may be levied on the property of a newly organized corporation on the tax day following its organization.⁸ Under statutes taxing mortgages and judgments "owned, held or possessed" by any corporation in its own right or as active trustee, or in any other capacity for the benefit of any other corporation, it has been held that mortgages and judgments held by a trustee as collateral security for a corporate bond issue are not taxable by a municipality.⁹ A constitutional provision for a state tax on the gross earnings of certain corporations in lieu of all other taxes relieves such corporations from liability for municipal taxes.¹⁰ An exemption in favor of a corporation granted by ordinance prior to the constitution prohibiting the exemption of property of corporations does not inure to the benefit of a consolidated corporation, of which the exempted corporation was one of the constituent companies, organized after the adoption of such constitution.¹¹

Situs. The intangible personalty of a corporation has been held to be taxable in the municipality where it has its chief office.¹²

Duty to contribute to municipal support

Where, under the general law, the property of a bank was liable to taxation, the bank was under a natural obligation to contribute its proportionate share to support of municipal government from which it derived benefits.—Central Savings Bank & Trust Co. v. City of Monroe, 194 So. 767, 194 La. 743.

tion, subject to such limitations¹⁴ and exemptions¹⁵ as are imposed or granted by law. An exemption from, or a limitation on, state taxation of banks has been held not applicable to municipal taxes.¹⁶

In some jurisdictions the capital stock of a bank is not taxable as an asset of the bank,¹⁷ or, at least, it is not so taxable before authority is conferred by the legislature¹⁸ or where the charter of the bank exempts its capital stock from taxation except for state purposes.¹⁹ In other jurisdictions bank stock is taxable against the bank,²⁰ unless the bank is not incorporated until after the date fixed by the ordinance for taxing such stock.²¹ Such a tax has been regarded as an ad valorem tax payable by the bank or trust company as agent for its shareholders with right of reimbursement from them.²²

Bank stock in the hands of stockholders is generally taxable,²³ even though the money paid for such stock may have been previously taxed for municipal purposes to the same person as money on hand.²⁴ While bank stock in the hands of stockholders is not taxable if under the terms of the charter the city is without power to tax it,²⁵ or if,

under a statute applicable to the particular stock, it is exempt,²⁶ an exemption of bank stock from taxation for municipal purposes does not exempt it from taxation for school purposes²⁷ or to aid in the building of a railroad.²⁸

Limitations imposed by federal statute on the power of states to tax national banks have been construed not to prevent municipal taxation of the shares of stock of such banks under proper legislative grant from the state.²⁹ Where congress has accorded municipalities the statutory "right" to tax shares of national bank stock standing in the name of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, but in reality owned by the United States, such statutory "right" is a mere bounty or gratuity subject to be withdrawn at any time,³⁰ and congress has the constitutional power to withdraw the privilege to tax such bank stock even where the tax has become a lien by state law before enactment of the amendment withdrawing the privilege.³¹

Capital. When applied to a bank with reference to municipal taxation, the word "capital" includes the entire assets, whether represented by the money paid in for the issuance of the stock, surplus, undivided profits, or other property.³²

§ 2023. — Insurance Companies

An insurance company is entitled to such exemptions from municipal taxation as are accorded by law.

An insurance company is entitled to such exemptions from municipal taxation as are accorded by law.³³ An insurance company has been held not to be taxable as a business corporation,³⁴ and a stock insurance company having no office in a municipality on the assessing date has been held not to be subject to taxation for that tax year on its capital stock and accumulated surplus in such municipality.³⁵

A statutory provision that a fixed license tax on an insurance company shall be in lieu of further assessment throughout the state has been variously construed as applying only to state taxes³⁶ and not to preclude municipal taxation,³⁷ or as relating exclusively to license taxes,³⁸ and not to apply to taxation of the property and capital of insurance companies.³⁹ In any event such a provision has no retroactive effect,⁴⁰ and has been held to be unconstitutional if applied to municipal taxation.⁴¹ Power to tax insurance companies to procure fire apparatus and proper reservoirs does not authorize a levy for the support of the fire department.⁴²

Surplus and reserve funds. The reserve of a life insurance company, aside from the fund required to be invested for the protection of policyholders, is a liability,⁴³ rather than an asset,⁴⁴ of the company, and is not subject to tax;⁴⁵ but where, under statutory requirements, a reserve fund is accumulated and invested in securities such fund is subject to tax.⁴⁶ Under statutes exempting the invested and accumulated funds of an insurance company organized under the laws of the state, excepting life insurance companies, it has been held that a building purchased by a fire insurance company with money accumulated in its business and held as an investment is exempt from taxation.⁴⁷

Shares of stock. Under some statutes or charter provisions, the shares of stock of an insurance company are taxable as property of the company.⁴⁸

Premiums. Annual premiums received by an agent residing in a city have been held not to be subject to taxation as personal property.⁴⁹ On the other hand, it has also been held that such premiums are taxable as property,⁵⁰ and that the taxing of premiums received by agents of foreign insurance companies is not invalid as discriminating against such companies⁵¹ or subject to limitations on license fees.⁵² Under local laws taxing the business of insurance on the basis of receipts from premiums paid, receipts from annuity contracts have been held nontaxable.⁵³ municipal taxation under the provisions of some constitutions, statutes, and ordinances.

Under permissive constitutional, statutory, and ordinance provisions a manufacturing company may be exempt from municipal taxation.⁵⁴ Where the statute authorizing the exemption is merely permissive, the exemption may not be claimed until the city has actually granted it.⁵⁵ Some statutes have been construed to authorize a municipality to exempt all manufacturers by an ordinance general in character, but to preclude the exemption of some and the exclusion of others.⁵⁶ Some authorities have held that a statute exempting manufacturing establishments violates a constitutional requirement of uniformity of taxation.⁵⁷

The purpose of statutes of this character is to attract and retain manufactories through liberal tax policies.⁵⁸ Statutes authorizing exemption of manufacturing establishments have been construed as designed to exempt the property rather than the owner,⁵⁹ and a municipal vote exempting manufacturing establishments acquiring designated property and machinery, capital and personal property, has been held to grant an exemption as broad as the authorizing statute, subject only to limitations designated.⁶⁰

Period of exemption. A manufacturing establishment which accepts an exemption for a shorter period of time than is granted to it by the resolution of the city council is thereafter precluded from claiming the exemption for the full term contained in the resolution.⁶¹ Also, an exemption may be terminated by the breach of a condition subsequent imposed by statute or contract,⁶² but, in the absence of any condition subsequent or breach thereof, a contract exemption, after it has come into existence, continues for the full term provided in the contract.⁶³

Leased property. There is authority granting exemption to property used in manufacturing although it is leased to others by the owner,⁶⁴ but it has also been held that an owner of property leased to a manufacturing establishment cannot lawfully be granted, or enjoy, an exemption in respect of such property.⁶⁵

Property used in distribution. Property used by manufacturing establishments in the distribution, as distinguished from the manufacture, of their products is not exempt from municipal taxation.⁶⁶

City levies exempted irrespective of disposition

Contract with manufacturer

(1) Tax exemptions under statute authorizing exemption of manufacturers by vote of city are governed by law of contract, and the vote is the "offer" which becomes a valid contract when accepted and acted on, provided the conditions are complied with.—Spaulding v. City of Rutland, 3 A.2d 556, 110 Vt. 186.

(2) The statutes empowering cities to exempt manufacturing plants from taxation for municipal purposes for five years are an open offer by the state to induce investments in new properties through exemption for a limited time, and statutes should be construed to carry out in good faith the state's commitment.—Pullman Car & Manufacturing Corporation of Alabama v. Hamilton, 181 So. 244, 236 Ala. 209.

Legislature, in conferring on city privilege of granting manufacturer's exemptions from city taxation on tangible personalty, intended to preserve right of city to prescribe reasonable regulations for execution of the law, such as provision for filing applications for exemption; and an ordinance providing for filing of applications for exemption of manufacturer's tangible personalty from city taxation, and fixing time limit therefor not later than time for revision and correction of tax lists, does not conflict with charter provision that applications shall be made before annual revision and correction of tax lists.—*Eastern Tar Products Corporation v. ing statute exempts shares of stock in the hands of a stockholder.⁶⁷

b. Particular Kinds of Business; Old or New Establishments

The process of manufacturing, in order to entitle a manufacturer to exemption from municipal taxation under some statutes and ordinances, is one resulting in the creation of a new product. Where the exemption is so worded as to be limited to establishments which are new in the municipal corporation, it is not available to going concerns already established there.

The word "manufacture" as used in statutes or ordinances exempting manufacturing companies from municipal taxation escapes exact definition,⁶⁸ and what constitutes a "manufacturing industry" depends largely on the particular facts;⁶⁹ but to "manufacture" may be broadly defined as meaning to work raw or partly wrought materials into forms suitable for use,⁷⁰ and it has been held that if the process does not result in the creation of a new product it is not manufacturing within the meaning of the tax exemption laws.⁷¹ Terms such as "manufacture," "manufacturing establishment," and the like, as employed in municipal tax exemption laws, have been held not to include a laundry,⁷² a milk pasteurizing corporation,⁷³ a tailoring establishment making clothing from samples and measurements on individual orders secured by merchant tailors and sent to it for execution,⁷⁴ a tobacco warehouse from which leaf tobacco is shipped to other cities for manufacture,⁷⁵ or a water filtration plant;⁷⁶ but it has been held that such terms do include an establishment for the making of ice cream on a large scale,⁷⁷ a company reducing steel ship hulls into heavy melting steel,⁷⁸ a maker of shirts,⁷⁹ and, according to some,⁸⁰ although not other,⁸¹ authorities, an establishment for the generation of electricity for sale.

A publisher may or may not be a manufacturer within municipal tax exemption laws in accordance with the character of work done in his establishment,⁸² and the mere fact that he is a publisher does not compel the inference that he is a manufacturer.⁸³ A publisher to the extent that he is a job printer,⁸⁴ or his equipment to the extent that it is used in the business of book and job printing, engraving, electrotyping, and lithographing for the trade,⁸⁵ has been held to be entitled to exemption, but exemption has been denied a newspaper publisher⁸⁶ or a publisher and dealer in books printed and bound by independent contractors.⁸⁷

establishments which are new in the municipal corporation, it is not available to going concerns already established there,⁸⁸ even though they enlarge or expand their businesses⁸⁹ or rebuild factories destroyed by fire,⁹⁰ nor is it available to corporations which take over an old business already located in the city;⁹¹ but it does cover entirely new kinds of business located in the city by the proprietors of an old business already there⁹² or by the purchasers of the old business,⁹³ and the fact that a few articles formerly made are still manufactured by the new proprietors does not bar their right to an exemption, where their business is a new and different manufacturing enterprise.⁹⁴ Under some statutes a municipality may exempt an already existing establishment from tax as a manufacturing concern.⁹⁵ Under the provisions of some statutes,⁹⁶ but not under the provisions of other statutes,⁹⁷ the exemption includes a manufacturing establishment located in territory brought within the municipal limits by annexation.

Designation of particular establishment in grant of exemption. Some statutes authorizing municipalities to grant exemption from taxation to manufacturing establishments require the municipal grant of exemption to specify the particular establishments exempted,⁹⁸ while others do not.⁹⁹

Railroad property within a municipal corporation may be subject to municipal taxation.

(2) Real Property

Under permissive statute lands of a railroad located in a municipal corporation are subject to municipal taxation.

Under statutes providing that all realty within a municipal corporation owned by any railroad company shall be subject to taxation for municipal purposes, the same as other realty in the municipality, all lands located in a municipality and belonging to a railroad are taxable regardless of whether or not they are indispensable to its operation.¹⁴ However, the power, if any, of a municipal corporation to tax real property belonging to a railroad company is limited to that delegated to it by the legislature;¹⁵ and, under the restricted powers conferred by some statutes, a municipality may tax such,¹⁶ and only such,¹⁷ real property of a railroad company within the municipal boundaries as is not used in the operation or ordinary business of the railroad. If a parcel of land is taxed as a whole, and a part of it is used for the operation of the road and is exempt under the statute, the whole tax is void.¹⁸

(3) Rolling Stock

Under some constitutional provisions the legislature has plenary power to determine the situs of railroad rolling stock for purposes of municipal taxation.

Under some constitutional provisions the legislature has plenary power to determine the situs of railroad rolling stock for purposes of municipal taxation;¹⁹ and under particular provisions it has been both affirmed²⁰ and denied²¹ that a municipality has power to tax the rolling stock of a railroad. It is not necessary to the application of an ordinance taxing each streetcar which runs within the municipality that each car shall run every day²² or the whole of any particular day.²³

(4) Capital Stock

The capital stock of a railroad may be subject to municipal taxation in the hands of its holders.

Shares of capital stock in railway companies are subject to municipal taxation, just as other stocks, in the hands of the holders,²⁴ unless the statutes relating to municipal taxation are construed not to give the city power to tax them.²⁵

b. Exemption from Tax

Railroad property may be exempt from municipal taxes under statute or by reason of exemption implied from its devotion to a public purpose.

Exemption of the property of a railroad company from taxation may be effected by statutory or charter provisions,²⁶ but railroad property is not exempt where it does not fall within the scope of the ex-

A corporation which was created to erect and maintain a bridge over a navigable river for railroad purposes, and which did construct and for a considerable period of time maintained and was given the right to operate and did operate the bridge for such purposes, did "construct, maintain and operate a railroad" within the meaning of the tax law so as to subject it to a special franchise assessment by city over whose streets the bridge crossed, notwithstanding the bridge company was a subsidiary wholly controlled by the railroad company, and its employees were paid by such company.—People ex rel. emption granted.²⁷ A statute exempting railroad property from taxes generally has been held to exempt from municipal taxes.²⁸ Under statutes exempting a railroad right of way from municipal taxation, railroad property outside such right of way has been held subject to tax.²⁹ A statute which in express terms makes the municipal taxes and exemptions therefrom follow the law regulating state and county taxation exempts railroad property from municipal taxes where such property is exempt from state and county taxes;³⁰ but where municipal taxation does not follow the state and county scheme statutes exempting railroad property from state and county taxes do not exempt it from municipal taxes.³¹ An exemption of railroad property from taxation for municipal purposes will not be inferred from a payment of license fees on cars that the railroad company runs over the road,³² or from a payment of a bonus or franchise tax which is not based on any property valuation,³³ unless the statute provides that the particular tax authorized shall be in lieu of all other taxes.³⁴

Public purpose and implied exemption. There is authority holding that, in the absence of express statutory provision to the contrary, railroad property may be exempt from municipal taxation as property taken or purchased and held for a public purpose or use,³⁵ and statutes providing that all property is subject to tax unless expressly exempted do not preclude abatement of a municipal tax against property of a railroad under such implied exemption.³⁶ It has also been held that such implied exemption is not removed by other statutory provisions which neither directly nor by necessary implication remove the exemption from taxation claimed by the railroad,³⁷ and that amendments of the corporate charter exempting it from taxes for a specified period do not have the effect of subjecting it to municipal tax at the expiration of such period in violation of the implied exemption.³⁸ The implied exemption does not arise out of contract,³⁹ but exists under the law as long as the public use of the property continues.⁴⁰ The taking of land by one municipality in another to extend rapid transit

§ 2026. — Other Companies

Under permissive constitutional and statutory provisions the property of public utilities or other public service companies may be exempt from municipal taxation.

Under the various constitutional, statutory, and charter provisions, property of public utilities may be subject to municipal taxation,⁴³ and it has been held that a municipality has no inherent power to exempt from taxation the property of a water, gas, or electric light company.⁴⁴ On the other hand, under the different charter or statutory provisions, an exemption may be available as to property appropriated for public purposes;⁴⁵ property required to carry out the corporate purposes of the company and already included in the capital stock on which it pays a state tax;⁴⁶ aqueducts;⁴⁷ or improvements,⁴⁸ as distinguished from land alone.⁴⁹

A statute exempting property of water companies where the city accepts their services without charge does not apply where the city has paid for such services;⁵⁰ and, under a statute or charter providing that the payment of a license on an occupation or business shall exempt from payment of an ad valorem tax thereon, payment of a license tax by a gas company does not exempt from payment of an ad valorem tax on property engaged in the business.⁵¹ A statute exempting property used in "supplying" electricity includes property used in "manufacturing" it.⁵² Under some statutes an exemption may be granted to a water company only at the same time that the franchise itself is granted.⁵³ A statute providing that property and franchises of utility corporations using public places shall be subject to taxation only as provided in the statute does not constitute an exemption in the unqualified sense of the word, but merely a substitution of the tax provided by the statute for the direct municipal tax,⁵⁴ and under such a statute intangible personal property of a utility is not subject to tax.⁵⁵

Property extending through several municipalities. Under the express provisions of some statutes, where a supply of water is secured at a distance from the city supplied, the property is subjected to taxes in the various municipalities in which it is located.⁵⁶ On the other hand, a statute exempting from taxation generally the property of a company supplying a single municipal district but reaching out into other municipalities for its supply exempts the property from municipal taxes wherever its property is located.⁵⁷

Companies in competition with municipal plant. A municipality building and owning a waterworks system cannot tax a competing waterworks company for the cost of construction and maintenance of the municipal plant, where it appears that the private company has a franchise for the entire municipality and has not defaulted in its contract to furnish an adequate supply of pure and wholesome water;⁵⁸ but, where it appears that there is no contract between the municipality and the private company for the supply of water, the municipality may tax the company for the construction and maintenance of a municipal plant,⁵⁹ even though the municipality has applied to the state water commission for permission to purchase the company's plant and has failed to purchase after such permission

Public policy. There is authority to the effect that the property essential to the exercise of its corporate franchises by a public or quasi-public corporation is not subject to municipal tax in the absence of legislative authority for the imposition of such taxes,⁶¹ and the fact that the state confers power of eminent domain on a corporation is official recognition of its status as a quasi-public corporation whose property essential to administration of the trust is entitled to exemption from all taxation except that imposed directly by the sovereign.⁶² The only corporations whose property is entitled to exemption under this doctrine, however, are those whose business is so important to the public welfare that it may justly be considered as being in the nature of a public duty with performance of which the sovereign will not permit any local subdivision of government to interfere by taxation.⁶³ The question whether a corporation is quasi-public within the meaning of the doctrine under discussion is for the court to determine on the facts of each case,⁶⁴ and a corporation is not necessarily a quasi-public corporation entitled to exemption under the doctrine because it is a common carrier⁶⁵ or because it possesses a certificate of public convenience.⁶⁶ Where the corporation does not fall within the class contemplated by such doctrine it is not exempt from taxation thereunder,⁶⁷ and the fact that it may lease

§ 2027. Vessels

Vessels having their situs within a municipal corporation may be subject to municipal taxation.

Vessels may be the subject of municipal taxation.⁷⁰ The situs of a vessel for purposes of municipal taxation may be the place where it is docked or stored,⁷¹ the place of registration and port from and to which it regularly departs and returns,⁷² unless it has acquired an actual and permanent situs outside the city where it is enrolled and registered⁷³ or unless a statute expressly provides that the vessel shall be taxable in the city where the owner resides, and the owner resides elsewhere.⁷⁴ A coasting vessel registered under the federal statutes is taxable where it is being regularly used,⁷⁵ although the owner is a resident of another state where he is assessed therefor.⁷⁶ A municipality may not levy a tax on vessels passing a certain bridge,⁷⁷ or only temporarily within its limits,⁷⁸ and power to tax property within the city limits does not authorize the taxing of ships outside the limits.⁷⁹

Ships of a foreign country sailing between it and a United States port have no situs within such port for purposes of municipal taxation.⁸⁰

§ 2028. Buildings

Buildings may be subject to municipal taxation separately from the land on which they are situated, or may be exempted where still in course of construction on the assessment date.

While, under a properly worded ordinance, buildings may be liable to taxation separately and apart from the land upon which they stand,⁸¹ some ordinances are construed not to make them so liable,⁸² except where they stand on leased land exempt from taxation.⁸³

A statute allowing cities to exempt new buildings completed after a specified date or commenced before another specified date is an enabling statute⁸⁴ and requires action by the city before the taxpayer is entitled to the exemption.⁸⁵ An ordinance passed by the city under the authority of such a statute is construed not to grant any exemption from taxes already fixed for the current year.⁸⁶

construction of the building was commenced, where the building is not finished and ready for occupancy before the close of the tax year,⁸⁷ but a substantial commencement of construction before the preceding assessment date will preclude exemption of the building even though it is not ready for occupancy by the following assessment date.⁸⁸ The commencement of construction within the meaning of the charter or statute is the act of bringing together and uniting the materials which enter into the construction,⁸⁹ and not the beginning of excavation or preparing the land for the buildings.⁹⁰ The building must be both finished and ready for occupancy in order to make it taxable for the year in which construction was commenced.⁹¹ Where the statute authorizes a municipality to grant exemption from local taxation on certain buildings provided excavation for construction thereof is begun before a specified date and completed within a specified period, a claim for exemption will be denied if it appears that excavation was not commenced in

Particular persons and property have been held to be subject to, or to be exempt from, municipal taxation.

Under the rules discussed supra §§ 2000-2005, particular persons or property other than those discussed supra §§ 2015-2028, have been held to be subject,⁹³ or not to be subject,⁹⁴ to municipal taxation. Accordingly, under the various constitutions, statutes, charters, and ordinances, abstract cards,⁹⁵ lands below high-water mark of tidal waters,⁹⁶ and projection equipment of a motion picture theatre⁹⁷ have been held to be subject to municipal taxation. On the other hand, coal,⁹⁸ documents,⁹⁹ investment trust certificates,¹ lands below high-water mark of tidal waters,² and submerged land³ have been held not to be taxable under particular provisions.

Particular persons or property have been held to be exempt⁴ or not exempt⁵ from municipal taxation.

exemption provision in payment of such prior indebtedness,¹⁸ but homesteads are not taxable in payment of new indebtedness incurred subsequent to adoption of the exemption provision.¹⁹ Under some provisions homesteads are exempt from municipal taxation,²⁰ and continuous physical presence of the owner is not requisite to constitute a homestead for tax exemption purposes.²¹ Where property has acquired a homestead status, the mere transfer of its ownership does not of itself alter such status so as to destroy the tax exemption of the property,²² which may remain as much a tax-free homestead in the hands of its new owner as in the hands of the old,²³ and no action on the part of the old owner after he has parted with title can affect the homestead status of the property for municipal tax purposes.²⁴

Marsh and meadow lands. The purpose of statutes providing that all marsh and meadow lands within the limits of a municipality which are protected from overflow by the tides by banks at the expense of the owners, whereon no houses or other buildings are constructed, shall be exempt from all taxes for municipal purposes, is to encourage the reclamation and subsequent improvement of marsh and meadow lands within the municipality.²⁵ Land taxable before enactment of such a statute becomes exempt thereafter.²⁶ Where land is exempt under such statutes prior to a fill, it retains such exemption until the physical aspects of the land are so changed as to deprive it of the character of marsh or meadow land.²⁷ Marsh land, within the meaning of such statutes, is soft, wet land commonly covered in whole or in part by water,²⁸ and, where land is filled in to an extent raising its elevation to that of the protecting bank, it ceases to be entitled to exemption as marsh land.²⁹ Under provisions exempting for a limited time all marsh or meadow land which has subsequently become high and fast land by being raised above high water, following filling operations by the owner, the elevation of a bank constructed to protect marsh land fixes the elevation beyond which the owner may not contend that the land need be filled in order to bring it above high water,³⁰ and an owner who fills the land so as to raise it still higher than such bank creates no new and additional exemption.³¹ The term "above high water," as used in such statutory provisions, means above a tide which might reasonably be expected to recur with some degree of frequency,³² and will not be construed to mean beyond any unforeseeable or unpredictable tide,³³ nor, it has been held, does the phrase mean above the average or ordinary high tide,³⁴ and whether or not in any particular case land has been raised above high water will depend on all the facts involved.³⁵ The provision of the statute requiring the filling or raising of the land to be at the expense of the owner in order to secure tax exemption means merely that the work shall not be done at public expense,³⁶ and for purposes of tax exemption it makes no difference whether the work is done at the expense of the owner himself or at that of some other private person.³⁷ Such statutes do not contemplate that land lying below tide level, but which is in the midst of high and fast land and therefore not subject to overflow, shall be exempt.³⁸

3. LEVY AND ASSESSMENT

a. Levy

Power to tax implies the power to levy, and, in the absence of statutory requirements, the municipal officers may adopt any reasonable method in making a levy; but to the extent that the method of levy is controlled by statutory or charter provisions, there should be at least a substantial compliance with such provisions.

The power to tax, as discussed supra §§ 1978-1999, implies a power to levy,³⁹ although the word "levy" is not used in the constitutional or statutory provision giving the municipal authorities the power to assess and collect taxes;⁴⁰ and, in the absence of statutory provisions prescribing the method of levy, the grant of power to levy carries with it the authority to adopt any reasonable method to make the power effectual.⁴¹ Municipal officers, however, in levying a tax must proceed strictly in accordance with the authority given by law,⁴² and must comply, at least substantially, with statutory and charter provisions as to the making of the levy,⁴³ such as with respect to the territory or boundaries within which property may be levied on.⁴⁴ If a tax is void for failure to comply with the statutory requirements, a proper levy may be made subsequently.⁴⁵ A statute requiring a levy by the excise board to be certified to the officer required to make up the tax rolls is merely directory.⁴⁶

§ 2031. Conformity to State and County Tax Systems

In the absence of a constitutional or statutory requirement, a municipal system of taxation need not conform to that of the state as to the manner of imposition; but a local departure from the general policy of the state in imposing taxes will not be justified unless expressly authorized.

Except where it is required by constitutional or statutory provisions,⁴⁷ it is not essential that the system of taxation in a municipal corporation be made to conform exactly to that of the state as to the manner of imposition,⁴⁸ but a local departure from the general policy of the state in imposing taxes will not be justified unless expressly authorized,⁴⁹ and, in the absence of express authorization or directions, a municipal tax may be levied according to the general tax law of the state,⁵⁰ or,

§ 2032. General Laws or Special Charters

Where authority to levy municipal taxes may be granted or exercised under general laws only, such a general law prevails over a city charter; but, where a method of levy different from that prescribed by general law is authorized by the legislature, the method provided by special law or charter will prevail over that prescribed by general law.

Under constitutional provisions requiring authority to levy municipal taxes to be granted by, or exercised under, general laws only, a general law prevails over a city charter.⁵² However, in the absence of a constitutional restriction, the legislature may authorize taxes within a city to be levied in a mode different from that prescribed by the general laws of the state,⁵³ and, in such case, the method provided by special law or charter will prevail over that prescribed by a general law.⁵⁴ While a later general law will prevail over special charter or statutory provisions in the absence of a provision clearly indicating a legislative intent to the contrary,⁵⁵ the charter provisions will control, notwithstanding the later law, where it is clearly established that the legislature intended that they should.⁵⁶ Statutes providing that the method of levying and collecting taxes offered by the general law may be adopted by a two-thirds vote of the city council have been construed as requiring an adoption by ordinance only in the case of cities which have previously adopted some other method.⁵⁷

§ 2033. Who May Exercise Power to Levy

The power of a municipal corporation to levy a tax may be exercised only by certain designated officials, and may not be redelegated to any other officer, board, or body.

The matter of levying municipal taxes is a matter of municipal prerogative and concern,⁵⁸ and generally may be exercised only by certain designated officials,⁵⁹ and it may not be redelegated to any other officer, board, or body.⁶⁰

Common council. The municipal function of taxation generally belongs to the common council.⁶¹ Power vested in commissioners to approve or reject any part of a tax levy includes authority to veto,⁶² but not to modify,⁶³ the levy, the latter being a function of the common council.⁶⁴

Review. A county or state board may be designated as a reviewing tribunal of a municipality's levy of a tax;⁶⁵ but a municipality's exercise of its discretion in making a levy is not subject to review by such a board, as long as the municipality acts within constitutional and statutory limitations.⁶⁶

§ 2034. Time to Levy and Period Covered Thereby

The time for making a levy of municipal taxes, and the period covered by the levy, ordinarily are governed by statutory or charter provisions, and there should be a substantial compliance with such provisions in order to make a valid levy.

The time for making the annual levy ordinarily is fixed by statute or charter provisions,⁶⁷ and, where such provisions, as that the levy shall be made at a certain time of the year, or on or before a certain date, or between certain dates, are regarded as mandatory,⁶⁸ a levy thereunder, in order to be valid, must be made at or within the time prescribed,⁶⁹ and this has also been held to apply to a change in the levy.⁷⁰ On the other hand, some statutory or charter provisions as to the time of levy have been regarded as merely directory,⁷¹ so that the fact that the levy is not made at or within the time prescribed does not make it invalid.⁷² Where the statute is construed as mandatory, a tax duly levied at the statutory time is not invalidated by a later amendment of the original

levy which merely reduces the levy and does not add any new tax;⁷³ and, where an original tax levy ordinance is valid, a subsequent alleged validating ordinance is ineffective to change the date of the levy to the date of the passage of such subsequent ordinance.⁷⁴ A levy is not invalid because it is voted at a meeting adjourned from the statutory date.⁷⁵ If the statute fixes no time for the levy, an ordinance stating the day may be passed at any time⁷⁶ within the year.⁷⁷

Period covered by levy. Ordinarily the levy can be only for the taxes for one year;⁷⁸ and, where the sole power and duty of the municipality are to levy a certain special tax annually for a specific purpose, only one such levy may be made yearly,⁷⁹ and the municipality may not in any year pyramid or cumulate the levies, because the duty to make levies in past years has been refused or neglected;⁸⁰ nor may it reserve from present funds an amount for the paying of a liability which will arise in the next fiscal year.⁸¹ However, in the absence of charter or statutory direction, either the fiscal or

For matured unpaid assessments

The statutory requirement that tax levies for payment of street paving assessments against public property be made annually precludes idea of statutory authority to levy tax for payment of all matured unpaid instalments of such assessments in any one year after maturity of street improvement bonds.—Wilson v. calendar year may be adopted by the council as the year for which the taxes are to be levied;⁸² and, under some circumstances, a levy for a longer period than one year is justifiable,⁸³ as, for example, for the purpose of providing for a few months' interval following a change in the fiscal year,⁸⁴ or for a deficiency in the year just closing, by combining it with the tax for the following year;⁸⁵ and, where an ordinance is passed levying taxes for the current year and succeeding years to retire a bonded indebtedness, an ordinance in succeeding years levying such a tax is not necessary.⁸⁶ Where, under a statute which requires a levy for the next fiscal year, the necessary steps for a levy are not taken until after the commencement of the new fiscal year, the levy need not be made until the following year.⁸⁷ Under some statutes which have been held reasonable,⁸⁸ if a levy for the following fiscal year is not made at or within the time prescribed, the tax rate for the preceding year continues.⁸⁹

Taxes for special purposes. Under some statutes, a levy for a special purpose may be required to be levied on or before the next general tax levy for municipal purposes.⁹⁰ A levy cannot be made to meet contract expenses before the contract is entered into,⁹¹ or to retire bonds before they have been sold,⁹² or to pay for land sought to be condemned in advance of a determination of the necessity for the proposed improvement;⁹³ but taxes to meet the payment of outstanding bonds may be levied in advance of the time when such obligations fall due,⁹⁴ or after the passage of an annual appropriation ordinance to pay bonds authorized by subsequent ordinances.⁹⁵ Under some statutes, where the date of maturity of municipal bonds is prior to June fifteenth of the fiscal year, the number of tax levies for a sinking fund for such bonds should be one less than the number of fiscal years intervening between the date of the issuance and the maturity of the bonds,⁹⁶ but, where the date of maturity is on or after June fifteenth, the number of levies should be the number of fiscal years intervening between the issuance and the maturity of the bonds.⁹⁷

§ 2035. Conditions Precedent

- a. In general
- b. Appropriations, estimates, or budgets
- c. Determination of rate or amount

a. In General

Statutory or charter requirements, in the nature of conditions precedent to the levy, must be at least substantially complied with.

As a general rule, a levy of a municipal tax is valid when, and only when, there has been at least a substantial compliance, in all material particulars, with the methods and various steps which are required by statute or charter as conditions precedent to the regularity and validity of the tax,⁹⁸ such as those with respect to the submission of the proposition to, and approval by, popular vote, as discussed supra § 1988, the sanction or petition of a designated number of the taxpayers to be affected by the tax,⁹⁹ or the consent or recommendation of a designated officer, person, or body.¹ However, as has been held, no consent of the parties is required for the imposition or a change of a municipal tax or taxable rate.²

Notice and hearing. Except in so far as it is otherwise provided by statute, notice to the taxpayer is not a condition precedent to the validity of a tax,³ since the law in this respect differs from the law applicable to special assessments.⁴ Notice and a hearing are not necessary, with respect to the levy of general or ad valorem municipal taxes, to pay for a given project,⁵ or to meet delinquencies in assessments for local improvements;⁶ but an ordinance has been held invalid which authorizes a levy of taxes for street improvements, without providing for notice to abutting owners of the time and place of levy.⁷

Levy of state tax. If the amount of a special tax levied by the city is limited to a fraction of the state tax for the same purposes, the levy of the state tax is a condition precedent to the levy of the municipal tax.⁸

b. Appropriations, Estimates, or Budgets

Statutory or charter provisions requiring the making and filing of an appropriation bill, estimate, or budget, as a condition precedent to the levy of taxes for the ensuing year, must be at least substantially complied with.

Under some statutes or charters, it is required that certain municipal officials shall adopt⁹ and publish,¹⁰ or otherwise prepare and file, with designated officers, an appropriation bill, budget, or estimate of the rate or amount of taxes required to be raised for the ensuing year, as a condition precedent to the levy thereof, and it is essential that there shall be a compliance with such requirement in every substantial particular,¹¹ since an illegal or invalid appropriation or budget cannot afford the basis of a valid tax.¹² The statutory or charter requirements must be complied with, with respect to the officers or board by whom the appropriation bill, budget, or estimate is to be prepared, signed, and submitted,¹³ and the official or board with which the estimate or budget is to be filed or submitted,¹⁴ and its action thereon.¹⁵ Substantial compliance must also be had with the requirements of the statute or charter, as to the matters to be contained in the estimate or budget,¹⁶ such as a statement of the purpose or purposes for which the funds are to be expended;¹⁷ and, when made by the city council, as to its approval by the mayor,¹⁸ or as to its being passed over his veto.¹⁹

Under other statutes, however, as where the purpose of the budget is to bring about a uniform specification and classification of revenue and expenditures for accounting purposes,²⁰ the adoption of a budget and an appropriation ordinance in accordance with the budget law is not a condition precedent to the levying of a tax,²¹ except where the fiscal year begins after the time for fixing the tax levy.²² The validity of a tax levy is not affected by a failure to pass an appropriation ordinance prior thereto,²³ and, if the budget contains a defect which shows a noncompliance with the terms of the statute, the levy does not thereby fall with the budget.²⁴ An appropriation bill, estimate, or budget for a particular year is not required for the levy of a tax for a special purpose, made under authority of a special statute authorizing such levy for a period of years,²⁵ for a levy for a sinking fund required by a constitutional provision,²⁶ for a proposed bond issue authorized by an emergency statute enacted after the budget law,²⁷ or for the levy of taxes for the payment of refunding bonds issued under a general refunding statute.²⁸

Where an appropriation is required, it must be an appropriation of a specific²⁹ and definite³⁰ amount, and it must be voted within the limit of time fixed by the statute;³¹ and, where there are several purposes, they should be sufficiently itemized or separately stated to inform the taxpayers of how the funds are to be expended.³² Where the purpose of the levy, in each instance, is for a single object, the appropriation may consist of several items,³³ and it is immaterial that some expense for the object has already been incurred.³⁴ The appropriation may be added to by a subsequent appropriation to provide for items omitted in the original appropriation ordinance, where the items were such as the city council was under legal obligation to provide for, and the subsequent appropriation is made before the time for certifying the annual levy.³⁵ If the improvement for which an appropriation is made for a particular year is not commenced during the year, the appropriation lapses at the end of the year,³⁶ and, if a greater amount is appropriated for the purpose the succeeding year, but the levy specifies that the amount is not to be paid from the money raised by the tax levy, and the current assets which may be appropriated exceed the amount appropriated for the improvement, the sum levied in the preceding year constitutes an asset, and may be reappropriated the succeeding year and does not enter into the computation of the current levy.³⁷

Under some statutes, a report of a board of estimate stating a rate of taxation sufficient to realize the amount of taxes needed must be made before the levy ordinance can be passed;³⁸ and, under other statutes, a levy cannot be made before an estimate of the probable amount of money necessary to be raised has been prepared and placed before the common council,³⁹ or before the assessment roll is completed.⁴⁰

Financial statement and estimated needs. Under some statutes, a financial statement of the true fiscal condition of the municipality at the close of the fiscal year and an itemized statement of the estimated needs of the municipality are required;⁴¹ but the financial statement and the itemized statement of the estimated needs may be published separately,⁴² and the itemized statement of the estimated needs may be made the basis of a valid appropriation and tax levies, although the financial statement is not legally published.⁴³ Such a financial statement may not include receipts or disbursements made after the beginning of a new fiscal year;⁴⁴ but it should show taxes collected and suspended pursuant to a protested levy, as a part of the balance on hand,⁴⁵ and the amount of the protested tax may be deducted.⁴⁶ A statement of the estimated needs should be itemized to show by classes the several amounts necessary for the current expenses of the municipality and of each officer and department thereof,⁴⁷ and the itemization must be such as to permit the excise board, or other proper board or officer to compute therefrom the amount of the appropriation,⁴⁸ and no valid appropriation or levy of rates may be computed from a statement of such needs which is not made in conformity with the statute.⁴⁹ Such a statement and estimate, however, are not essential to a levy of taxes for a sinking fund for a municipal bond issue.⁵⁰

c. Determination of Rate or Amount

- (1) In general
- (2) Limitation and excess in general
- (3) Exercise of discretion

(1) In General

The statutory or charter requirements, with respect to the determination and fixing of the rate or amount of taxes to be levied, must be at least substantially complied with.

In determining and fixing the rate or amount of taxes to be levied, there must be at least a substantial compliance with constitutional, statutory, or charter requirements with respect thereto,⁵¹ such as with respect to the board or officer by whom the rate or amount is to be fixed or determined,⁵² and as to the time⁵³ and manner or mode of determining and fixing such rate or amount,⁵⁴ and as to a review of the rate.⁵⁵

In making an estimate or preparing a budget as a basis for a general levy, consideration should be given to all the anticipated expenditures for the ensuing year,⁵⁶ and, although, in the absence of any constitutional or statutory requirement therefor, a municipality in fixing the tax rate is not required to take into account cash on hand and incoming revenue, as a deduction from such expenditures,⁵⁷ ordinarily all anticipated income and revenue from every known material source, other than the ad valorem taxation, which would be on hand at the beginning of the succeeding year, and which are subject to appropriation for the purpose of the levy, should be taken into consideration and accounted for as a deduction in determining the amount to be levied,⁵⁸ and a tax should be levied for an amount necessary to pay municipal expenses as appropriated

Approval of anticipated revenue

Under some statutes, moneys received by city from sources reasonably capable of anticipation in excess of amount received in cash from same sources during preceding fiscal year or from other than regular sources may be included in its current annual budget as anticipated for, above the amount received from such miscellaneous sources.⁵⁹

Within this rule consideration should be given to the amount of miscellaneous receipts from other sources which, judging from past experience, will probably be received,⁶⁰ municipal taxes in process of collection,⁶¹ the estimated return from the new tax levies,⁶² and the amount which has been illegally transferred from the fund available for the purpose for which the levy is being made.⁶³ However, in determining the tax rate or amount for a general fund, estimated receipts from a special fund or tax and a balance on hand therefrom may not be considered,⁶⁴ unless such special fund and its purpose are included in the purpose of the general fund;⁶⁵ nor need consideration be given to unanticipated income or revenue from sources from which there is no reasonable probability of receiving revenue,⁶⁶ or to revenue which is not available to pay municipal expenses.⁶⁷

Surplus. Although the policy of the law has been declared to be that no taxing body should be permitted to accumulate unnecessary surpluses from taxes collected, but should confine its levies to the amounts actually needed to be determined annually,⁶⁸ in determining the rate or amount of taxation for the fiscal year consideration should be given to any surplus of available funds on hand at the close of the preceding fiscal year,⁶⁹ less an amount sufficient to liquidate all valid unsettled contracts or claims made during the present fiscal year;⁷⁰ and, where there is an ample surplus and an estimated income from miscellaneous sources to satisfy the approved needs of the city's general fund, a tax levy is not necessary,⁷¹ and if made, is invalid.⁷² However, in the absence of a constitutional or statutory provision requiring the municipality to spend all its tax funds during the year for which they are collected, as long as the funds are ultimately utilized for a municipal purpose, the city is free to acquire by taxation more funds than are necessary for the expenditures of any given year, and thereby to accumulate a surplus available for municipal expenditures for purposes of tax re-revenue only with local government commissioner's approval at instance of local governing body—City Affairs Committee of Jersey City v. Division of Local Government of State Dept. of Taxation and Finance, 46 A.2d 558, 134 N.J.Law 198, affirmed 48 A.2d 920, 134 N.J.Law 614.

duction in later years,⁷³ even though the city council has adopted a budget setting forth estimated expenditures for the year;⁷⁴ and, accordingly, under some statutes, any surplus on hand at the close of a fiscal year need not be appropriated for the ensuing year's budget in toto,⁷⁵ but may be used in whole or in part or reserved intact for the future,⁷⁶ and the question whether the surplus in its entirety shall be appropriated in the budget for the ensuing year, in reduction of the amount to be raised by taxation, rests in the discretion of the municipal body.⁷⁷

Under some of such statutory provisions, the cash surplus balance must be deducted from the total appropriation as determined prior to the addition of a certain percentage for reserve for delinquent taxes,⁷⁸ and may not be deducted from the amount to be raised by the ad valorem tax levy after the surplus balances and estimated income have been deducted from the total appropriation.⁷⁹ A surplus accumulated from penalties and interest on special street improvement assessments, which the city uses as a revolving fund in temporarily financing street improvements, should not be considered as money on hand, in making a levy for either a general or a sinking fund.⁸⁰ Funds collected in any fiscal year from general fund tax levies for prior years, in excess of the obligations for which the taxes were originally levied, become part of the general fund of the year in which they are collected,⁸¹ unless otherwise specifically provided by statute,⁸² and may form the basis for making supplemental appropriations as any other general fund asset.⁸³

Delinquent taxes. Under some statutes, in estimating the appropriations or budget, uncollected delinquent taxes for preceding years should be considered,⁸⁴ as far as they may be expected to be collected promptly and with a reasonable degree of certainty,⁸⁵ by making a reasonable allowance for the nonpayment of such taxes;⁸⁶ or, under other statutes, the average proportion of delinquent tax collections for a designated number of preceding years may be used as a standard to measure the estimated receipts from delinquent taxes for the ensuing year.⁸⁷ However, as has been held, such uncollected and unincumbered taxes for prior years may not be included in the term "surplus balance," on hand at the close of the preceding fiscal year;⁸⁸ and, in the absence of statute, it is not necessary to give value to uncollected taxes for a preceding year, merely because of the existence of such taxes on the books.⁸⁹

Tax to cover loss and cost. In estimating the amount of tax levy necessary to cover loss and cost, as provided for under some statutes, consideration should be given to the previous experience with respect to collections,⁹⁰ to existing economic conditions,⁹¹ and to all other factors affecting the estimated loss and cost of collecting taxes for the fiscal year,⁹² including forfeitures and abatements in the annual appropriation bill.⁹³ Lapsed appropriations, however, may not be considered for this purpose,⁹⁴ as unexpended appropriations must be treated as assets in the budget for such year.⁹⁵

Tax for sinking fund. In computing the rate or amount of a levy for ad valorem taxation for city sinking fund purposes, the amount of the needs of the sinking fund must be determined,⁹⁶ to which may be added a certain per cent for delinquent taxes.⁹⁷ For the purpose of estimating the amount of the needs of the sinking fund, or in other words the amount to be raised, consideration may be given to the estimated income,⁹⁸ the sources of revenue other than the ad valorem tax,⁹⁹ and to an excess balance on hand in the general fund as a part of the sinking fund.¹ However, no deduction may be made for estimated receipts from other sources.² In estimating a tax to pay bonds and interest falling due, a deficit occurring in the preceding year may be included.³ Under a statute authorizing deficit levies where the sinking fund is not sufficient to meet accrual liabilities, the calculation of the minimum amount necessary to reinstate the sinking fund is governed by the problem presented by the detailed condition of the sinking fund in each particular case and may vary at different tax levying periods,⁴ and, where such is the intention of the statute, additional levies of equal amount annually should be provided to replenish a depleted sinking fund to the extent that the indebtedness may be paid when due,⁵ but no greater deficit levy should be made in any one fiscal year than is necessary to provide sufficient cash in the sinking fund to meet obligations when due.⁶

The rate or amount of the tax levied ordinarily must not be in excess of the amount authorized by the budget.

The rate per cent or amount of the tax levied must not be in excess of the amount authorized by the annual budget,⁷ since the budget constitutes an appropriation of the sums therein set forth as appropriations, and an authorization of the amount to be raised by taxation for municipal purposes,⁸ and a levy based on an increase in the total value of ratables, after the determination of the tax rate for the year, is illegal to the extent of the increased amount raised by such taxes.⁹ An excess, however, which is so small that its elimination will not change the rate of taxation will be disregarded.¹⁰ A reduction should be made, under some statutes, in an additional levy for a specific purpose, proportionate to the increase in total valuation of the property in the taxing subdivision by the reassessment,¹¹ and in determining the question whether a levy is for a specific purpose within the statute, all the surrounding circumstances must be closely scrutinized,¹² and an additional levy is not made for a specific purpose merely because it is made for a particular department of the government if it is made for the general purposes of that department.¹³

A levy is excessive to the extent of amounts received and available from other known sources than the ad valorem tax, which are not accounted for in the estimate or budget.¹⁴ If the aggregate estimated receipts from other sources, including uncollected taxes in process of collection, exceed the amount that can be raised by ad valorem taxes within the allocated limit of the levy, the aggregate appropriation must be reduced to such a sum as will leave a final remainder which can be raised from such taxes within the limit of the levy,¹⁵ and the fact that, after final computation, the reduced amount of the appropriation is less than the aggregate amount of cash surplus on hand, plus the estimated income from other sources, does not justify or require the levying board to refuse to make the tax levy which the municipality is entitled to have under its allocation of limit of levy.¹⁶ An appropriation for sundry contingent expenses, as a basis for a tax levy, may not be made in an amount disproportionate to appropriations for other legal purposes.¹⁷

Scaling. Under some statutes, where taxes are so high as to make the total rate in excess of the rate provided by law, a tax for a particular purpose may be subject to scaling,¹⁸ and the amount or rate may be reduced by the proper authorities in order to bring the aggregate amount of the appropriation within the statutory limit,¹⁹ or within the budget requirements;²⁰ or, if too low, it may be raised.²¹ Accordingly it is not necessary that the municipal officers appropriate and levy the exact amount of taxes which can actually be collected for each purpose for which the taxes are levied,²² and a levy is not invalid because the taxpayer is required to compute the amount levied for each purpose specified.²³ However, adding the full specific taxes to the tax for general purposes, and then scaling the aggregate, invalidates the levy to the extent of the excess of the special taxes over what should have been levied on that account.²⁴

The elimination from the city budget of an item of income to be received from a city department is unauthorized and results in an excessive levy, where the city council knew that such department had appropriated in its proposed budget and in its final department budget a sum of money to be paid to the city.—Southern Service Co. v. Los Angeles County, 82 P.2d 397, reheard 97 P.2d 963, 15 Cal.2d 1, appeal dismissed 60 S.Ct. 979, 310 U.S. 610, 84 L.Ed. 1388, rehearing denied 60 S.Ct. 1088, 310 U.S. 658, 84 L.Ed. 1421.

Inclusion of loss and cost fees

(3) Exercise of Discretion

Within certain limitations, the levying officer or board may exercise reasonable discretion in determining what amount or rate of taxation shall be levied.

Subject to the restriction that the statutory or charter requirements be complied with with respect to the manner or mode of determining and fixing the amount or rate of the levy, the levying official or board, provided it acts in good faith,²⁵ and uses sound business judgment to see that the credit of the municipal corporation is not impaired,²⁶ may exercise a reasonable discretion in determining and fixing what amount or rate of taxes shall be levied for any general or special purpose,²⁷ except as to requirements which are mandatory.²⁸ Accordingly where the city council is limited only as to the amount to be raised and not as to rate, it has a discretionary power to fix a rate sufficient to produce the sum required,²⁹ and the exercise of this discretion will be interfered with by the courts only where there is a clear abuse of such discretion,³⁰ even though the levy is in fact somewhat in excess of actual requirements.³¹ Where a rate restriction is placed on the power to tax, the city council has a discretionary power to fix the rate at any point within the prescribed limit.³²

Contingent expenses

(1) The assessment of a relatively small amount for contingent expenses is necessary, but the amount of such levy rests in the sound discretion of taxing body and is not subject to change by county court on objections to levy.—People ex rel. Prindable v. New York Cent. R. Co., 72 N.E.2d 821, 397 Ill. 50.

How much of city's reserve fund shall be appropriated in budget for current year rests in governing body's sound discretion, subject to statutory condition classifying un-anticipated income applicable to general expenditures as surplus revenue not included in anticipated revenues stated in budget.—City Affairs Committee of Jersey City v. Division of Local Government of State Dept. of Taxation and Finance, 46 A.2d 558, 134 N.J.Law 198.

§ 2036. Additional Levies

Ordinarily a municipal corporation may make only one levy a year for the same purpose.

Generally a municipal corporation is authorized to make only one levy a year for the same purpose,³³ and it cannot in the same year make a second levy to cover items which could and should have been included in the general tax levy,³⁴ even though the general levy was for less than the maximum rate allowed by statute or charter,³⁵ and the law, in this respect, cannot be evaded by designating the additional tax by a different name and placing it in a different class.³⁶ An additional tax, however, may and should be levied when and to the extent that it is authorized by statute,³⁷ or wherever it is necessary to discharge a contractual obligation of the city,³⁸ and a statute interfering in any way with the discharge of this obligation is unconstitutional.³⁹

§ 2037. Ordinance or Resolution

Ordinarily a municipal tax must be levied by an ordinance, and not by a mere motion or resolution.

The enactment of an ordinance fixing the rate of assessment is a legislative function,⁴⁰ and ordinarily municipal taxes must be levied by ordinance;⁴¹ and proof of the levy must be made by offering the ordinance in evidence.⁴² A mere motion⁴³ or resolution⁴⁴ by the city council, or its adoption of a report of the finance committee recommending the amount and apportionment of the proposed tax,⁴⁵ ordinarily is not sufficient to authorize or constitute a levy. A levy by resolution may be cured by an ordinance passed within the fiscal year for which the levy was made,⁴⁶ or it may be validated by statute.⁴⁷ However, under some statutes, a resolution, if in the prescribed form, is sufficient;⁴⁸ an ordinance is not necessary where the statute itself operates as a levy of the tax.⁴⁹ Even where an ordinance is required, an amendment or ratification of an already existing tax levy ordinance may be by motion,⁵⁰ unless the statute makes an ordinance a vital formality,⁵¹ and as long as the taxing power is not exhausted, a new ordinance may be passed correcting defects in a prior levy,⁵² or superseding a void levy.⁵³

It has been held that, where the city council was invested with the power and duty of levying the tax, a taxpayer is not entitled to complain that the council performed its duty by a resolution rather than by ordinance as required by statute.⁵⁴ Where a municipal debt is created by an ordinance providing for a yearly levy of a tax to meet annual payments, the ministerial duty of fixing the necessary tax rate each succeeding year may be done by motion.⁵⁵ A levy founded on a void ordinance is also void.⁵⁶

a. In General

An ordinance levying a municipal tax should be adopted with all the formalities of ordinances generally, and should comply with all the charter or statutory requirements relating to tax-levying ordinances.

An ordinance levying a municipal tax should be adopted with substantially all the formalities, solemnities, and characteristics of ordinances generally,⁵⁷ and should comply with all the charter or statutory requirements relating to tax-levying ordinances.⁵⁸ The ordinance must be passed by the council at a meeting held at the regular place;⁵⁹ but, unless there is a mandatory statutory requirement that the ordinance be adopted at a regular meeting,⁶⁰ it may be passed at either a regular or a special meeting.⁶¹ According to the decisions on

Where certain tax levy was required to meet maturities on several bond issues, ordinance correcting erroneous distribution of levy among issues, but not changing total, was sufficient, although not properly adopted, since formal ordinance was not necessary.—Mouton v. the question, a quorum must be present.⁶² A yea and nay vote may be the method required for the passage of the ordinance,⁶³ and, when so required by charter or statute, the vote must be recorded.⁶⁴ In the case of an ordinance levying a special tax, the ordinance must be passed by the number of favorable votes prescribed by the statute for such tax.⁶⁵

Notice and hearing. Under some statutes, notice to taxpayers is not necessary before the adoption of an ordinance levying a municipal tax;⁶⁶ but, under other statutes, notice⁶⁷ and a public hearing⁶⁸ are necessary, at least where the ordinance is passed at a special meeting,⁶⁹ and the giving of notice may be presumed in the absence of any record thereof in the minutes of the meeting.⁷⁰

Signing, approval, or veto by mayor. Under some statutes, the levy must be approved by the mayor⁷¹ or burgess of a borough,⁷² or, in the absence of the mayor, by the acting mayor,⁷³ even though, in his capacity as president of the board of aldermen, he may have already passed on it.⁷⁴ Under other statutes, however, the ordinance becomes effective on submission for approval and failure of the mayor or burgess to return the ordinance to the city council within a specified time;⁷⁵ and, under still other statutes, the mayor has no veto power,⁷⁶ and, where his approval is not required, his failure to sign the ordinance is not fatal.⁷⁷ Where the action of the council in levying taxes is in the nature of a resolution, although clothed in the form of an ordinance, it may have the effect of a valid resolution, although not signed by the presiding officer, in the absence of a statute requiring such a signature.⁷⁸

Record. Taxes levied under an ordinance duly enacted are not invalid because the ordinance has not been recorded.⁷⁹

Repeal. An ordinance repealing a levy for a special purpose and adding it to a levy for general municipal purposes is not invalid as discriminatory against taxpayers who had paid their taxes before the tax ordinance was so amended;⁸⁰ and a tax levy ordinance of a district which has been superseded, and against which levy no anticipation warrants have been issued, may be repealed by the adoption of an ordinance by the superseding district, levying a tax for the same year.⁸¹ However, an ordinance levying a tax for a certain purpose in pursuance of the result of an election cannot be repealed after such purpose has been accomplished.⁸²

b. Publication

Under some statutes or charters, an ordinance levying a municipal tax must be published in a prescribed time and manner in a designated newspaper.

More than once

A tax ordinance is invalid where published not more than once where charter provides that all ordinances shall be published for "three weeks," which means once a week for three weeks in a newspaper published weekly.—Beasley Motor Co. v. Town of Ruston, supra.

Resolution

A provision of an ordinance that a resolution by which the tax shall be levied shall be published for two weeks in the official paper of the city is not merely directory, but must be complied with in order to give the tax any legal existence.—City of Dubuque v. Wooton, 28 Iowa 571.

there is a presumption of publication where the tax bills are properly authenticated;⁸⁵ and, where the statute provides that the ordinance shall take effect from and after its passage, other provisions thereof requiring publication are directory merely,⁸⁶ and a failure to comply therewith does not affect the validity of the ordinance.⁸⁷ Under some statutes, an appropriation ordinance must be published before a levy ordinance is passed, as discussed supra § 2035 b, but a requirement that a levy ordinance be published does not follow as a necessary implication from a statute requiring publication of an appropriation ordinance,⁸⁸ or from a statute requiring publication of notice that an assessment had been made and giving interested parties the right to appear and contest it.⁸⁹

Where a judgment declares a tax ordinance void for want of publication, the ordinance cannot be revived by publication after the judgment is signed;⁹⁰ but the only orderly proceedings after such a final judgment is by an application for a new trial and an appeal if the application is denied.⁹¹

c. Filing Certified Copy

When so required by statute, a certified copy of the tax-levy ordinance must be filed with a designated official, and such filing is essential to authority to extend the tax.

Under some statutes, a certified copy of the tax-levy ordinance must be filed with a designated official,⁹² and it is not a sufficient compliance with such requirement to file the appropriation ordinance,⁹³ or the original tax-levy ordinance.⁹⁴ The certified copy of the tax ordinance contains the data for the city clerk or other proper official in extending the tax,⁹⁵ and it is the only source legally open to him for such purpose,⁹⁶ and, accordingly, its filing is regarded as jurisdictional and essential to authority to extend the tax.⁹⁷ It is not necessary that the certified copy should refer to the statute authorizing the levy,⁹⁸ and an incorrect reference may be rejected as surplusage.⁹⁹

Cure of error or amendment. An error in filing the original tax levy ordinance cannot be cured by the subsequent attachment thereto of a certificate of authentication,¹ nor can it be cured by amendment;² but, if the paper filed with the clerk appears on its face to be a copy, it may be amended in a proper case,³ as for the purpose of adding a complete and proper certificate,⁴ or correcting a mistake in the certified copy.⁵ The character of the paper as a copy for purposes of amendment is not established by the absence of a file mark thereon⁶ by the fact that it was typed through carbon paper instead of through ribbon,⁷ or by the fact that words purporting to show the paper to be a copy are written across its face, where the evidence indicates that the words were written by some unauthorized person.⁸ The failure to file a certified copy of the ordinance may be cured by a statutory provision continuing for the current tax year the levy for the preceding year, where it was for the same purposes and at the same rate as that fixed in the ordinance;⁹ and it has been held that, if the levy is duly and properly made, it is not invalid

§ 2039. — Form and Contents

- a. In general
- b. Statement of purpose
- c. Statement of rate and amount

a. In General

The form and contents of an ordinance or resolution levying a municipal tax must fully comply with the statutory requirements relating thereto, except to the extent that such requirements are merely directory.

Except when, and as to the extent that, statutory requirements may be considered merely directory,¹² requirements as to the form and contents of the ordinance or resolution levying a municipal tax must be fully complied with,¹³ and, where the statutory requirements are met, the ordinance is sufficient,¹⁴ even though it is inartificially drawn;¹⁵ or, as conversely stated, an ordinance levying an annual tax is not invalid, although not according to the prescribed form, unless the charter or governing law makes such formality vital.¹⁶ The ordinance must contain an enacting clause.¹⁷

The contents required may be supplied by reference to another ordinance,¹⁸ and the fact that the ordinance referred to is void will not affect the validity of the levy.¹⁹ The ordinance must state the property in general subject to the tax,²⁰ and a designation in general terms will be sufficient.²¹ On the other hand, it is not necessary to designate the particular manner in which the tax is to be collected,²² and a provision making it payable to a person or board not entitled thereto does not invalidate the levy.²³ A tax levy ordinance is invalid where none of the items of the levy agree with those specified in the appropriation ordinance.²⁴

The ordinance must not delegate the authority to levy,²⁵ but an unlawful delegation of authority to levy a part of the total amount may be treated as surplusage, not invalidating the ordinance.²⁶ Ministerial details connected with the levy may be assigned or left to city officials other than the council.²⁷ An ordinance which attempts to bind the municipality to levy an annual tax for a certain purpose for all time to come is void.²⁸

b. Statement of Purpose

- (1) In general
- (2) Itemization and classification

(1) In General

An ordinance levying a municipal tax should, either directly or by reference to another ordinance, state the purpose of the tax.

An ordinance levying a municipal tax must at least substantially comply with the constitutional, statutory, or charter requirements with respect to its specifying the purpose of the tax levy.²⁹ It

Purpose mentioned in statute

The ordinance need only set out therein the purpose mentioned in the statute, without specifically pointing out the tax from which it should be paid, and such ordinance is sufficient authority for county clerk to extend the tax.—People ex rel. Toman v. New York Central Lines, 44 N.E.2d 549, 380 Ill. 581.

must either itself state the purpose of the tax,³⁰ or refer to another ordinance, such as an appropriation ordinance, which does specify such purpose.³¹ While an ordinance omitting the purpose may be upheld as levying a tax for general purposes, under a statute requiring a tax for general purposes, interest, and sinking fund,³² the levy of a tax for general purposes cannot be upheld as a compliance with a statute requiring the levy of a special tax.³³ Where the statement of the purpose involves a description of certain obligations which the tax is designed to meet, a misdescription will invalidate the levy.³⁴ A failure to state the purpose of the levy may be cured by later adopting another ordinance making a new levy,³⁵ but not by amending the old ordinance.³⁶

(2) Itemization and Classification

Under some statutes, an ordinance levying a municipal tax should state specifically the several purposes for which the levy is made.

In the absence of any constitutional or statutory provision requiring it, there is no necessity for a levy to be made of separate items for different purposes.³⁷ Where, however, the statute provides or designates separately the different purposes for which the taxes may be levied, particularly where it requires an itemized statement thereof, the ordinance must specify in detail,³⁸ and with certainty,³⁹

A constitutional provision, requiring that ordinance specify purpose of tax and that tax be devoted to no other purpose, is self-executing.—City of Frankfort v. Fuss, 29 S.W.2d 603, 235 Ky. 143.

Amendment held error

It has been held error to permit village to amend tax levy to show that items for payment of interest on general indebtedness and redemption of principal indebtedness were for bonded indebtedness, in absence of showing that original certificate of levy referred to bonded indebtedness, or that certified copy of bond issue ordinance was on file with county clerk.—People ex rel. McDonough v. Chicago, M., St. P. & P. R. Co., 188 N.E. 821, 354 Ill. 630.

Itemizations held indefinite

(1) For "cemetery fund" and "park fund" because of uncertainty, since it could not be determined whether the fund in either case was to be used for buying land or for improvements, etc.—People ex rel. Wilson v. Wabash Ry. Co., 14 N.E.2d 650, 368 Ill. 497.

(2) "Public grounds and buildings," as being uncertain whether amount levied was to be used in erection or repair of buildings, acquisition of public grounds, or for maintenance.—People ex rel. McClusky v. Alton & E. R. Co., 194 N.E. 573, 359 Ill. 440.

(3) For "water fund, $5000," and "light fund, $4000," as being impossible to determine whether amount levied was to be expended for water and light, respectively, or for sal-

the several purposes for which the levy is made, regardless of the smallness of the municipality.⁴⁰

The object of such a requirement is to furnish a taxpayer with information as to the purposes for which the taxes are levied, in order to enable him to compel the application of public funds to the purposes for which they were appropriated, and prevent their application to other purposes, and to prevent the raising of greater amounts than are necessary for legitimate and corporate purposes,⁴¹ and accordingly the right of a taxpayer to have the purposes of a levy separately stated is a substantial right of which he may not be deprived,⁴² as under the guise of the possible needs of the municipality.⁴³ These itemization requirements, however, must be accorded a practical and common sense construction,⁴⁴ and, while a designation of the purposes of the levy in general terms is not sufficient, where the funds may be expended for essentially different purposes,⁴⁵ it is not required that the ordinance shall specify every item which the municipality may pay out on an appropriation,⁴⁶ and the designation of a single general purpose is sufficient to include every appropriate expenditure or purpose embraced within, or required for, such general purpose, although there may be a number of items in the appropriation or levy,⁴⁷ particularly where it is difficult to determine in advance the precise amount of the several items,⁴⁸ as where the general term is used to cover a number of small expenses or appropriate items which cannot be classified,⁴⁹ and which may properly be described as contingent, miscellaneous, or incidental ex-aries, equipment, realty, repairs, or other expenses.—People ex rel. Frick v. Chicago & E. I. Ry. Co., 198 N.E. 212, 361 Ill. 470.

"Operating" or "capital" expense

"Operating expense" as regards itemization requirements, would include clerical salaries, travel, and purchase of supplies and printing, but purchase of typewriters, desks, chairs, or other equipment would constitute "capital expenditures" and not operating expense.—People ex rel. penses,⁵⁰ and which are ordinarily found in a municipal tax levy.⁵¹ A levy for miscellaneous purposes, not separately stated, constituting a substantial proportion of the entire levy is invalid.⁵²

It has been held that taxes for different purposes, not within a single general object, cannot be consolidated under a single classification;⁵³ that special taxes for different purposes cannot be combined and a tax for the entire sum levied, where the special taxes are authorized by different statutes;⁵⁴ and that an ordinance levying a tax for a single purpose is not invalidated by a failure to specify in detail how the money raised is to be expended.⁵⁵

c. Statement of Rate and Amount

An ordinance levying a municipal tax must ordinarily state the rate or amount of the tax or both.

An ordinance levying a municipal tax must ordinarily state the rate or amount of the tax or both,⁵⁶ and the statement of a rate recommended by the board of estimate in its report to the city council cannot be accepted as a valid substitute for, or cure of, an improper statement in the ordinance.⁵⁷ Under a statute limiting the tax rate only, an ordinance stating the rate but not the amount is valid;⁵⁸ but, under a statute providing for the fixing of the amount by the city council and the rate by a specified officer, an ordinance fixing the rate but not the amount is invalid.⁵⁹

Under some statutes the amount of city taxes levied for each of several purposes should be separately stated,⁶⁰ and the amounts needed for several purposes cannot be lumped and a single tax levied for the aggregate amount;⁶¹ but the statute should be given a reasonable construction,⁶² and a gross sum may be levied for a single purpose without stating the amount for each particular item embraced within that purpose.⁶³ A bond ordinance which does not fix specific rates of taxation for succeeding years is not self-executing, as regards taxes.⁶⁴

General and special purposes

Levy ordinance declaring that total amount of appropriation for all corporate purposes was a sum in excess of the levy for general corporate purposes was not objectionable where the amount in excess of the levy for general corporate purposes was to be raised by additional taxes at rates over and above the general corporate rate.—People ex rel. Toman v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 37 N.E.2d 169, 377 Ill. 547.

Reference to appropriations. Under some statutes, a levy ordinance should specify in detail the purposes for which the appropriations are made and the amount appropriated for each purpose.⁶⁵ A levy ordinance which states the amounts appropriated for the separate purposes of the municipal government, and then stipulates that certain deductions are to be made from the aggregate and levies a tax for the balance in a lump sum, is valid,⁶⁶ inasmuch as it can be determined by calculation from the figures set forth in the ordinance how much of the tax is levied for each purpose.⁶⁷

General rules apply to the construction of an ordinance, resolution, or motion levying a municipal tax.

An ordinance, resolution, or motion levying a municipal tax should be construed in accordance with the basic principles of construction applicable to taxing statutes.⁶⁸ It should be construed so as to give effect to the intent of the city council or other body enacting or adopting it,⁶⁹ and, if possible, so as to sustain the levy.⁷⁰ A tax levy ordinance ordinarily should be strictly construed,⁷¹ and while it should be construed most strongly against the municipality and in favor of a taxpayer,⁷² it should also be given a practical and common sense construction,⁷³ and a uniform construction, as it affects every person within its range,⁷⁴ and its provisions should not be extended by implication beyond the clear import of the language used.⁷⁵ Different sections of such an ordinance must be viewed in the light of their cumulative significance and combined result in determining whether or not the tax is authorized.⁷⁶

§ 2041. Operation and Effect of Levy

- a. In general
- b. Validity
- c. Judicial control
- d. On dissolution of municipality

a. In General

The date when a levy ordinance goes into effect is generally determined by statute or charter.

The date when a levy ordinance goes into effect is generally determined by statute or charter.⁷⁷ Where the charter provides that tax-levy ordinances shall take effect on their passage, the ordinance will take effect immediately,⁷⁸ and its operation will not be postponed until after the taking of a referendum where the referendum provision in the statute requires that a petition therefor shall be filed before the date when the ordinance shall take effect.⁷⁹

b. Validity

- (1) In general
- (2) Presumptions and burden of proof

(1) In General

Mere errors or informalities which do not affect the substantial justice of the tax ordinarily do not invalidate a municipal tax levy; but the levy may be avoided on the protest or objection of a taxpayer because of omissions or defects which result in injustice to him.

A tax levy is ultra vires and void, if it is made by a municipal corporation when power to do so has not been granted,⁸⁰ and is invalid if it makes an illegal imposition of taxes on property within the municipality;⁸¹ but mere errors or informalities in the levy not affecting the substantial justice of the tax itself do not ordinarily invalidate the levy,⁸² where no appeal is taken therefrom, as authorized by statute,⁸³ and particularly where the statute provides that informalities which do not prejudice the substantial rights of the taxpayers shall not vitiate the tax.⁸⁴ Where there is a law authorizing a levy, the levy is valid, even though it was intended to be made under a different law.⁸⁵ While a tax levy is invalidated by a failure to comply with a mandatory provision of the statute in some vital matter,⁸⁶ directory provisions in a statute need not be strictly followed.⁸⁷

A levy is not rendered invalid by a failure of the city officials to comply with a tax budget statute, dealing with the expenditure of public funds;⁸⁸

and under a charter provision restricting the annual expenses of the city to the amount of its income, the levy itself is not invalidated by the fact that expenditures for the current year exceed the amount of the levy,⁸⁹ regardless of whether the charter provision is construed to be mandatory or directory.⁹⁰ A levy also is not rendered invalid by the fact that the levy ordinance makes the levy delinquent at a period later than that provided by the statute;⁹¹ nor is it invalid because it contains illegal as well as legal items, where the illegal items may be deleted without affecting the computation of the legal items.⁹²

Protests or objections. The levy may be avoided on the protest or objection of a taxpayer, because of material omissions or defects in the levy which result in injustice or injury to him,⁹³ as where a levy made for the express purpose of creating a surplus or to raise funds for another and different purpose is not a legal levy.⁹⁴ A taxpayer's duty to present his objections at the preliminary budget hearing does not mean that he must protest alleged errors or irregularities which have not been committed, are not known, and cannot reasonably be foreseen at that time.⁹⁵ If defects which render the levy illegal are not manifest on the record, and can be established only by extrinsic evidence, the levy is subject to collateral attack.⁹⁶

Waiver or estoppel. A taxpayer may waive or be estopped to object to the validity of a tax levy by reason of his failure to assert his objection at the proper time,⁹⁷ or by reason of the defect or irregularity being in his favor.⁹⁸ A taxpayer's failure, however, to appear before a budget session of the city council and protest the elimination of an item of income from the proposed budget does not preclude him from thereafter asserting the invalidity of the tax because of such elimination, where no notice of the removal of the item was given prior to the budget session.⁹⁹

Partial invalidity. It has been maintained that a levy which is illegal as to part is wholly void;¹ but, generally, a tax levy containing illegal items or parts will not be entirely invalid if the part which is legal can be separated from that which is illegal,² although, if the parts are not separable, the tax is void in toto.³

(2) Presumptions and Burden of Proof

In the absence of evidence to the contrary, a tax levy is presumed to be valid, and the burden of proving its invalidity is on the person who attacks it.

Ordinarily a presumption of the validity of the tax levy prevails in the absence of controlling evidence to the contrary;⁴ and the burden of proving the invalidity of the levy is on the taxpayer or person who attacks it.⁵ In accordance with this rule, it will be presumed that any excess or surplus in municipal income from taxes in one fiscal year enters into the computation of the tax rate for the next year.⁶ A tax levy made to procure funds for payment of indebtedness incurred by a municipality while the lands against which it was levied were prima facie within the corporate limits will be presumed valid, even though such lands were thereafter ousted from the jurisdiction of the municipality,⁷ but such presumption is rebuttable.⁸ A presumption of validity, however, does not prevail where there are reasons of public policy why it should not be indulged in;⁹ and, when no steps to collect the tax are taken for a long period of years, no presumption will be indulged favorable to the regularity of the tax proceedings beyond what appears on the face of the record.¹⁰

The courts have no general control over the levying of taxes by a municipal corporation, except in so far as such control or jurisdiction is given by statute.

While certiorari may lie to review the proceedings of a municipal organization in levying a tax,¹¹ except in so far as such control or jurisdiction is given by statute, the courts have no general control over, and ordinarily will not interfere with, the determination of the council or other proper municipal officers as to the necessity, propriety, or validity of a tax levy,¹² where the tax is for a proper purpose, as discussed supra § 1987, and the amount of the levy is within the limits prescribed by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions, as discussed supra §§ 1989-1991, unless an arbitrary abuse of discretion on the part of the council, or of such officers, is shown.¹³ However, the determination of the council or board that an emergency exists, permitting it under the terms of the statute to levy a tax in excess of the constitutional or statutory limit, is not conclusive on the court;¹⁴ nor is a recital of facts in the tax ordinance to show the necessity or emergency conclusive of the truth of the facts stated.¹⁵ A court of equity may act to relieve the hardship which would be caused to taxpayers by paying a large judgment recovered against the municipality out of a single tax levy, by permitting the municipality to spread over a series of years the assessment and levy of taxes to pay the judgment.¹⁶

Scope of hearing or review. Except in so far as controlled by statute, the rules relating to appeal and error in general, apply with respect to an appeal from, or review of, the action of a lower tribunal on a taxpayer's protest or objection to a municipal tax levy.¹⁷ On a tax protest, a court of tax review is limited to the examination of questions which involve only the legality or illegality of the levy,¹⁸ and to the making of such orders as are necessarily incidental to the correction of the levy.¹⁹ It may not determine that the municipality had a surplus balance on hand at the end of the fiscal year, unless the evidence shows that the legal assets properly calculated exceed the legal liabilities properly calculated;²⁰ and in determining the appropriations and rate of taxation it is not bound by a confession of error filed by the attorneys for the municipality,²¹ and a judgment based on such a confession of error is erroneous and will be reversed on appeal.²² Where an objection to a levy is withdrawn by the objector on appeal, the lower court's judgment sustaining such objection should be reversed.²³

The dissolution of a municipality deprives its authorities of the power to levy taxes, and ordinarily annuls a tax levy.

Ruling adding loss and cost

Where a ruling of the county court in sustaining a given objection to an annual tax levy carried with it the additional sum of ten per cent for loss and cost of collection, a decision on the main item of the objection necessarily carried with it the correctness of the court's ruling in adding loss and cost thereto, as against contention that the point was not available on appeal, and in addition the point was open under assignment challenging ruling in sustaining objections for proportionate amount of loss and cost in challenged items of tax levy.—People ex rel. Toman v. B. Mercil & Sons Plating Co., 37 N.E.2d 839, 378 Ill. 142.

Objectors not before court

Supreme court was not authorized to consider objection to tax item levied by the city where the taxpayers interposing the objection were not before the court.—People ex rel. Toman v. Baltimore & O. & C. R. Co., 46 N.E.2d 60, 381 Ill. 585.

Law and fact

Whether appropriation by municipality for sundry contingent expenses is disproportionate to appropriations for other legal purposes is mixed question of law and fact for court of tax review.—Protest of Bledsoe, 17 P.2d 979, 161 Okl. 227.

properly exercised or have exceeded their legal authority and duties in the matter of the appropriations and levies.—Texas-Empire Pipe Line Co. v. Tulsa County Excise Board, 131 P.2d 745, 191 Okl. 586.

19. Okl.—Oklahoma County Excise Board v. Continental Oil Co., 49 P.2d 540, 173 Okl. 577.

Where all the items of appropriation have been made for lawful purposes, within the legal limits of the levy, the court of tax review cannot require the taxing official to cancel one item of the appropriation and substitute therefor an equal appropriation for another purpose, notwithstanding such other purpose would have been a proper one for appropriation originally.—Oklahoma County Excise Board v. Continental Oil Co., 49 P.2d 540, 173 Okl. 577.

Division of rate among funds

Where the excise board, authorized to fix a rate of levy for each of several funds, fixes a single rate for all of such funds, the court of tax review may divide the rate so fixed among the several funds, so as to produce the amount estimated to be needed for each fund.—Protest of Trimble, 300 P. 406, 151 Okl. 74.

The dissolution of a municipality deprives its authorities of the power to levy taxes;²⁴ and ordinarily annuls a tax levy,²⁵ unless its force is preserved and continued by statute.²⁶ Ordinarily the courts cannot levy taxes, in case of such a dissolution,²⁷ but under some statutes, where the property of the dissolved corporation is not sufficient to pay all claims legally established against it, the courts may levy a tax on all real and personal property within the limits of the municipality as previously incorporated for the purpose of discharging such claims.²⁸

b. Assessment

§ 2042. In General

An assessment is the valuation given to property by the municipal assessor as a basis for the application of the tax rate and the ascertainment of the tax.

The word "assessment" is used to refer to two entirely different concepts.²⁹ In its initial meaning the word refers to the valuation which is given to property by the municipal assessor as a basis for the application of the tax rate and the ascertainment of the tax.³⁰ Its secondary meaning, to describe an imposition in the nature of a tax, such as an assessment on property specially benefited by a public improvement, is discussed supra § 1290.

Assessments are governed by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions,³¹ and under a constitutional provision to that effect the municipal corporation must tax property on the principles established for state taxation,³² and this rule applies to assessments against railroad property;³³ but such provision has reference to the organic requirements of taxation and does not apply to the mechanics of assessing authorized tax levies.³⁴ Under some statutes or charter provisions certain municipalities may have authority to adopt and amend local laws relating to the preparation, making, confirmation, and correction of local assessments for taxation purposes,³⁵ and may change or supersede previous statutory provisions which do not in terms and in effect apply alike to all cities.³⁶ A home-rule city may avail itself of the benefits and privileges of the general state laws with reference to the assessment of taxes, or may act under its own charter provisions,³⁷ although a municipality may sometimes maintain its own assessor and make its own assessment rolls on its own valuations,³⁸ and may take steps to equalize its taxes with a view to equality and uniformity.³⁹ Where a municipality transfers its taxing functions to the county and adopts the county tax system, it accepts such system charged with all the incidents thereof created by valid statutory and constitutional provisions applicable to county assessments.⁴⁰

Taxes are assessed against specific property,⁴¹ and property which is exempted from taxation by statute is not subject to assessment.⁴² A statute authorizing the redemption of property adjudicated to the state for unpaid state taxes does not suspend or abolish municipal assessments on property after its adjudication to the state.⁴³ The creation of municipal assessment districts rests within the power of the legislature;⁴⁴ and the legislature also has the power to reorganize assessment districts.⁴⁵

Irregularities. Mere irregularities in connection with municipal assessments,⁴⁶ such as irregularities in the levy or proceedings preliminary to an assessment,⁴⁷ do not invalidate the assessment or afford a taxpayer a ground or right to defeat the assessment against his property; and the same is true under statutes specifically so providing.⁴⁸ Accordingly, an assessment cannot be defeated except on a meritorious ground;⁴⁹ and an assessment is not rendered void by the failure to fix the bond⁵⁰ or the compensation⁵¹ of the assessing officer. Moreover, it has been held that the legislature has the power to validate and legalize assessments which but for such action would be irregular and invalid.⁵²

Tax of miscellaneous properties together; realty and personalty. Where lands subject to a tax are blended in an assessment, so as not to be distinguishable, with lands not subject to the tax, the assessment is void.⁵³ Under a statute so providing, real and personal property must be assessed separately;⁵⁴ and where they are assessed together the assessment is invalid.⁵⁵ Whether particular property is real or personal for assessment purposes depends on the terms of the statutes and the particular circumstances.⁵⁶ In some jurisdictions a municipality may assess the land, owned by one person, and the building thereon, owned by the lessee of the land, together as a unit;⁵⁷ and it is proper to assess taxes on the entire property as a unit against the owner of the leasehold and building,⁵⁸ or against the owner of the land.⁵⁹

Apportionment. Where assessments have been made against several properties, upon which there is one building, the municipality may properly apportion the taxes among the properties in behalf of a purchaser of some of the lots.⁶⁰ A statute providing for the apportionment of a tax among various properties where they are separate and distinct does not apply to the various floors of a building or to subdivisions of one floor in a building.⁶¹

Tax on public utilities. In some jurisdictions public utilities are subject to a tax on their property in accordance with the provisions of the statutes.⁶² In assessing or computing a tax on public utilities

Reassessment. Under a statute so providing, where an assessment has been set aside as erroneous or illegal, the property may be reassessed;⁶⁵ and, where an assessment is declared invalid, the taxing authorities may reassess such property within the current year next ensuing after termination of the litigation.⁶⁶ The right of reassessment has been held not to be limited to the year preceding the placing of the property on the assessment roll, but to apply to any year;⁶⁷ and it has further been held, on the ground that such statute relates only to remedy and procedure and confers no new right or remedy, that such statute should be given retroactive effect.⁶⁸ Where taxes for past years have been properly assessed, but for some reason have not been collected, they may be properly added to the assessment of taxes for a subsequent year.⁶⁹

Conclusiveness of assessment. The action of the municipal assessing officers in making an assessment, while subject to review, as discussed infra §§ 2054-2057, is judicial and conclusive,⁷⁰ and not subject to collateral attack,⁷¹ in the absence of fraud,⁷² discrimination,⁷³ illegality,⁷⁴ or other facts which would render it void.⁷⁵

§ 2043. Appointment, Tenure, and Authority of Assessors

- a. In general
- b. Authority, powers, and duties

a. In General

Except in so far as there may be provisions specifically relating to assessors, rules governing the appointment, tenure, and other matters relating to municipal officers and employees generally apply to municipal assessing officers.

Municipal assessors are public officers selected by municipal corporations.⁷⁶ They are not state officers in the ordinary sense of that term,⁷⁷ nor are they subordinates, or members, or agents of the state department of taxation or of the commissioner of such department;⁷⁸ and they act under the direction of the commissioner of taxation only within the limits of the power of direction conferred on the commissioner by statute.⁷⁹ Except in so far as there may be statutes or charter provisions specifically relating to assessors,⁸⁰ rules governing the appointment, tenure, and other matters relating to municipal officers and employees generally, discussed supra §§ 462-744, have been applied to municipal assessing officers.⁸¹

The question who is to make the assessment is dependent on the provisions of the statutes.⁸² The assessment must be made by the proper and duly ap-

Classification of municipalities

One is not entitled to reëstablish board of assessors of township, reinstate himself as member thereof, and vacate appointment by city council, elected under municipal pointed or elected municipal officer or officers⁸³ except where constitutional or statutory provisions require the assessment to be made by officers other than a municipal officer;⁸⁴ and no one other than the authorized person or board can make a valid assessment.⁸⁵ The power to create the office of assessor rests in the legislature,⁸⁶ and a municipality has no authority to employ tax assessors except in so far as it is granted such authority by statute.⁸⁷ By the same token, the legislature has the power to abolish such office.⁸⁸

Appointment or election. Municipal assessing officers must be appointed⁸⁹ or elected⁹⁰ by such persons and in such manner as may be prescribed by statutory or charter provisions. Statutes regulating the appointment of assessors for cities in a particular class⁹¹ and placing restrictions on the personnel of the board⁹² have been held constitutional. An appointment becomes complete and irrevocable where the duly appointed assessor complies with the statutory requirement and takes his oath of office.⁹³ The fact that there is no record of the appointment of the assessors⁹⁴ or that they omitted to take the statutory oath⁹⁵ will not invalidate an assessment. Where the term of office under the statute extends over a number of years, a reappointment each year is not required.⁹⁶ An assessor holding office legally under a particular statute cannot be ousted by one claiming under a later unconstitutional statute.⁹⁷

Effect of civil service laws; veterans' preference. Rules relating to the effect of civil service acts on appointment to, employment in, and eligibility for, municipal office or employment generally, discussed supra §§ 469, 488, 711-717, have been applied to municipal assessing officers and clerks.⁹⁸ Rules relating to the right of veterans under statutes providing for preference to veterans in appointment to municipal office generally, considered supra § 470, have been applied to veterans seeking appointments as assessing officers.⁹⁹ However, a statute providing for preference to honorably discharged veterans in appointment, employment, and promotion with respect to municipal office, but excepting from its operation positions of confidence and duties of officials and departments, has been held not manager act, of assessor of city, in view of change in name of township to city, and fact that boundaries of improvement commission were not completely coextensive with boundaries of township—Peck v. New Barbadoes Tp., supra.

to include in its application the office of municipal assessor,¹ even though such office is not expressly excepted from the benefits of the act;² and statutes providing for the appointment of municipal assessors have been held not to be in conflict with veterans' preference acts.³

Term of office. The term of office of assessing officers is determined by the provisions of the statutes;⁴ and, to the extent that a statute changing the term so provides, it is applicable to those in office when the statute was enacted.⁵ In the absence of provisions to the contrary, a reappointment may be made retroactive to the date of the expiration of the prior appointment.⁶ Under a statute requiring the chairman of the board of assessors to be a member of the board, on the expiration of the term of membership of the chairman he is not entitled to continue as chairman until a successor is appointed to supersede him, since, when his membership ceases, he can no longer be the chairman.⁷

Removal and reinstatement; disciplinary action. Authority and procedure for dismissal of an assessing officer depend on constitutional, statutory, and charter provisions.⁸ Thus, under provisions to that effect, an assessor may be removed at the pleasure of the appointing power;⁹ but under other provisions a municipal assessing officer may not be removed without charges being preferred against him and a full and fair hearing thereon.¹⁰ An assessing officer may be summarily dismissed where the proper procedure therefor is followed;¹¹ and where such dismissal was by the city manager with the approval of the city council it is final and cannot be affected by the council's attempted rescission of such approval.¹² Where a deputy assessor, claiming to have been unlawfully removed, seeks reinstatement he may be precluded therefrom by laches.¹³

Compensation. Under statutes so providing, a municipality has been held to have the power and authority to fix the salary of its assessor;¹⁴ and the courts will not interfere with the amount fixed, provided the compensation fixed is not so inadequate for the services actually performed as to be unreasonable.¹⁵ It has been held that a de facto assessing officer, who actually renders services as an assessor, is entitled to the compensation therefor during the time which he has served.¹⁶ In the absence of waiver or estoppel, a municipal assessor can recover salary from the municipality for the period of his wrongful dismissal,¹⁷ notwithstanding the salary for such period had been paid by the municipality to a de facto officer.¹⁸ A statement of an assessing officer's claim for compensation should contain information sufficient to enable the body to which it is presented to pass on it.¹⁹ Where a municipal assessor accepts less than his full salary, he may thereby intend to make a voluntary donation to the city of the unpaid portions of his salary;²⁰ and whether he intends to do so is a question of fact to be determined by the jury.²¹

20. Pa.—Schwarz v. City of Philadelphia, 12 A.2d 294, 337 Pa. 500.

21. Pa.—Schwarz v. City of Philadelphia, supra.

The authority, powers, and duties of an assessing officer or board depend on the provisions of the statute creating the office or board and other statutes relating thereto.²² Under statutes so providing, it is the duty of the assessing officers or board to make out correct lists for each district, showing the number of persons and estates on the city assessment.²³ Assessors, duly appointed or elected, cannot delegate their powers to another.²⁴ Thus they cannot make a contract with a corporation, providing thereby for the installation and superintendence of an appraisal system, where such contract is equivalent to the delegation of their powers;²⁵ nor will an authority to make such a contract be implied from a statutory provision authorizing the city assessors to employ expert assistants.²⁶ However, under or apart from statutes so providing, assessing officers are entitled to have the assistance of experts²⁷ or appraisers,²⁸ such as appraisers appointed by the municipality to appraise the property and report on it.²⁹

A municipality may have the power to contract with an appraisal company for the purpose of employing it to appraise or reappraise the taxable property in the municipality,³⁰ and it has been held not improper for the municipality to appoint the employees of such a company as assistant assessors as a matter of convenience to facilitate the collection of the necessary data by enabling such employees to inspect various properties,³¹ nor is such a contract invalid on the ground that it deprives the assessor of authority to value property, where the contract provides that the assessor's judgment shall be final.³² Nevertheless, in the final analysis the valuation of the property to be assessed must be made by the assessing officer;³³ and where the figures of an appraiser or appraisal organization are taken by the assessor without the exercise of his own judgment the assessment may be invalid,³⁴ but the fact that the figures presented by the appraisers were adopted by the assessing officer will not necessarily invalidate the assessment, since such figures may have been adopted as the best available evidence of the value of the property,³⁵ particularly where the property owner filed no objection to the assessment on that ground.³⁶

The deputies of a municipal assessor act for, and in place of, the assessor as to a portion of the duties imposed on him,³⁷ and their duties are practically the same.³⁸ The chief deputy performs the duty of the assessor in the event of a vacancy.³⁹ A statute authorizing the appointment of deputies is not void for uncertainty because it also requires the officer to make oath to the correctness of the entire assessment.⁴⁰ An assessor cannot act outside his district;⁴¹ but his jurisdiction is not restricted geographically by a statute prescribing a residence qualification.⁴²

Authority to decide objections and amend tax rolls. The power of the assessor to hear and decide objections to assessments depends on, and is limited by, the terms of the statute or charter provision granting such power;⁴³ and statutory or charter provisions determine when the power of the municipal assessing officer to correct the assessment rolls terminates.⁴⁴ Thus, under charter and statutory provisions to that effect, the assessor's authority to amend the assessment rolls terminates with the completion of the rolls,⁴⁵ or with their verification immediately preceding delivery,⁴⁶ or with delivery of the assessment roll or books to the official designated to receive them.⁴⁷ He cannot thereafter repossess himself of the books and make a new assessment,⁴⁸ not even after the old assessment has been declared illegal by the court;⁴⁹ nor can he then amend the old assessment.⁵⁰ It has been held that assessors cannot include in their assessment for a particular year a reassessment for taxes in prior years, where they have no jurisdiction to hear objections thereto;⁵¹ but, under a statute so providing, the assessing officer has authority to assess a person or property for taxation where, for any reason, such person or property has escaped taxation for the previous year;⁵² and the rule applies to property which was actually on the assessment roll, where such roll had been adjudged void.⁵³

Reassessment after an invalid assessment is considered generally supra § 2042.

§ 2044. Time and Frequency of Assessment

Except where otherwise provided, municipal assessments are made every year, and are required to be made or completed on or before a certain day.

Except where otherwise provided,⁵⁴ municipal assessments are usually made every year,⁵⁵ and continue in force through the year unaffected by a repeal of the municipal charter under which the assessment is made and the substitution of a new charter therefor.⁵⁶ Statutes providing for assessments at intervals longer than one year have been construed to authorize an assessment in any or every of the intervening years;⁵⁷ and the levy of taxes for successive years, based on the same assessment, is not open to the objection that it is double taxation.⁵⁸ Under a statute so providing, all the real estate in the municipality is required to be revalued at least once during every period of years specified by the statute.⁵⁹ However, such provision does not require that the revaluation be done as to all the properties in the same year⁶⁰ or that the grand list of property prepared by the city assessors for a particular year be based on revaluations made for that particular list;⁶¹ and it is sufficient if each piece of property is viewed and revalued at some time within the specified period.⁶²

Assessment date. Where provision is made that the assessment shall be made or completed on or before a certain day, assessments made after the day fixed are invalid;⁶³ but under others they may be valid.⁶⁴ A special statute fixing a particular day for the completion of an assessment will prevail over the provisions of a general law fixing a different date.⁶⁵ Where a statute grants the power, a city council may adopt a date different from the day set for assessment under the law relating to state and county taxes;⁶⁶ and, even where the statute stipulates that the municipal assessment shall not exceed the assessment made by the state board, a municipal assessment filed before the state board has made its report is valid if the state assessment is not exceeded.⁶⁷

A charter provision fixing the time of the assessment is not affected in any way by a contract entered into with an expert assistant and providing for weekly reports of the work done by him.⁶⁸ Under a resolution of the city council ordering an assessment to be made on or before a specified day, the board of assessors may select a date of assessment prior to that named in the resolution,⁶⁹ provided the date selected is not so early as to prevent the giving of the requisite statutory notice.⁷⁰ Where the ordinance of the city council and the notice of the tax assessors fix no specified day for the valuation of property, the assessment is deemed to have been made the day following the last day on which the taxpayers are notified to file an account of their ratable estate.⁷¹ Under charter or statutory provisions to that effect, the determination of whether property is taxable to a taxpayer must be made on the date specified in the provisions;⁷² and property acquired by a taxpayer after the speci-

Change of assessment date. Under a statute granting the power, a city council has discretionary power to change the assessment date,⁷⁴ and such power may be exercised even after the date originally fixed by the statute.⁷⁵ A change of the assessment date may be effected by a change in the general law where under the terms of the city charter taxation is subject to the provisions of the general law.⁷⁶

Tax period. Where a charter or statutory provision fixes the beginning and end of the municipal fiscal year, reference in the tax rolls to specific years may be regarded as designating fiscal years beginning in the calendar year specified.⁷⁷ Moreover, there is no inconsistency between the provisions of a charter with reference to the fiscal year and recognition by the municipality of a tax period corresponding with the calendar year.⁷⁸

§ 2045. Mode of Assessment

Statutory or charter provisions specifying the mode of making assessments and the procedure connected therewith must be complied with if mandatory.

The power given to the legislature to confer on the proper authorities of a municipal corporation the authority to assess and collect taxes necessarily carries with it the power to regulate how the taxes shall be assessed and collected.⁷⁹ Accordingly, statutory or charter provisions specifying the mode of making assessments and the procedure connected therewith, if mandatory, must be complied with in every substantial particular or the assessment will be invalid,⁸⁰ although noncompliance with a statutory requirement which is merely directory will not invalidate the assessment.⁸¹ Mere irregularities in an assessment will not invalidate it,⁸² particularly where the irregularities constitute a failure to follow directory, rather than mandatory, provisions.⁸³ While cities may have the right to provide for the mode and method of assessing taxes, both real and personal,⁸⁴ in the absence of express authorization the general tax law relative to the mode of assessment for state or county purposes is applicable to municipal taxation,⁸⁵ and the city has no power to contract for the installation and superintendence of a method of assessment other than that provided by statute.⁸⁶

The failure of the assessor to follow the statutes in making assessments cannot be excused on the ground of his own carelessness;⁸⁷ and, since the assessor, as well as others, is charged with knowledge of facts disclosed by the record of his county,⁸⁸ his failure to follow the statute in making assessments of property as to which there is a record is not excused by his carelessness.⁸⁹ A tax properly laid on particular property is not invalidated by mere statements made by the assessor after his work is completed,⁹⁰ or by the knowledge of the assessor that the tax would not be collected,⁹¹ even though his motive in making the assessment was to deceive the other taxpayers into the belief that the property was being taxed.⁹²

Invalidation of entire grand list. To invalidate an entire grand list of a municipality is an act fraught with very serious consequences,⁹³ and, while a breach of duty by the assessors may be of such a nature as necessarily to affect the entire grand list of property prepared by them,⁹⁴ as where they are guilty of a failure to obey a mandatory statutory requirement,⁹⁵ an error which affects only the valuation of the property of a particular taxpayer does not invalidate the entire grand list;⁹⁶ but, as discussed infra § 2054, an aggrieved taxpayer may be entitled to appeal to the board of review or equalization. In order to justify the invalidation of an entire grand list, errors in the method of valuation of individual properties must be such that the levy of a tax on the grand list would be likely to produce a substantial injustice to the taxpayers of the community as a whole.⁹⁷

Waiver by taxpayer. A taxpayer may, by his conduct, waive the right to challenge the validity of assessments.⁹⁸

§ 2046. — Listing by Taxpayer

In some jurisdictions residents must deliver to the assessing officer a written list or inventory of their property for the purposes of taxation.

In some jurisdictions it is required by constitution or statute that residents of a municipal corporation shall, by a specified time, deliver to the assessor or other officer a written list or inventory of their property for the purposes of taxation⁹⁹ or that such a list shall be furnished on demand;¹ and the municipality itself may make such a requirement under its general power to levy and collect taxes.² Such a provision is applicable to all persons who are property owners at the time of its enactment,³ and is not restricted to those who become owners after the legislation goes into effect.⁴ Also, the provision is applicable to resident property belonging to nonresidents of the state.⁵ Some of these statutes are construed as being directory only, and as not making the listing by the taxpayer a condition precedent to a valid assessment,⁶ although the assessor must give the taxpayer notice and an opportunity to be heard before he can list the property himself.⁷

In some jurisdictions it has been held that the provision is directory in so far as the time fixed for the submission of the inventory or list is concerned.⁸ It has been held that, where the assessor has received a list not sworn to as required by charter or statute, he cannot treat the case as one of neglect, failure, or refusal on the part of the taxpayer to furnish a list.⁹ The municipal taxing authorities are not under a duty to inspect real estate for the purpose of supplying deficiencies in its description as given in the tax lists filed by the property owner.¹⁰ The above rules and course of procedure are not altered or affected by statutes providing for installment payment of taxes, interest on delinquent taxes, and the application of the proceeds from delinquent taxes.¹¹

Return on special form. Under a statute relating to the assessment of a personal property tax, the assessor must furnish the taxpayer with a blank form for the taxpayer's return;¹² and the assessor may file a return on behalf of the taxpayer if the latter fails to file such a return within a specified period after being properly notified to do so.¹³ Under a statute making national banking institutions and joint stock land banks agents of nonresident stockholders, on the failure of such an institution to make a return as to nonresident stockholders for personal property tax purposes a municipality is authorized to assess the bank in solido for such stock.¹⁴

§ 2047. — Description of Property

An accurate description of the property assessed is essential to the validity of the assessment; a description is sufficient if it is capable of being made certain by extrinsic evidence.

An accurate description of the property assessed is essential to the validity of the assessment;¹⁵ and where identification of the land is impossible from the description given the assessment is fatally defective.¹⁶ However, the description is generally sufficient if it is capable of being made certain by extrinsic evidence.¹⁷ The necessity of reciting descriptive details will be determined by the requirements of the statute;¹⁸ and a special statute will prevail over the general law in the absence of constitutional provisions to the contrary.¹⁹

The assessment has been held not to be invalidated by a failure to state the abstract and survey numbers of the land,²⁰ by a failure to give the numbers of the block and lots, even though the ordinance provides therefor,²¹ or by an inaccuracy in the description in the memorandum of one of the assessors, where the description in the assessment roll itself is correct.²² If the owner is not prejudiced or misled thereby, an assessment which describes certain property only as "personal property" is not too indefinite and general to create a tax charge against the taxpayer.²³ It has been held that in determining the sufficiency of the description of property the column in the assessment roll showing to whom the property is assessed is no part of the description of the property.²⁴

Subdivision of land on assessment maps. The manner in which land is subdivided on assessment maps must not be purely arbitrary,²⁵ but must be done with due regard to the various factors involved, such as separate ownership, lines of record title, physical possession as evidenced by structures, the existence of streets, natural barriers, and landmarks.²⁶ However, the subdivision of land for tax purposes, and the ownership and physical possession thereof, need not be reconciled to the point of exact mathematical precision.²⁷ Accordingly, tax maps need not be exact surveys,²⁸ all that is required being that the premises be described with sufficient definiteness to identify the parcel intended to be subjected to the tax.²⁹

Auditor's plat. Under a statute so providing, where certain subdivisions of land owned by two or more persons in severalty are difficult to describe sufficiently and accurately for assessment purposes, the county auditor may make and record a plat thereof in accordance with the statutory requirements;³⁰ but where the owner or owners of such platted property object to their being so platted they may maintain an action in equity for the vacation of the plat.³¹

§ 2048. — Statement of Ownership

In whose name property must be assessed and the effect of error or omission depend on the terms of the statutory or charter provisions.

Under some provisions property must be assessed in the name of the true owner,³² and an assessment of property belonging to a lessee, and used by him on the leased land, against the owner of the land, is void.³³ Under other statutes taxes may be assessed against persons connected with the property other than the true owner,³⁴ such as the owner of the first freehold estate,³⁵ which may be a life estate;³⁶ and it has been held that an assessment against a life tenant covers also the owners in fee in remainder and their respective estates.³⁷

On the other hand, under some statutes the tax is assessed against the land;³⁸ and it has been held that if the assessment roll identifies the land the name of the owner need not be given,³⁹ especially where the owner has not availed himself of the protection accorded by the registration of his title.⁴⁰ In such jurisdictions an assessment against one other than the true owner, through ignorance or mistake, is not void where the land is sufficiently described to identify it.⁴¹ So also, the name of the owner, last known owner, or reputed owner is sometimes required to be stated solely as an aid to identification of the property,⁴² so that a mistake in the name of such owner, last known owner, or reputed owner,⁴³ or the absence of a name,⁴⁴ will not affect the validity of the assessment based thereon.

Moreover, under some charters or statutes a tax is not rendered invalid because of error or omission

in naming the owner or owners of the property,⁴⁵ or because of failure to include all of the owners of the property within the assessment,⁴⁶ or because the property is erroneously classed as the land of an unknown or nonresident owner.⁴⁷ However, even though an error in the assessment of land to other than the true owner may not invalidate the assessment,⁴⁸ and such error, on the face of the assessment, can be corrected,⁴⁹ the error must be corrected, where a statute provides therefor, before the city can maintain an action for the tax.⁵⁰

An assessment is sufficient if made to the person who appears to be the record owner⁵¹ or if it is made to the husband of the true owner,⁵² and the assessment is not invalidated by a failure to state that the husband of the person whose land is assessed has an estate by curtesy therein.⁵³ In jurisdictions permitting a reference to tax maps in place of the detailed description in tax rolls, a part owner of a divided lot assessed as one parcel may have the tax map changed to show the division by making application therefor to the proper authorities.⁵⁴

Personal property. Under a statute so providing as to a personal property tax, the tax may be assessed against the owners or persons in possession of any personal property⁵⁵ or certain personal property.⁵⁶

Nonresident owners. Under a statute so providing, assessments against nonresident owners must give their names, or such description of them as can be given, and their places of abode.⁵⁷ It has been held that an assessment to a nonresident owner in the same manner as though he were a resident owner is not void.⁵⁸

assessors is a matter of discretion;⁶¹ and the sources of information open to assessing officers on which they can base their opinions as to real estate values are not limited by such legal proof as is received at a trial.⁶² A large latitude is allowed;⁶³ and it is generally sufficient that the methods employed result in a fair approximation to reasonable value as a basis for the assessment.⁶⁴ Nevertheless, the assessment is void if the valuation is arbitrarily⁶⁵ or fraudulently⁶⁶ made; and fraud may be inferred if the assessment discloses such a degree of discrimination between properties of the same or different classes as to evince a willful disregard of constitutional and statutory requirements.⁶⁷ The rules and course of procedure for determining values are not altered or affected by statutes providing for installment payment of taxes, interest on delinquent taxes, and the application of the proceeds from delinquent taxes.⁶⁸

Under constitutional and statutory provisions to that effect, assessed valuations must be for the full value of the property,⁶⁹ even though a higher tax rate is thereby compelled.⁷⁰ The assessable value of land is enhanced by improvements thereon⁷¹ except in so far as the improved property may be exempt from the particular tax.⁷² Under statutes providing that the land and the improvements thereon must be assessed separately, the assessors must follow some proper method of valuing the land independently of the buildings.⁷³ A single structure may not be valued for assessment purposes by separating it into sections serving different purposes, and attaching a value to one section while disregarding another entirely;⁷⁴ and a structure must be valued as an entirety, especially where all parts of it are revenue producing.⁷⁵ Where a city has surrendered its special charter and has elected to be classed under the general law it may use an assessment made under the special charter as a basis for valuation in an assessment made after it has adopted the general law,⁷⁶ regardless of whether the earlier assessment was valid or invalid.⁷⁷ However, in the case of annexed lands, the assessment by the city to which the land formerly belonged cannot be used as the basis for a tax levy by the city to which it is annexed.⁷⁸ A referee's report fixing the value of property for a particular year is not conclusive on the assessing authorities in determining valuation for a subsequent year;⁷⁹ but in the preparation of the municipal assessment for the next municipal tax year the basis is the assessed value of the then current tax year.⁸⁰

Effect of requirement of uniformity. While the constitutional requirements of equality and uniformity applicable to taxation generally apply, and as between the standard of true value and the requirement of uniformity, uniformity will be given effect,⁸¹ in order to reduce an assessment of land below its actual value in the interest of equality there must be proof by a preponderating weight of the evidence of a fixed ratio of assessment to market value, uniformly applied throughout the taxing district,⁸² and land may not be revalued for tax purposes merely because other land is assessed still higher and still other land too low.⁸³ While a uniformly high valuation usually will not harm a taxpayer if the overassessment is general throughout the municipality and is uniformly determined by applying the same standard of measuring value,⁸⁴ a uniformly high assessment above market values cannot be sustained if it is the means of evading a statutory requirement that the levy, in terms of millage based on actual values, be kept within stated limits.⁸⁵

Aggregate valuation of several properties. Although generally a taxpayer is entitled to have each separate tract or parcel of land separately valued and assessed,⁸⁶ where two or more tracts or parcels are occupied and used together by the property owner for a single purpose their separate identities become merged into one and they may be valued and assessed in solido;⁸⁷ and it has been held that, where there is no statutory definition of the lot or parcel of land that is the lawful unit for purposes of taxation, contiguous parcels of land, although divided on a plan, may be assessed separately or as a unit.⁸⁸ Under some circumstances the rule may even apply to contiguous lots used for a single purpose even though such lots are owned by different persons.⁸⁹ Certainly where the statute or charter authorizes it the value of several lots may be lumped and assessment made for the aggregate amount,⁹⁰ even though they are not adjoining lots or in any way connected with each other,⁹¹ provided only the lots are properly designated.⁹²

Conclusiveness of valuation. Under a statute or charter provision to that effect, a valuation by the assessors is conclusive on a taxpayer, subject only to his right of appeal;⁹³ and in some jurisdictions an assessment in the prescribed mode, without fraud or collusion, is conclusive on the question of value as far as the courts are concerned.⁹⁴

b. Taxes on Property Other than Realty

Methods of evaluation for purposes of taxes on property other than realty, such as taxes on personal property, taxes based on corporate or company capital, or taxes on bank stock, depend on charter or statutory provisions and the relevant facts and circumstances.

Methods of determining the value of property for purposes of taxes on property other than realty depend on charter or statutory provisions⁹⁵ and the relevant facts and circumstances.⁹⁶ In ascertaining the value of personal property, every fact and circumstance bearing on the cost or value must be considered.⁹⁷ Under a statute so providing, personal property consisting of stocks in trade and materials used in manufacture and completed products must be valued at the average of such personalty located in the municipality during the assessment period preceding the date as of which the assessment is made.⁹⁸ Under a statute imposing a personal property tax, a taxpayer may be entitled to deductions from the assessed value of his personal property for debts bona fide due and owing to creditors residing in the state, provided he makes a proper claim in accordance with the requirements prescribed by the statute.⁹⁹ However, it has been held that foreign corporations subject to a tax on its capital employed in the state in doing business are not entitled to make such deductions.¹

Taxes based on corporate or company capital. Under the provisions of a statute imposing a personal property tax on fire and stock insurance companies, in order to determine the taxable capital stock and accumulated surplus of such insurance companies the municipality must first determine the true value of the gross assets of the company⁴ and then deduct therefrom such debts and liabilities as are certain and definite both as to obligation and amount as of the assessing date,⁵ its assessed real estate,⁶ and assets which are exempt or nontaxable

under the tax statutes.⁷ Under a statute imposing a tax on certain corporations, and providing for deductions for exempt property, etc., and for real estate, the value of the franchise of a railroad corporation is not deductible as the franchise is not land or a part thereof.⁸ Under the provisions of a statute providing for a tax on bank stock, the assessor's method of fixing the value of the taxable stock must conform to constitutional or statutory provisions.⁹

c. Particular Methods of, and Factors in, Valuation

Generally the assessment of property must be made on the basis of actual market value or cash value, to be determined by the assessor in the light of all relevant facts. Depending on the circumstances, various methods may be used and factors considered in determining value.

The basis on which property should be valued for municipal tax purposes depends on the terms of the ordinance, or constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions;¹⁰ and, where there is a conflict between an ordinance and a provision of the charter as to the amount at which property should be valued for assessment purposes, the charter provision ordinarily is controlling.¹¹ In general, the assessment must be made on the basis of actual market value¹² or the assessment must be made on the basis of cash value.¹³ "Market value" has been defined as the price which a purchaser willing but not obliged to buy, would pay an owner, willing but not obliged to sell, taking into consideration all uses to which the property is adapted and might in reason be applied;¹⁴ and "cash value" has been defined as the usual selling price at the place where the property shall be at the time of assessment, being the price which could be obtained at private sale, and not at forced or auction sale.¹⁵ A statute providing that a municipality shall lay its assessments of real property "at the full value thereof," refers to value to be determined by arriving at a calculation of what such property would sell for under ordinary circumstances.¹⁶

Where the cash or market value of property is not readily ascertainable, the true and actual value of the property must be determined by the consideration of some other method or methods of valuation;¹⁷ and the fact that the final determination of the value of the property was so reached does not invalidate the result, provided all appropriate elements of value and methods of ascertaining value

were considered.¹⁸ This rule applies where there have been no sales of similar property in many years;¹⁹ and in such cases the "usual selling price" test is merely a guide rather than the controlling factor.²⁰ The rule also applies in the case of property which could not conceivably be put to any use or have any salability or value except for the one purpose for which it was constructed.²¹

The ascertainment of the value of property for taxation purposes is not simply a matter of formula,²² but depends on the exercise of the judgment of the assessing officer,²³ on a proper consideration of all relevant facts,²⁴ although such facts may properly include a formula based on a mathematical calculation,²⁵ the assessor using his judgment as to the extent to which it shall be employed.²⁶ Under a constitutional provision that assessments shall be made at the actual or cash value of the property, statutes are held unconstitutional and void which direct the assessors to take into account certain elements which enter into the actual value of the property and to disregard other elements which also have a bearing on actual value²⁷ or which direct that unplatted lands shall not be assessed otherwise than by the acre as agricultural lands.²⁸

Methods which may be used, or factors which may be considered, in determining the value of property for municipal tax purposes include sales of, or assessment on, comparable property in a proper case,²⁹ and book value, that is, the value at which the property is carried on the taxpayer's books.³⁰ In determining the value of property it is proper to consider the expense which would be involved in removing an obsolete building which is a liability instead of an asset.³¹ Where a property is in liquidation its scrap or salvage value may be considered.³²

Income or rental value; capitalization thereof. It has been held that the income of the assessed property or the capitalization of such income, although not conclusive, may be used, or is a factor which may be considered, in determining the taxable value of the property,³³ and this is also true of the earning capacity³⁴ or the rental value³⁵ of the property. The rental value of premises is what they would have been worth in the market if the lessor had been free and able to rent them;³⁶ but it is not necessarily measured by the actual rent received,³⁷ although that may be some evidence of the rental value.³⁸

Capitalization of the net earnings of the enterprise housed in the property, as distinguished from the capitalization of the rental value of the building, does not determine the true value of the building for assessment purposes,³⁹ particularly where the net earnings on which it is suggested that the value be computed is determined by making extraordinary deductions from the gross earnings of the building⁴⁰ or where there are other extraordinary circumstances;⁴¹ but, on the other hand, it has been held that the assessing officers may not go beyond the productive use of the realty and penalize business acumen and enterprise.⁴² In evaluating the local plant of a taxpayer also having plants elsewhere, the assessor should appraise the lands and buildings as he finds them, giving no consideration whatever to the question of the profit or loss made in any particular plant, mill, or building.⁴³ Where a commercial property is neither a paying property nor in liquidation it is proper to consider earnings as a criterion for determining its value;⁴⁴ and the property is required to be assessed each year on the basis of its then value and income rather than on the basis of an average income over a period of years.⁴⁵

Cost of reproduction; depreciation; obsolescence. The cost of reproduction of the assessed building, less depreciation and obsolescence, although not itself conclusive, may be used, or is a factor which may be considered, in determining the taxable value of property;⁴⁶ the weight to be given to depreciated reproduction cost depending on the facts of the particular case;⁴⁷ but it has also been held that it is improper to consider the reproduction cost of a building for any purpose⁴⁸ and that it is not of controlling effect.⁴⁹ It has been held that the result obtained by computing the reproduction cost of a building or improvement and deducting depreciation determines, in the absence of extraordinary circumstances, the maximum value which may be placed thereon for tax purposes,⁵⁰ although other methods of assessing value may be weighed and considered;⁵¹ but such a rule of valuation may be utilized as the sole test only in the case of a paying property.⁵² The assessing officers may not consider the obsolescence of a building as a ground for reduction of the valuation unless it is shown that the building has no usable value for any purpose,⁵³ since it is insufficient merely to show that the building is unsuited to purposes other than that for which it was constructed.⁵⁴

Sale price. The sale price of property, although an item to be considered in fixing its valuation for municipal tax purposes,⁵⁵ does not conclusively establish that price as the fair value of the property,⁵⁶ or its actual or market value,⁵⁷ or the "usual selling price."⁵⁸

Valuation placed on property by taxpayer. The valuations placed on the taxpayer's property in rendition sheets to the city, which were signed or prepared by the taxpayer⁵⁹ or his agent,⁶⁰ are, in the absence of fraud or mistake, binding on the taxpayer, who cannot thereafter complain that the valuations are too high. The valuation placed on the property by the taxpayer for purposes of receiving damages for the condemnation of a portion of the property may be taken into consideration in making an assessment.⁶¹

d. Use of Town, County, or State Assessment

(1) In general

(2) Property of public service corporations; railroads

(1) In General

A municipal corporation may be required to use the town, county, or state assessment roll for its own tax purposes, or may have the right to make an independent assessment, with the use of such outside assessment roll as optional.

Under some constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions municipal authorities need not make an independent assessment but may use the town, county, or state assessment roll,⁶² even though there has been a failure by the assessors to comply with the statutory requirement that the use of such assessment roll shall be directed by the local council.⁶³ In some jurisdictions such provisions are mandatory, rather than permissive;⁶⁴ and, where the provision is contained in the constitution, a statute authorizing an independent assessment by city officers is in violation thereof.⁶⁵ In other jurisdictions, however, such provisions are not compulsory,⁶⁶ and the municipal corporation may make its own assessment rolls on its own independent valuations,⁶⁷ as long as the general form of the rolls used in the county is followed and the fundamental principles required by the general ad valorem revenue laws are observed.⁶⁸

Where there is no mandatory provision for the use of town, county, or state assessment rolls, the municipality itself may nevertheless adopt such rolls to the extent that it deems it expedient.⁶⁹

Taxpayer as not "willing purchaser"

Where taxpayer purchased realty at private sale, and it did not appear that property was generally on the market or that other solicitation had been made, taxpayer was not a "willing purchaser" in complete sense of that term as used as basis for municipal tax assessments, and contract price did not conclusively establish fair value of property for tax assessment purposes.—City of Plainfield v. Moreover, in some jurisdictions municipalities are authorized by constitutional provisions to place their own valuation on property for municipal tax purposes,⁷⁰ so that a statute requiring municipalities to adopt bodily the county assessment roll for such city is invalid in that it violates such constitutional provision.⁷¹

Where the constitution of the state so provides, the valuation of property for the purpose of municipal taxation cannot exceed the valuation of the same property for the purposes of state and county taxation;⁷² but when authorized by a constitutional provision,⁷³ or when not prohibited,⁷⁴ a municipality may place a higher valuation on property than that placed on it by the state and county if such higher value is not an overvaluation. When an outside assessment roll is used, it must be the one authorized to be so used,⁷⁵ and must be the latest one made,⁷⁶ including subsequent adjustments made prior to its adoption by the municipality;⁷⁷ but changes made in the roll after its adoption for use by the city will not affect the city assessment;⁷⁸ and where a city is given by law an election to adopt the assessment as equalized by the state board of equalization but has failed to do so, an assessment on the basis of changes in the valuation by the state board cannot be made.⁷⁹

The right or authority of a municipality to place its own valuation on property cannot be extended to property taxable by the municipality but not located therein,⁸⁰ as in the case of the property of some public service corporations such as railroads, discussed infra subdivision d (2) of this section.

(2) Property of Public Service Corporations; Railroads

Under various statutes the entire property in the state of certain public service corporations, or of railroads, or certain property of railroads, is assessed by a state board or officer and apportioned to the municipal corporations, and the extent to which municipalities are bound by such valuations depends on the provisions of statutes.

In some jurisdictions, under constitutional or statutory authority and direction, the entire property in the state of certain public service corporations, including railroads, is assessed by a state board or officer, and then distributed and apportioned to the municipalities in which the property is located.⁸¹ In other jurisdictions there are similar provisions with relation only to railroads.⁸² Under other statutes municipalities are bound by the state assessment and apportionment of the intangible assets of railroads⁸³ or by the state's valuation of the transitory property and appurtenant supplies of railroads;⁸⁴ but they are not bound by the assessment or valuation made by the state authorities as to the mileage of track in the corporate limits.⁸⁵

Provisions expressly granting municipalities authority to make their own assessments on property within their limits render state assessments inapplicable;⁸⁶ and, in so far as the municipality can make its own assessment of railroad property for municipal purposes, it is not compelled to accept the assessment or valuation made by the state authorities.⁸⁷ However, the municipality must assess the railroad's mileage in its corporate limits at a just valuation⁸⁸ and in accordance with the principles established for state taxation;⁸⁹ and in conformity with such principles the assessor must take into consideration the fact that a railroad is limited to the use of its property for railroad purposes only,⁹⁰ and cannot base his valuation on the general speculative and investment value of the property.⁹¹ Moreover, a provision that municipalities may make their own assessments has been held not to give the city unrestricted power to make its own valuation, but merely to give it power to increase or reduce the valuation of the state board for the purpose of equalizing the assessments on all property throughout the city,⁹² the city being compelled to accept the valuation of the state board as the basis for its work of equalization,⁹³ and, in equalizing the assessment, to observe the principles underlying the state assessment in combining values of different kinds of property belonging to the railroad.⁹⁴

Where the valuation of railroad property in a municipality as a tax district has been fixed by the state, the municipal assessors are not required further to apportion such value among the various wards of the municipality but may properly place the whole amount on the assessment roll for the ward in which the principal office of the company was located.⁹⁵

e. Increase or Reduction in Valuation

In order to effect a change in the valuation of property, requirements of statutes or ordinances, such as the giving of notice, must be complied with. A change in valuation may be effected by adjustment or compromise between the taxpayer and the municipal corporation.

In order to effect a change in the valuation of property, there must be a compliance with all requirements of the statutes or ordinances, as, for example, requirements that notice shall be given to the taxpayer either before⁹⁶ or after⁹⁷ the change is made, or that changes shall be made only in certain months.⁹⁸ A municipal corporation is not required to give notice of increases made by a state board in a state assessment which the city uses;⁹⁹ and individual owners of shares of stock are not entitled to notice of increases in assessment of the stock,¹ a notice to the corporation being sufficient.² If the statute fully protects the taxpayer by giving him a right to notice after the change is made and an opportunity to make objections and to be heard thereon, he has no ground for complaint because the statute does not provide for any appeal or other judicial investigation.³ The manner of giving notice must be in accordance with the requirements of statutory or charter provisions.⁴

Agreement between city and taxpayer. An increase or reduction in valuation may be made the subject of adjustment or compromise between the taxpayer and the municipality;⁵ and an agreement reached between them covering the taxes for an entire year cannot be rescinded by the municipality after taxes for one half the year have been paid and accepted by the municipality thereunder.⁶

Triennial assessments. Where statutes provide for triennial assessments, the assessor may, in a proper case and on proper notice, reassess property in the years between the triennial assessments,⁷ and may correct errors of law, fact, or judgment which may have been made in making the triennial assessment;⁸ but under statutory provisions authorizing the reduction of the assessed valuation of real property for certain causes he may not reduce the valuation except for such changes in the condition of the property as are specified in the statute.⁹

§ 2050. — Persons and Property Omitted from List

- a. In general
- b. Omissions in prior years
- c. Proceedings to place on list or assess

a. In General

In some instances, a municipal corporation may assess or proceed against property omitted from the assessment roll, and may contract for a private search for concealed property. In some jurisdictions an intentional omission may invalidate the entire assessment.

While the power of the assessor, unless it is otherwise specially provided, generally ends with the return of his roll or list to the proper office, as discussed supra § 2043, in some jurisdictions provisions are made for assessing, placing on the roll, or proceeding against property overlooked when the assessment was made.¹⁰ These provisions are mandatory,¹¹ even though permissive in form;¹² they are retroactive in operation;¹³ and they have been held to be constitutional notwithstanding they confer a quasi-judicial power on the assessment board.¹⁴ Authority conferred on the collector of taxes to assess persons whom the assessor has failed to list does not authorize him to add to an assessment property omitted therefrom but belonging to a person whom the assessor has listed.¹⁵ When an assessment roll has been substantially completed before passage of an ordinance levying a city tax, the fact that property not reported by owners is afterward added to the roll does not invalidate the tax;¹⁶ but after the assessment has been returned and the tax levied thereon, the council has no power, in the absence of special statutory provisions, to order an additional assessment to be made of property subsequently coming within the city limits;¹⁷ nor, as discussed infra § 2056, can it add such property to the original assessment in review proceedings.

Contracts for search for concealed property. Except where such a contract is in excess of its authority,¹⁸ a municipal corporation may contract with a private person to search for property secreted and omitted from the tax list.¹⁹ Under such contract the municipality may reserve to itself a right to reject any property discovered if, in its discretion, the tax thereon is considered uncollectable,²⁰ although, if the tax is later collected, the city will be liable for the commissions thereon.²¹

Municipality's use of outside assessment rolls. Provisions relating to omitted property have no application to cities which use a state assessment roll in the absence of a statute expressly authorizing municipal officers to make additions to it,²² and such authority will not be implied from provisions authorizing state officers to make such additions;²³ but it has been held that, where the city uses a county assessment roll and relies on county officials to list all taxable property thereon, it may act independently and contract for searches to be made for omitted property.²⁴ Moreover, a statute or charter provision authorizing a municipality to assess or proceed against property which has been omitted from the assessment list has been held to apply only to omitted property which is subject to taxation and assessment by the municipal authorities.²⁵ Accordingly, such a statute or charter provision has been held not to authorize a municipality to assess or proceed against omitted property of a public service corporation, such as a railroad, the property of which is required by another statute to be assessed by a state agency,²⁶ and the remedy of a municipality for the failure of such state officer or agency to assess such omitted property is by mandamus.²⁷

Effect of omission on entire assessment. While it has been held that a municipality does not lose its right to taxes justly owing on certain property, simply by reason of the failure of its officers, negligently or designedly, to assess other property that is likewise taxable,²⁸ it has also been held that, if the taxing officers intentionally omit taxable property from the assessment roll, the entire roll is void,²⁹ and a right of complaint is given against the entire assessment to anyone whose burdens are thereby unduly increased.³⁰ However, accidental omissions of persons or property from the assessment roll do not vitiate the entire tax;³¹ and this rule applies to mistakes of law as well as of fact.³² Accordingly, if the omission is in consequence of a bona fide belief that the property is exempt from taxation, the entire assessment will not be invalid.³³

Under some statutes, property omitted for several years may be assessed for each of such years, provided the right to assess and collect taxes is not barred by limitations.

In accordance with the provisions of some statutes, taxable property omitted for several years may be assessed for each of the years;³⁴ and such assessment may be made at any time before the right to assess and collect taxes is barred by limitations.³⁵ It has been held to be immaterial that the municipal assessor had knowledge of the existence of such property during the years when it was omitted from the assessment rolls.³⁶ The fact that the property is not taxable at the time the assessment is made will not affect the city's right to list it for the years when it was taxable;³⁷ but the failure to assess property and enter it on the assessment rolls, where such failure is due to a statutory suspension of authority to assess such property in prior years because of its assessment by the state tax commission, which assessment was set aside as erroneous, is not such an omission as is contemplated by the statute providing for the assessment of property omitted from the assessment roll of the preceding year.³⁸

One paying a tax on property erroneously placed on an assessment list, where it does not belong, and omitted from the proper list, is entitled to the protection afforded by a limitation provision contained in a statute relating to the correction of erroneous assessment,³⁹ and is not subject thereafter to be proceeded against under the statute relating to omitted property.⁴⁰ On the other hand, a taxpayer, not otherwise protected, cannot escape liability for taxes on omitted property by alleging that the omission was due to his own,⁴¹ or the city's,⁴² mistake, or by showing that, at the time the omitted property should have been assessed, he had listed all the property with the assessor which the latter deemed subject to assessment.⁴³ The fact that property was placed on the unrendered roll and the name of the owner thereof was not shown would not make a tax subsequently entered against the property invalid.⁴⁴

Omitted intangible property. Under a statute so providing, omitted intangible property may not be assessed for years prior to a certain specified date.⁴⁵

c. Proceedings to Place on List or Assess

Statutes prescribing the procedure for placing omitted property on the assessment list or for subjecting such property to assessment for years during which it was not assessed must be complied with.

The city council may act directly to correct the omission,⁴⁷ and, if the omission is corrected by a board having no authority to assess, the adoption of such action by the officer who is authorized to assess after notice to the owner cures the irregularity.⁴⁸ The taxpayer cannot successfully resist the placing of his omitted property on the assessment roll by claiming an exemption where it appears that, under the terms of the exemption statute, he is not entitled thereto,⁴⁹ or by alleging an agreement with city officials that the property should be omitted, where the officials had no authority under the law to make such agreement.⁵⁰ Thus, where property had been erroneously considered exempt by the municipal taxing authorities, the owner of the property may not avoid a back assessment finally made, on the ground that it would impose an unjustifiable burden requiring readjustment of finances in order to pay the taxes.⁵¹ The taxpayer may have no right to an appeal from the decision placing the property on the list.⁵²

The omitted property must be described with sufficient particularity to identify it;⁵³ but it is incumbent on the taxpayer relying on the insufficiency of the description to show that he did not know and could not know from the description what property was meant.⁵⁴ It is essential that the taxpayer be given proper notice in accordance with the statutory requirements of the time and place for the hearing of objections to the assessment.⁵⁵ However, the owner of the property cannot complain of a failure to notify him of the assessment where it appears that he had knowledge thereof,⁵⁶ or where he does not claim that the value of the property was improperly assessed⁵⁷ or that any injury was suffered from the failure to give notice.⁵⁸

Direct action in courts. Under statutes so providing, some municipalities may proceed against omitted property by a direct action in the courts for a judgment against the person liable for the payment of such taxes.⁵⁹ A suit to recover taxes on omitted property for a series of years is based on distinct causes of action for each year,⁶⁰ which may properly be joined in a single suit.⁶¹

Poll taxes must be assessed in accordance with statutes authorizing such taxes.

Poll taxes must be assessed by municipalities in accordance with the statutes authorizing such taxes.⁶² The assessor may generally be required to ascertain the names of all persons liable to a poll tax,⁶³ and enter them on the roll.⁶⁴ If a poll tax is assessed on a person exempt from such tax, as by reason of age, infirmity, and poverty, or on a person not an inhabitant of the municipality, the assessors may, of their own motion, abate it.⁶⁵

§ 2052. — Notice and Hearing

There must be a compliance with statutes and charters providing for notice and a hearing before the assessment becomes final.

Since, under the due process clauses of the state and federal constitutions, a taxpayer is entitled to notice of a municipal assessment and an opportunity to be heard by the assessors, as discussed in Constitutional Law § 650 a, a statute or charter authorizing assessments which fails to provide for notice and a hearing before the assessment becomes final is invalid, even though it provides for an appeal from the assessment.⁶⁶ However, where notice and opportunity for a hearing before the assessment becomes final are provided for, the constitutional requirement of due process of law is met.⁶⁷ The right to a hearing includes the right to submit evidence to support the taxpayer's objections.⁶⁸ A failure to give notice as required is a jurisdictional defect,⁶⁹ and fatal to the recovery of taxes based on the assessment;⁷⁰ but, if the assessment roll or books are deposited as the statute requires, an erroneous statement by a city official as to the time when the assessment would be made up will not invalidate the act.⁷¹

Under a statute requiring the service of notice "upon each person residing in the town whose property has been assessed," nonresidents are not entitled to notice.⁷² It has been held that, where the owners of property have failed to make return or have returned the property at a value deemed to be too low, such property may be assessed without notice to such owner;⁷³ but the owner is required to be given notice after the assessment has been made.⁷⁴ It has been held, in the absence of provisions designating some other mode of giving notice, that notice is sufficiently given by the mailing of notices to persons entitled thereto,⁷⁵ the leaving of notices at the owners' residences,⁷⁶ or publication in the proper paper;⁷⁷ and, under some statutes, the filing of the assessment roll is itself notice of such fact⁷⁸ and of the contents of the roll.⁷⁹

Filing of affidavits or other proof of notice. It is held that it is improper to admit in evidence affidavits as to the posting and serving of notices and the completing and filing of assessment rolls not duly filed, but produced and filed later.⁸⁰ However, it is also held that, where filing is not required, absence of proof of notice on file raises no presumption that the required notice was not given.⁸¹ Where the minutes of a city recite that the date for hearing objections to the assessment rolls had been duly fixed, and that such order had been duly published and advertised, it will be presumed that such order was made, even though it was not recorded in the minutes.⁸²

Requisites and sufficiency of objections. Objections to assessments of a municipal tax filed with the assessor need not be expressed with the same particularity required of a petition in a judicial proceeding,⁸³ although the grounds must be presented to the assessor in intelligible form.⁸⁴

§ 2053. Assessment Rolls, Books, and Warrants

In accordance with provisions relating to assessment rolls, the rolls are generally required to be signed, verified, and filed or deposited with a designated officer for public inspection.

While statutory, charter, and ordinance provisions as to the form and contents of the tax or assessment roll should be complied with,⁸⁵ mere errors or irregularities will not ordinarily affect the validity of the assessment,⁸⁶ particularly where the irregularities constitute a failure to follow directory, rather than mandatory, provisions;⁸⁷ and a manifest clerical error will not invalidate the assessment.⁸⁸ Under some statutes, the assessing officer must make an original and a copy of the assessment rolls,⁸⁹ and provisions specifying a time for the completion of the assessment roll and for grievance days have been held to be valid.⁹⁰ The assessment roll and tax levy are distinct,⁹¹ and, under the statutes, particular matters to be included in the latter are not necessarily to be included in the former.⁹² Where municipal taxes are collected by the county in which the municipality is situated, it is the duty of the county taxing officers to compute and extend the municipal taxes on the general tax rolls.⁹³

Signing and verification. While a signing and an authentication of a municipality's assessment roll are not necessary if they are not expressly required by statute,⁹⁴ they are necessary where they are so required.⁹⁵ Accordingly, a failure to comply with such statute has been held to be fatal to the validity of any further proceedings dependent on the legality of the assessment,⁹⁶ unless there is a curative statute validating and curing such omission;⁹⁷ and it has been held that, if the assessment roll fails to have attached to it the taxing officer's certificate or verification,⁹⁸ or if the certificate or verification attached is materially defective,⁹⁹ the taxes are illegally assessed and all proceedings thereunder are void. However, in some jurisdictions, the statutory requirement that the assessors sign the certificate of assessment is directory only,¹ so that a failure of some,² or all,³ of the assessors to sign does not invalidate the assessment.

While an incomplete verification has been held not to be sufficient,⁴ it is not necessary that the signature⁵ or verification⁶ should follow any particular form in the absence of express statutory requirements with respect thereto; nor, in the absence of express statutory requirement, is it necessary that the tax books should embody the verification elsewhere required in the statute.⁷ A taxpayer cannot complain of a failure to verify the roll after it has been approved by the council where the statute provides that such failure is immaterial in such circumstances.⁸ Statutes relating to state and county taxes, and requiring authentication and a warrant to the tax collector, have been held not applicable to municipal taxes.⁹

pleted, or a copy thereof, shall be filed with,¹⁰ or delivered to,¹¹ a designated officer, or be left with him a certain time for public inspection,¹² or be left at the assessor's office for that purpose.¹³ The failure of the assessing officer to make and lodge a record of the assessments with the designated officer, as required by statute, has been held not to invalidate the assessment,¹⁴ where an otherwise satisfactory record was filed;¹⁵ and, where such a record was filed, the absence of a certificate that the appraisers took the oath required by statute will not invalidate the assessment.¹⁶ A charter or statutory provision requiring the filing, in a municipal office, of the court's order confirming the assessment roll is not unconstitutional.¹⁷

In some jurisdictions the statutory requirement that the assessors deliver the assessment on a particular day is directory only,¹⁸ so that a failure to deposit the assessment roll on the day stated does not invalidate the assessment.¹⁹ In any event, a taxpayer cannot complain of delay in the depositing of the assessment roll if he is not prejudiced thereby.²⁰ The temporary removal of the roll or books to the office of another city officer for lawful and necessary purposes will not be regarded as a suspension or prevention of the invited inspection.²¹ In the absence of express statutory requirement it is not necessary that the city clerk should indorse

the filing on the assessment roll in the absence of a statute requiring him to do so.²²

Tax warrant. The tax warrant is generally required to be signed²³ and sealed.²⁴ Where the statute permits a signature by a deputy on certain contingencies, a presumption arises in favor of the regularity of his signature;²⁵ and it has been held that a tax collector's warrant given under the hand of the assessor is evidence from which a court can find that a proper and valid assessment of municipal taxes has been made.²⁶ Under a statute providing that any acts of omission or commission on the part of a tax assessor may be corrected at any time, the failure of an assessor to annex the statutory warrant does not render the assessment roll void;²⁷ and the assessor may annex the warrant at any time, and the omission will in no way affect any process provided by law for the enforcement of the collection of any such tax.²⁸

Operation and effect. Under a statute so providing, on and after the specified date in each year, the roll, completed as required, becomes the roll for the current year.²⁹ When it is verified and filed on or before the specified date, the roll constitutes the basis on which the tax is imposed,³⁰ and there is no power to alter or change it.³¹ It has been held that a tax bill authenticated by the assessor by his signature is prima facie proof that all steps have been taken to make it binding;³² and affidavits annexed to the assessment roll that it is correct have been held conclusive of the fact recited as against a collateral attack.³³ It has also been held that an assessment roll is conclusive as to persons and property for apportioning the sums to be raised by the taxation.³⁴

§ 2054. Equalization and Review of Assessment

Generally, the legislature may provide for a board to review the work of the assessors, and the nature of such body, the right of appeal thereto, and the personnel thereof depend on statutory provisions.

Within constitutional limitations,³⁵ it is within the power of the legislature to provide an exclusive method of reviewing assessments;³⁶ and, where the legislature has provided an exclusive method, that method only can be followed.³⁷ In the exercise of its power, the legislature may provide by statute or charter for a board to review the work of the assessors, either for the correction of errors and inequalities of individual assessments or for equalization after examination of the assessment as an entirety.³⁸ The law relating to the review of assessments is remedial.³⁹

A constitutional provision requiring that the legislature provide for equalizing the valuation of property subject to taxation has been held to apply to municipalities;⁴⁰ and it is the duty of the legislature to provide for the equalization of taxes in municipalities by setting up boards for that purpose.⁴¹ However, such duty has been held to be discharged by a statute granting eligible cities the power of self-government and authorizing them to provide for the levying of ad valorem taxes not inconsistent with the constitution,⁴² since such a city has the authority and duty to create a board of equalization.⁴³ A properly created board of equalization is a legal body;⁴⁴ and even where a board of equalization is a de facto board, its action, if proper, is legal.⁴⁵ While a board of revision hearing an appeal from a municipal assessment is a quasi-judicial body,⁴⁶ a city council sitting as a board of revision performs the functions of, and acts as, an administrative body,⁴⁷ and is subject to rules governing the actions of administrative bodies generally.⁴⁸

Statutory or charter provisions relating to appeals from the decisions of the tax assessor to the board of assessment review are invalid if they discriminate unreasonably between aggrieved taxpayers as to the right to appeal.⁴⁹ Under a statute so providing, the right to the review of an assessment is open to any person claiming to be aggrieved thereby.⁵⁰ Under a statute providing for review of assessments by the state tax commission, review of assessments of the property of others may be had at the request of any taxpayer.⁵¹

Personnel, qualifications, and appointment of reviewing authorities. Statutory restrictions as to the personnel or qualifications of members of the board of review must be complied with;⁵² and charter provisions respecting the personnel of a board of equalization are controlled by the constitution and the general laws.⁵³ An appointment may be made only by the board or body vested with authority to do so by a valid statute in force at the time of the appointment;⁵⁴ and statutes providing for the appointment of members of a board of review must conform to constitutional provisions.⁵⁵ Thus, a statute has been held to be unconstitutional which provides for the appointment of members of a municipality's board of review by state officers,⁵⁶ or by officers on whom such duties constituting a public trust may not be placed.⁵⁷

The chairman or presiding officer of the board of review need not be a member of the board.⁵⁸ Where it is provided that the town council shall act as the local board of review, it will be presumed in the absence of a contrary showing that the mayor presides over board meetings as well as meetings of the council,⁵⁹ even though the council does not act as such while sitting as the local board of review.⁶⁰

§ 2055. — Jurisdiction and Power

The power of boards or officers to review or equalize municipal assessments is determined by, and must be exercised in accordance with, the terms of the constitution or statute under which they act.

they act.⁶¹ Generally, under authority granted by statute, the local board of equalization may increase⁶² or reduce⁶³ the valuation of any particular property, and may act on a reassessment made after the original assessment was found to be invalid.⁶⁴ Also, where property, physically united, is owned by two or more persons separately, the board may, on application, divide and apportion the assessment made on the entire property among the separate owners.⁶⁵

On the other hand, in the absence of statutory authority, the local board does not possess power arbitrarily to reduce or remit a particular assessment after the levy and assessment have been made,⁶⁶ especially after the delivery of the roll to the collector;⁶⁷ and authority to equalize conferred on local boards does not carry with it by implication a power to determine whether particular property is subject to the tax;⁶⁸ nor does mere power to equalize confer authority to raise the assessed value of all the property in the municipality a certain per cent,⁶⁹ or to group several lots into one parcel and equalize the assessments in a single sum for each year against the group.⁷⁰

It has been held that a city council may assume the burden and perform the duties of a board of equalization;⁷¹ and a council so doing constitutes at least a de facto board of equalization.⁷² Power conferred on the mayor and aldermen to levy, assess, and collect taxes through a city assessor authorizes them to amend an assessment so made;⁷³ and, under a statute authorizing the common council to abate any tax where good cause therefor is shown, the council may abate a tax where the person against whom the assessment is made has become insolvent since the assessment.⁷⁴

Under a statute so providing, the board of trustees may cause a mistake in the assessment roll to be rectified.⁷⁵ However, where the assessor alone has the power to assess, and there is no provision in the statute authorizing the council, or the mayor, and aldermen, to change or otherwise interfere with the values returned by the assessor, they have no power to raise or otherwise amend the assessment.⁷⁶ There is no implied power in a city official to reduce an assessment, where the express authority on which the implied power is claimed to rest is held to have no existence.⁷⁷ Under statutes so providing, the state tax commission, on proper application, has jurisdiction to review and increase an assessment.⁷⁸ The lack of power of the board of assessment review to modify tax rolls because of the invalidity of the statute authorizing such review would not affect assessments confirmed by the city council which has final authority to amend and confirm all portions of the rolls;⁷⁹ but the council is not required to hear complaints of aggrieved taxpayers, notwithstanding such authority.⁸⁰

Time during which power continues. The power of a board or officer to review or equalize municipal assessments is restricted to and must be exercised during the period prescribed therefor by the constitution or statutes;⁸¹ and the failure of a board to render a judgment within a prescribed period deprives it of jurisdiction in the case,⁸² so that a judgment rendered after such period is void.⁸³

83. N.J.—Toone v. City of Camden, supra.

Moreover, the power is exhausted when the determination of the board with respect to a particular assessment has been recorded.⁸⁴

Conditions. Under provisions to that effect, application to the assessor for a correction of the assessment is a condition precedent to redress by the board of assessment review.⁸⁵ In some jurisdictions the board of review is authorized to make alterations of its own motion;⁸⁶ but, in other jurisdictions, the board can act only after notice has been given to the taxpayer, as discussed infra, § 2056 d, or after complaint has been made by him.⁸⁷ In some jurisdictions it cannot increase an assessment without a hearing⁸⁸ and the introduction of evidence.⁸⁹ Where the board of review is shown to have jurisdiction over the subject matter, it cannot condemn the assessment in the absence of evidence to impeach it;⁹⁰ and, even where there is some evidence to impeach the assessment, the board has jurisdiction to sustain it, if there is any evidence which, in any reasonable view of it, justifies that course.⁹¹

Adoption of outside assessment. Sometimes a statute giving a city authority to adopt the state list and to levy taxes thereon, and adoption by the city of such list, does not subject the city to subsequent equalizations by the state board for state taxes.⁹² However, where an equalization of taxes by a state board is made binding on city boards of equalization, the latter have no authority to increase or reduce the state board assessment on particular property, since its function is purely ministerial after the state board has acted.⁹³ A taxpayer cannot object to the classification adopted by the state board in making its assessment under a statutory authority to do so.⁹⁴ The taxpayer's remedy is by injunction if the local authorities transcend their power and levy a tax based on the full state assessment value against some, and only on a percentage of the state assessment value against others.⁹⁵

- b. Limitation of time
- c. Form and contents of application
- d. Notice, meetings, and records

a. In General

The procedure of the board of review or the city council acting as such must comply with charter or statutory provisions.

The procedure of the board of review⁹⁶ or of the city council acting as such⁹⁷ must be in strict compliance with the statutory or charter provisions. The taxpayer cannot claim the benefits of a procedure not granted him by the statute,⁹⁸ as, for example, an arbitration,⁹⁹ or an auction sale, the highest bids received to determine the true valuation.¹ A system of procedure contained in a city charter prevails over that contained in the general tax law where the two systems are inconsistent;² and statutes specifically applying to certain municipalities prevail over general taxing statutes;³ and, within the tax law or the charter, specific provisions relating to procedure prevail over general provisions.⁴

An appeal from an assessment, or an application for an abatement of taxes, must be made within the period fixed by the statute of limitations.

An appeal from an assessment must be filed within the period fixed by the statute of limitations,⁵ and the assessment becomes conclusive and binding if the appeal is not filed within such time.⁶ The statute begins to run from the time the assessment is approved,⁷ and not from the time it is made.⁸ In some jurisdictions, a statutory provision fixing the time for the completion of work by the board of review is directory only.⁹

An application for an abatement of taxes must be made within the period prescribed in the statute providing for such remedy;¹⁰ and, as discussed infra subdivision f of this section, the municipal board of assessors cannot waive that requirement. The right to appeal to an appellate tax board from the denial of, or refusal to consider, an application for abatement of taxes may also be barred by the failure to appeal within the period prescribed by statute.¹¹

Charter or statutory provisions as to the form and contents of an application to correct an assessment are controlling and must be complied with.

Charter or statutory provisions as to the formal requisites,¹² or the contents,¹³ of an application to correct an assessment are controlling and must be complied with. In the absence of a provision to that effect, an application for review or correction of assessment need not be in writing,¹⁴ or under oath,¹⁵ or subscribed by the signature of the taxpayer.¹⁶ However, under some statutory or charter provisions the protest or application for correction of an assessment must be made in writing,¹⁷ and signed,¹⁸ and sworn to,¹⁹ in the manner prescribed; and life cannot be given to the document by permitting an amendment of it to correct the deficiency.²⁰

The application in a proceeding to reduce or abate an assessment should state the objections to the assessment and the grounds therefor.²¹ It is not necessary that the application for a review should state the market value of the property,²² an allegation that the assessment is incorrect and based on an overvaluation being sufficient.²³ Moreover, the failure to state the specific value or overvaluation, if a defect at all, is a mere procedural defect which may be corrected.²⁴ The landowner cannot raise the objection that the assessment on his property is unequal and unjust as compared with other assessments where his application for a review contains no statement of specific inequality.²⁵ A proceeding by the assessors to rectify a mistake may be merged with a property owner's complaint that the valuation contended for was too high.²⁶

The board of review must act at a regular, or regularly adjourned, meeting, and must give notice of an increase in an assessment.

The board of review must act at a regular meeting,²⁷ or at a regularly adjourned meeting,²⁸ at the time and place prescribed by law and fixed by the notice given.²⁹ Usually notice of the sittings must be duly given;³⁰ but in some jurisdictions it is not required,³¹ as in jurisdictions where there are provisions that a review of the assessment shall be made at the regular meeting of the board to be held on a fixed day.³² If all members of the board have been notified of the meeting, the action of a majority at such meeting is legal.³³

Notice of increase. It is usually expressly provided that notice of an increase of an assessment on particular property must be given before the increase will become effectual;³⁴ but, if notice is given of a meeting at which equalization of property generally will be considered, additional notices to the particular owners affected by increases before such increases are made is not required;³⁵ and, where under the statute the assessed value of corporate stock is to be its market value minus the value of real estate, owned by the corporation already assessed, an increase in assessed value of stock resulting not from an increase in the gross valuation, but from a decrease in the real estate assessment, is not an increase in valuation within the meaning of the statute requiring notice.³⁶

The requisites and sufficiency of the notice of change in assessment are determined by the statutory or charter provisions;³⁷ but it has been held that it is sufficient if the requirement is substantially complied with and the taxpayer is not deprived of any rights.³⁸ Where notice is required, it is properly given to a person who is a life tenant of the property and trustee for the remaindermen.³⁹ Where the taxpayer has been given proper notice, the fact that he does not appear before the board of equalization to protest an increased assessment and present evidence as to a proper assessment does not affect the validity of an increase granted by the board.⁴⁰

Records. The board of review must keep a record of its proceedings if the statute so provides,⁴¹ but not otherwise.⁴²

e. Scope of Review; Hearing; Decision

An appeal from the decision of tax assessors is triable de novo. The taxpayer is entitled to a hearing, and general rules of evidence are applicable. The board's decision is not ordinarily subject to collateral attack.

Under charter or statutory provisions to that effect, an appeal from the decision of tax assessors to a board of tax review,⁴³ or to the mayor and city council,⁴⁴ contemplates a de novo trial of all the issues presented by the petition and answer. The taxpayer must give to the board full and truthful information touching all matters that will enable it to arrive at a correct valuation of the property;⁴⁵ and, while it is the duty of the board of equalization on request to furnish to the taxpayer the facts and figures on which it proposes to estimate the value of the property,⁴⁶ and information as to the method which it will employ in arriving at its conclusion,⁴⁷ it is still incumbent on the taxpayer to make a request for such information if, in the establishment of his case, he relies on the failure of the board to give it to him.⁴⁸

In determining the propriety of the valuation of property made by the municipal assessor, the board of tax appeals is required to use the same standard of valuation used by the original assessor.⁴⁹ A charge of discrimination in municipal assessments cannot be sustained unless it is predicated on the relative assessments of two or more properties.⁵⁰

The council, in reviewing an assessment, cannot add property belonging to the taxpayer which was not a part of the city at the time the assessment roll was completed.⁵¹

Hearing, evidence, and findings. The appealing taxpayer is entitled to a hearing,⁵² and has the right to introduce evidence thereon.⁵³ More specifically, the tribunal should give applicant an opportunity to supply particulars of his claim of overvaluation as set out in his application.⁵⁴ Where a taxpayer appeals to the board of equalization to correct errors in the assessment, every presumption is to be taken in favor of the regularity of the assessment,⁵⁵ which will not be disturbed unless clearly excessive;⁵⁶ and the burden is on the taxpayer to point out the error to the board.⁵⁷ However, where there are inconsistencies in assessments, the board of tax appeals will consider the issues on the basis of the evidence adduced before it, aside from the usual presumptions as to the correctness of assessments and local board determinations.⁵⁸ Rules governing such matters in civil actions generally have been applied in proceedings to review an assessment with respect to the admissibility of evidence,⁵⁹ and the weight and sufficiency thereof.⁶⁰ The findings of an appellate tax board must conform to the evidence, the facts, and rules of law.⁶¹

Operation and effect of decision. The decision of the board is final,⁶² subject only to review by the court in a proper case, as discussed infra § 2057. Its action is judicial and not subject to collateral attack,⁶³ except for want of jurisdiction;⁶⁴ or for fraud;⁶⁵ or something equivalent thereto;⁶⁶ or for an abuse of discretion;⁶⁷ or where the proceedings are void;⁶⁸ or, where the statute permits it, for gross injustice or mistake.⁶⁹ Since a proceeding by the assessors to rectify a mistake may be merged with the property owner's complaint that the valuation contended for was too high, after the decision in such proceeding the property owner cannot maintain a separate proceeding to change the valuation placed on his property.⁷⁰ If the decision is illegally made in violation of a constitutional requirement, it is void,⁷¹ and leaves the original assessment in force if the latter is itself within the constitutional limitations.⁷²

f. Irregularities and Waiver

Under some statutes irregularities in assessment or review which do not affect the board's jurisdiction or the rights of the property owner do not invalidate the assessment; and various defects may be waived.

Under the statutes in force in some jurisdictions, irregularities in the assessment, or review thereof, which do not affect the jurisdiction of the board and do not prejudice the property rights of the owner do not invalidate the assessment;⁷³ but an irregularity in the procedure affecting the jurisdiction of the board is fatal.⁷⁴ Proceeding to a hearing on the merits constitutes a waiver on the part of the city of alleged defects in the application of the taxpayer,⁷⁵ at least as to defects that are not jurisdictional;⁷⁶ and proceeding to a hearing on the merits also constitutes a waiver by the taxpayer of notice of an increase in his assessment by the board,⁷⁷ or of alleged defects in or respecting such notice.⁷⁸

So, also, the action of a municipal tax commission in refusing to allow an applicant to present the particulars of his claim of overvaluation as set out in the application constitutes a waiver of any defect in the application in failing to set out a specific claimed value.⁷⁹ However, an appearance of a taxpayer before a committee acting merely in an advisory capacity to the board does not operate as a waiver of notice of the action of the board on the committee's report.⁸⁰ The requirement that an application for abatement of taxes must be made within the prescribed period cannot be waived by the municipal authorities;⁸¹ nor can a statutory requirement that the application be made under oath be so waived.⁸² The fact that the taxpayer had filed an application for review of the assessment by the board of review would not bar him from attacking the authority of such board, where the board was created by a void statute.⁸³

Liability on different appeals

Where trial as held in district

a. In General

Various remedies, depending on the provisions of the statutes, are available to review or correct assessments, including appeal, certiorari, and injunction; and under some statutes the particular remedies are exclusive.

Where a statute or charter provides for an application to a court for relief in certain cases involving a municipal tax assessment, the remedy so provided is available where the case falls within the terms of the statute or charter,⁸⁴ and such procedure may be exclusive⁸⁵ so that provisions of general statutes do not apply.⁸⁶ It has been held that the municipality, under the grant by the legislature of the taxing power, may restrict the taxpayer to a particular method of judicial review of his tax liability,⁸⁷ provided such restriction does not substantially deprive the taxpayer of his right to relief.⁸⁸ In a proper case, as where property is in the hands of a bankruptcy receiver, the federal courts may determine the validity of a municipal assessment.⁸⁹ General rules have been applied in determining liability for costs in judicial proceedings for the review of municipal assessments.⁹⁰

Appeal. While it is otherwise in some jurisdictions,⁹¹ it is generally held that the decisions of the board of equalization or review are subject to review by the courts on appeal,⁹² at least in cer-court in taxpayer's proceeding to review tax valuations of city board of equalization was induced by provision of city charter making court's judgment final, and was influenced by exceptions urged by board, board was required to pay costs incurred in court of civil appeals and district court, and taxpayer was required to pay costs incurred before the commission of appeals, which determined that charter provision was invalid.—Board of Equalization of City of Fort Worth v. McDonald, supra.

tain cases.⁹³ In some jurisdictions, under statutes so providing, judgments of, or proceedings before, a county board of taxation may be appealed to the state board of tax appeals.⁹⁴ It has been held that the refusal of an assessment board to reconsider its former final decision is not reviewable on appeal.⁹⁵ Provision is made in some states for trial of the cause anew on appeal.⁹⁶ On a single appeal from assessments on different parcels, the entire assessment is reviewed.⁹⁷

Certiorari. Unless another adequate remedy is provided by statute,⁹⁸ certiorari lies to review the decision of the board,⁹⁹ or to review and cancel an illegal assessment,¹ in respect of jurisdictional questions,² but not in respect of other matters,³ such as discretionary acts of the board.⁴ Under some statutes the procedure for review of assessments is limited exclusively to the writ of certiorari;⁵ and, under a provision to that effect, the proceeding to review an assessment by writ of certiorari is in form a special proceeding,⁶ although in some respects it resembles an action in the sense that it is a proceeding to review de novo.⁷ In so far as tax statutes regulate the practice and use of the writ of certiorari in tax cases, the provisions thereof are exclusive and override the provisions of general statutes relating to the writ;⁸ but as to matters with respect to which the taxing statutes are silent the general statutes are effective.⁹ Certiorari is also the proper remedy, in the absence of special equities or acts ultra vires, to attack the apportionment of tax liens by a municipal taxing body.¹⁰

Injunction. In a proper case a taxpayer may institute proceedings to restrain an illegal assessment.¹¹ Relief by injunction may be granted to the taxpayer where he has no statutory remedy to correct an illegal or excessive assessment;¹² but where a remedy at law under the statute exists an injunction will not be granted.¹³

Other remedies. In addition to the foregoing remedies, other remedies held to be available to a taxpayer for the review and correction of assessments include an action to review, reduce, or abate an assessment,¹⁴ and an action to cancel or vacate an assessment.¹⁵

b. Persons Entitled to Relief

In order to be entitled to relief, a taxpayer must show an interest in the property taxed and that he was aggrieved by the assessment; and the municipal corporation may also appeal from an adverse decision.

A taxpayer, in order to bring himself within the terms of a statute allowing persons aggrieved to appeal or petition for a writ of certiorari, must show an interest in the property taxed¹⁶ and that he was aggrieved by the assessment,¹⁷ that is, either that he was not liable for the tax at all¹⁸ or that the amount of the tax was excessive.¹⁹ Mere proof of illegality of the tax apart from its relation to the objecting taxpayer is not sufficient.²⁰ A taxpayer who establishes that his property has been taxed at more than its full value is aggrieved and entitled to redress,²¹ since it will be presumed that the assessing officers, in the performance of their duties, complied with the statutes and did not similarly overvalue other properties in the municipality.²² Payment of a tax, when proved, establishes the right of the person who paid the tax to resist a reassessment to cure an alleged irregularity in the original assessment.²³

Appeal by municipality. The municipality ordinarily may appeal from an adverse decision of a tax review board.²⁴

c. Limitations and Laches

Proceedings to review or correct assessments must be brought within the time limited by statute, if any; and apart from statute the right to bring such proceedings may be barred by laches or unreasonable delay.

An appeal from an assessment board to the courts must be taken within the period prescribed by statute;²⁵ and the rule also applies to certiorari proceedings.²⁶ So also, an action to review or reduce an assessment or abate the tax may not be begun after the time limited by statute,²⁷ even though the assessments are grossly excessive,²⁸ and conditions precedent have been complied with,²⁹ unless the delay is due to the act of the assessor.³⁰ An action to cancel or vacate an assessment must also be brought within the time limited by statute, if any,³¹ although where the taxpayer has not been given the opportunities required by law the action lies even after the expiration of the time prescribed for bringing it.³²

In accordance with the provisions of general statutes of limitations, if a proceeding, begun within the statutory period, is terminated for a reason other than that specified in the statute, a new proceeding can be commenced notwithstanding the expiration of the statutory period.³³ Where the taxpayer is itself a municipality, it is not chargeable with the laches of its official in attacking the assessment on its property within the boundaries of another municipality.³⁴ In the absence of statutory provisions to the contrary, or laches, or special circumstances creating an estoppel, a taxpayer may question the validity of an assessment at any time prior to the issuance of a tax deed.³⁵

Laches; delay. Apart from statutes of limitation, the right to institute various legal and equitable remedies to have an assessment declared invalid may be barred by laches or unreasonable delay;³⁶ and the rule applies to the remedy of certiorari,³⁷ and to an action to reduce an assessment.³⁸ Proceedings to restrain an illegal assessment come too late if delayed until the tax has been assessed and expenditure begun.³⁹

d. Conditions Precedent; Notice

It is an essential condition to judicial review of municipal assessments that the taxpayer must have complied with statutes relating to the original making of the assessment and must have sought revision of the assessment by a board of equalization or review. Notice of the review proceeding must be given to the municipal corporation or the board.

It has been held that a taxpayer may not seek a judicial review or correction of assessments unless he has complied with statutes relating to the making of the assessment by the municipal assessor⁴⁰ and that certiorari should not be allowed

Remedies held barred

Where property owners failed to avail themselves of the opportunities offered by law of protesting valuations fixed on their property by the taxing authorities of the city and allowed the authorities to proceed to making up of tax rolls without resorting to the remedy provided by law and permitted several years to elapse during which affairs of city were conducted on presumption that finality had attached to acts of board of equalization and expenditures had been made in such reliance, property owners could not challenge validity of tax assessments on ground that assessment of property was wrong in that taxing authorities disregarded rental value of property.—*Mississippi Valley Life Ins. in tax cases except on payment of the taxes conceded to be due.⁴¹ A taxpayer cannot claim inequality of assessments, or relief therefrom, in a court of law unless he has first sought a revision by a board of equalization or review,⁴² the law imposing on him the duty of taking the initiative in bringing the matter to a hearing.⁴³ He cannot escape the operation of this rule by claiming that the board was not regularly appointed,⁴⁴ especially where a statute provides that, when the taxpayer complains of his assessment, a board shall then be chosen if none has been elected theretofore.⁴⁵ The rule does not apply, however, if no relief of a substantial and definite kind can be had by application to the board.⁴⁶ Thus, where a provision authorizing an appeal to the board of review is invalid, application to the board is not a prerequisite to the maintenance of certiorari proceedings to review a tax assessment;⁴⁷ and, where it is not mandatory on the city council to hear taxpayers' objections, application to the council is not a condition precedent to the right to a writ of certiorari.⁴⁸ Also, under some statutes the rule does not apply to cases of fraud, gross injustice, or mistake.⁴⁹

Notice. Where an appeal is taken from a decision of a board of review, it is essential to the jurisdiction of the court that a notice of appeal conforming to the statutory requirements be served⁵⁰ within the time prescribed⁵¹ and on the officer designated⁵² by statute. Notice should also be given of the hearing on appeal from the assessment⁵³ unless such notice is waived.⁵⁴ It has been held that certiorari should not be allowed in tax cases except on notice to the municipality;⁵⁵ but it has also been held that notice of the initial application of a taxpayer for certiorari is not required to be given to the municipal authorities.⁵⁶

e. Parties

The omission of necessary parties to an action or proceeding to review an assessment is a fatal defect.

Where necessary parties are not made parties to an action or proceeding for a judicial review of an assessment the procedure is fatally defective;⁵⁷ but in a proper case the court may permit an amendment to bring in a necessary party⁵⁸ unless the time for beginning the proceeding under the statute of limitations has expired.⁵⁹ Where assessments are attacked as discriminatory, other persons whose property was allegedly undervalued are necessary parties;⁶⁰ and failure to make such persons parties renders the procedure fatally defective.⁶¹ A number of appeals from municipal assessments by different owners of property may properly be heard together by the court.⁶²

Municipal officers or boards. Municipal officers who participated in the making of the assessment are necessary parties to the proceeding for review of the assessment;⁶³ and, where the tax rolls were confirmed by the city council, the council is a necessary party to the proceedings.⁶⁴ On the other hand, officers who do not participate in making assessments are not necessary parties to a certiorari proceeding;⁶⁵ and, where no application to the board of assessment review was made or required, it is unnecessary to join the board as a party to certiorari proceedings to review tax assessments.⁶⁶

Real party in interest. Where a statute requires actions to be in the name of the real party in interest, in an action to invalidate an increased assessment the city itself must be made a party;⁶⁷ and it is insufficient to bring an action against the municipal officials, whether as individuals or officers.⁶⁸

f. Pleadings

Rules governing pleadings in civil actions generally

apply to pleadings in actions or proceedings to review assessments in the absence of statutes specifically relating thereto.

Except in so far as there may be statutes specifically relating thereto, which must be complied with,⁶⁹ rules governing pleadings in civil actions generally have been applied to pleadings in actions or proceedings to review assessments.⁷⁰ Where required, the application or pleading must be in writing under oath.⁷¹ There must be a compliance with statutory requirements as to service of a petition of appeal.⁷²

In a petition in certiorari proceedings to review tax assessments, the allegations and claims should be definite;⁷³ and it must clearly specify the value of the property in issue⁷⁴ in so far as the owner is able to do so.⁷⁵

The petition must contain or express the fact that the relator is or will be injured by the assessment;⁷⁶ but, while such express allegation must appear where the ground of objection is inequality in assessment,⁷⁷ it need not appear where the petition is based on overvaluation, since injury is presumed in such case.⁷⁸ It must properly state the objections filed with the assessor,⁷⁹ and that the grounds for the petition were properly presented to the assessing officer.⁸⁰ Under a charter making inequality of assessments of real estate a basis for correction, the petition must allege inequality between the valuation of the property and the valuation of other pieces of real estate in the municipality.⁸¹

An amendment of a pleading in an action or proceeding to review a municipal assessment may be allowed in a proper case;⁸² but if the application to amend is untimely made an amendment cannot be allowed except for extraordinary cause.⁸³ Defects in pleadings that are not jurisdictional may be waived by proceeding to hear the case on the merits.⁸⁴

The writ of certiorari should take up the last judgment in the case⁸⁵ and should command that the return include all material data and the statement of the reasons for, and the methods adopted in arriving at, the amount of the assessment.⁸⁶ It is not necessary that the writ enumerate the names of the members of the city council where statute does not require service on each member,⁸⁷ but the writ should be properly served.⁸⁸ The municipality should make a return at the time and place specified;⁸⁹ and, where review of the decision of a tribunal ostensibly charged with the duty of reviewing the assessment is sought, the tribunal should make the return and proceed with the review, and save any special questions as to validity until after the final order is granted.⁹⁰

g. Evidence

General rules of evidence have been applied with respect to presumptions and burden of proof, and the admissibility and weight and sufficiency of evidence, in actions or proceedings to review or correct a municipal assessment of property for taxation.

In general, presumptions which would obtain in civil proceedings generally obtain in proceedings to review or correct an assessment;⁹¹ and, in accordance with general rules, the burden is on plaintiff to prove his material allegations,⁹² and the municipality has the burden of establishing matters of defense.⁹³ In states where a complaint is necessary to give jurisdiction to a board of review, no presumption of the existence of a complaint in a particular case arises from the recital in the record on certiorari that the board heard complaints.⁹⁴

Regularity and validity of assessment. There is a presumption in favor of the regularity, validity, and correctness of the assessment to be reviewed;⁹⁵

and the person challenging the assessment has the burden of overcoming that presumption and establishing that the valuation was improper in that it was excessive or unjust or inequitable or not uniform in comparison with other real estate in the district.⁹⁶ Where the appeal is from the action of the board of equalization increasing the assessment, the burden rests on the city to bring forward proof sufficient to sustain the finding of the board.⁹⁷ However, where the presumption in favor of the regularity and validity of an assessment has been overcome by the evidence it ceases to exist,⁹⁸

and the municipality has the burden of producing evidence as to the actual value of the property;⁹⁹ and the court must determine the value of the property from the evidence.¹ While a municipal assessor is presumed to have performed his duty and assessed the land at its full value,² an assessment will be reduced where the taxpayer establishes by sufficient evidence that assessments throughout the tax district were generally made at a per cent of actual value.³

Nature and effect of presumption

In proceeding to review assessment, the presumption in favor of the assessment did not take the place of proof and would vanish completely when taxpayer presented any evidence to challenge the city's figures, and amounted in effect merely to shifting of the burden of proof and of coming forward with it in the first instance.—*People ex rel. view a municipal assessment. Thus, conclusive proof is not required, but a mere preponderance of the credible evidence is sufficient.⁶ The actual value of the property is conclusive as to the assessed value unless the taxpayer's testimony is sufficient to establish that a ratio of assessed value to actual value was applied generally throughout the taxing district.⁷ In determining the appraised value of property, such value must be fixed by the opinion of competent witnesses as to what the property is worth in the market at a fair sale;⁸ and the most cogent evidence of the value of improvements is expert opinion as to the extent to which the presence of the improvements have increased the selling value of the realty over the selling value of the realty were it vacant.⁹

h. Hearing and Determination

The scope of review and the relief granted may depend on the terms of a statute authorizing the proceeding or may be governed by rules relating to civil actions and proceedings generally.

In the absence of statutes providing otherwise, general rules apply in proceedings for injunctive or other relief against the assessment of allegedly illegal taxes.¹⁰ In reviewing assessments as to the value of improvements only, the crucial issue is the extent to which the presence of the improvements increased the selling value of the realty over the selling value of the realty were it vacant.¹¹ Under a statute so providing, only the total assessment can be reviewed,¹² but it has been held that this does not preclude a review by the court of the land and building values fixed by the tax commission.¹³ The issue on appeal has been held to be the true and actual value of the property on the taxing date,¹⁴ and the taxpayer has been held not entitled to relief on the ground that the properties of other taxpayers were assessed at too low a rate.¹⁵ However, it has also been held that the court may and should properly consider the value and assessment of other realty in the same district as the property in issue,¹⁶ and the fact that the tax assessed against a taxpayer's property was based on a valuation in excess of its true valuation will not bar him from showing that other property in the city was assessed, on the average, at less than its true value,¹⁷ since the court must determine the issue of equality, and the amount of the abatement to be allowed, by comparing the ratio between plaintiff's true and assessed valuation with the ratio between the true and assessed value of all other property in the taxing district.¹⁸

The courts are reluctant to and will not interfere with the determination of the assessing officers of the municipality where the action of the officers is compatible with an honest effort to adopt valuations not relatively unjust or unequal;¹⁹ and it has been held that the court cannot disturb findings or an assessment in the absence of a prejudicial error of law.²⁰ Under some provisions a court is without power to set aside an assessment for an irregularity or defect in form or illegality in assessing or levying it,²¹ and it has been held not within the power of the court to correct mere errors of judgment.²² Matters which, although assigned as error, are not argued, may be considered as abandoned.²³

Where the action is tried before a jury, the jury should be limited to the determination of the taxable value of the property in issue,²⁴ and it is not the duty of the jury to find expressly for either the municipality or the taxpayer.²⁵ Where issues are submitted to a jury, the court should properly instruct the jury as to such issues.²⁶

Submission to referee. Where a proceeding to review an assessment is referred by the court to a referee, the referee's report is merely advisory,²⁷ but should not be lightly disregarded;²⁸ and where the record is free from error and the referee's valuation is supported by the evidence it will be confirmed by the court.²⁹

Determination and disposition of cause. In coming to its conclusion the court should consider the effect of its decision on other assessments in the community,³⁰ and should give due and equal consideration to the rights of both the owner and the municipality³¹ and take into consideration the testimony given by both sides.³² Where the court must determine the value of the property, either to correct an assessment or to determine its propriety, it is required to give effect to the rules respecting the methods of, and factors in, evaluating property.³³

The nature of the relief that may be awarded in a proceeding to review municipal assessments depends on the statute and the nature of the proceeding.³⁴ Thus in a certiorari proceeding the court may be limited to setting the assessment aside or determining that it is valid or invalid,³⁵ and may not itself proceed to fix the assessment,³⁶ even on proof of fraud.³⁷ However, a court having plenary jurisdiction in reviewing an assessment may deal with any phase of the matter and render such judgment in the premises as it may think proper,³⁸ regardless of the relief asked.³⁹ The court ordinarily will not invalidate assessments where the record does not contain in its entirety the matters on which appellant bases his grounds for invalidation.⁴⁰ It has also been held that the findings of fact made by a board of tax appeals are final where the evidence heard by the board is not reported to the court.⁴¹ While the court will not reverse the decision of the tax review board for error which is not substantial or not prejudicial to appellant,⁴² an assessment will be reduced, or modified, or set aside where there is clear and convincing proof that it is erroneous,⁴³ but the value of property cannot be fixed below the amount demanded by the taxpayer in his protest,⁴⁴ and the findings of the court must conform to the pleadings and proof.⁴⁵

Dismissal, withdrawal, or abandonment. Whether an appeal should be dismissed may depend on whether the evidence shows that a question of law is involved,⁴⁶ and the court may dismiss an appeal where it finds that the assessor's valuation was correct.⁴⁷ A proceeding to review an assessment may also be dismissed for failure to prosecute it within a specified period.⁴⁸ Where a writ of certiorari is not directed to the last judgment in the case, it may be dismissed.⁴⁹ Under a charter provision to that effect, an appeal pending at the end of the tax year will be dismissed unless the taxpayer pays the taxes,⁵⁰ but if the assessment is reduced on appeal the municipality must refund the excess by warrant on the city;⁵¹ and in a proper case the court will compel the issuance of such warrant.⁵² Where the municipality withdrew its appeal to the state board of tax appeals with the consent and concurrence of the county board, the jurisdiction of the state board over the subject matter of the appeal was concluded, and it could not and would not thereafter entertain an application to set aside the withdrawal and reinstate the appeal.⁵³

Operation and effect of judgment. The operation and effect of a judgment awarded in a statutory proceeding relating to municipal assessments may depend on the terms and the purpose of the statute;⁵⁴ but rules governing the effect of judgments in civil actions generally have also been applied.⁵⁵ Thus, the decision of a constitutional court fixing an assessed valuation is final and a conclusive judgment unless it is superseded on appeal,⁵⁶ and it cannot be collaterally attacked.⁵⁷ In some jurisdictions where the court has once confirmed

a report of the board it cannot subsequently modify or amend the order of confirmation;⁵⁸ but before confirmation the court may send an erroneous report back for readjustment to the commissioners for adjustment.⁵⁹ Under some conditions a judgment on an appeal from an assessment for a previous year may be res judicata as to the value of property on appeal from a subsequent assessment.⁶⁰

Where jurisdictional requisites are absent, as where statutory requirements as to the service of the petition of appeal are not complied with, the judgment is a nullity.⁶¹ A finding that a board of equalization acted illegally in approving an assessment does not reinstate a former valid assessment for a prior year,⁶² but the court should remand the proceedings for a proper hearing before the board.⁶³

I. Further Appeal or Review

General rules of appellate procedure and review apply in appeals from judgments or orders in actions or proceedings to review municipal assessments.

the supreme court, by way of dictum, indicated that the statute did not exempt college fraternities, the board, even if it had the power, would not, in its discretion, grant city's motion to reinstate its appeals.—*City of New Brunswick v. effect, an appeal may be taken from a judicial review of municipal tax assessments;⁶⁵ and a charter provision that the findings of the district court in reviewing the valuation placed on property shall be final has been held to be unconstitutional,⁶⁶ and may be attacked by the municipality involved.⁶⁷ A municipality which was not a party of record in the proceeding in the lower court has no standing to appeal therefrom.⁶⁸ The order of the lower court denying reargument of the case has been held not to be appealable;⁶⁹ but a default judgment may be appealed.⁷⁰

Presumptions on appeal. Presumptions obtaining on appeals in civil actions generally have been held to obtain on appeals from actions or proceedings to review municipal assessments.⁷¹ The presumption in favor of the original assessment continues in the absence of competent rebutting testimony.⁷²

tions it has been held that appeals from a lower court decision reviewing municipal assessments are triable de novo,⁷³ although weight should be accorded the judgment of the lower court.⁷⁴ In other jurisdictions, while such appeals are not de novo,⁷⁵ and the appellate court may be required to confine itself to the facts disclosed in the record,⁷⁶ it has been held not limited to an inspection of the record,⁷⁷ but may review the decision of the lower court on the basis of the weight of the evidence.⁷⁸ It has accordingly been held that the weight of the evidence is before the appellate court;⁷⁹ but, since the weight of the evidence is basically a question for the trial court,⁸⁰ the trial court's findings of fact are entitled to great weight and will not be set aside, or its decision reversed or modified, except for clear error,⁸¹ and where the judgment or order or findings of the lower court as to questions of fact are supported by the evidence they are conclusive on appeal.⁸²

Court divided on separate affirming opinions

In certiorari proceedings judgments of state courts were affirmed by the supreme court on appeal where two justices announced separate opinions for affirmance in each of which three justices concurred, and one justice dissented.—Newark Fire Ins. Co. v. State Board of Tax Appeals, N.J., 59 S.Ct. 918, 307 U.S. 313, 616, 83 L.Ed. 1312.—Universal Ins. Co. v. State Board of Tax Appeals, 59 S.Ct. 918, 307 U.S. 313, 616, 83 L.Ed. 1312.

4. LIEN FOR TAXES

§ 2058. In General

- a. General considerations
- b. Validity

a. General Considerations

Municipal taxes are liens on the property on which they are assessed where, and only where, they are expressly made so by constitutional, statutory, or charter provision, or by act of the municipal corporation pursuant to authority delegated by the legislature.

Municipal taxes are liens on the property on which they are assessed where, and only where, they are expressly made so by constitutional, statutory, or charter provision,⁹⁵ or by act of the municipal corporation pursuant to authority delegated by the legislature.⁹⁶ In the latter case the act of the municipality in creating the lien must be within the scope of its authority,⁹⁷ and, where such authority is not delegated to it by either statute or charter, an ordinance enacted by it attempting to create a lien for municipal taxes is ineffective.⁹⁸ Where the legislature has entered the taxing field by statutory enactment and has plainly spoken its will with reference to tax liens to which municipalities are entitled, it has been held that the intention of the legislature is that the lien thus created should be exclusive,⁹⁹ and that the fact that the statute does not expressly prohibit municipalities from extending tax liens does not authorize them to encumber property not so encumbered by the statute.¹

Statutes creating a lien for municipal taxes must conform to constitutional requirements,² and, wherever possible, will be construed as not having retroactive effect.³ A general tax statute has been held to apply to city taxes when construed with other statutes expressly referring to municipal taxes and with them forming a part of a taxation scheme applicable both to state and municipal taxes;⁴ but a statutory provision creating a lien for county taxes has been held not to operate as creating a lien for municipal taxes merely because other provisions of the statute are equally applicable to county and municipal taxes.⁵ A constitutional grant of power to municipalities to assess and collect taxes for municipal purposes does not impliedly create a lien on the property subject to the tax.⁶

The amounts for which municipal tax liens exist, under the provisions of some statutes, are the accrued amounts of validated taxes only as shown on the validated tax assessment rolls.⁷ Penalties,⁸ interest,⁹ and attorney's fees for collection of the tax,¹⁰ when imposed by virtue of statute or charter, have been held part of a municipal tax lien.

Repeal of statute. General legislation with reference to the creation and vesting of a lien for city taxes is not impliedly repealed by a charter subsequently granted, where the provisions of the charter are consistent with the general law,¹¹ and, a fortiori, there is no repeal where the provisions of the two statutes with reference to the tax lien are identical¹² or where the later law in terms stipulates that it shall not repeal the earlier statute,¹³ but where the provisions of the later law are substituted for, and are inconsistent with, the earlier statute, a repeal of the earlier statute is implied.¹⁴

b. Validity

While a failure to comply with the directory provisions of a statute will not prevent a municipal corporation from acquiring a valid tax lien, substantial compliance with mandatory statutory or charter provisions is necessary.

While a failure to comply with the directory provisions of a statute will not prevent a municipal corporation from acquiring a valid tax lien,¹⁵ substantial compliance with mandatory statutory or charter provisions is necessary.¹⁶ Thus it has been held that provisions relating to the recording¹⁷ and cer-

tification¹⁸ of unpaid taxes are essential to the validity of the lien. Also the failure to publish a required notice by the tax assessor,¹⁹ as well as the failure of the proper officer to sign the lien²⁰ unless such defect is cured by a validating act,²¹ have been held fatal to the validity of the lien. Where by virtue of its charter a municipal corporation has the power to levy taxes by ordinance, taxes attempted to be levied by it by resolution will not support a lien.²² In the absence of a statute providing otherwise, the simple lodgment of executions for taxes with a sheriff has been held not to give a municipal corporation a lien therefor.²³

On the other hand, it has been held that it is not fatal to the validity of the lien that property not belonging to the owner was included in the assessment,²⁴ that the lien was included with other tax liens of doubtful validity in the same instrument of transfer,²⁵ that there was a reduction of the assessed valuations subsequent to the sale of the lien,²⁶ that the amount of the tax was incorrectly tabulated,²⁷ that the description of the property did not designate the map on which it is shown,²⁸ that the tax collector failed properly to certify the amount of the tax for any year to the treasurer,²⁹ or that the city had committed a trespass on the land.³⁰

Under some statutory provisions a municipal corporation is not required to adopt an ordinance providing for a lien to secure payment of taxes lawfully levied by it.³¹ The lien has been held not dependent for its existence on the issuance of a distress warrant, where innocent holders are not involved.³²

§ 2059. Property and Estates Covered

What property and estates are covered by liens acquired by reason of unpaid municipal taxes on realty or personally depend on statutory and charter provisions.

Where the legislature specifies to what extent municipal corporations may be entitled to liens for taxes, the fact that it does not go further and prohibit a municipality from extending the liens so created does not confer authority on a municipality to encumber with liens property not encumbered by the legislative enactment,³³ and it will be presumed that the municipal authorities, in passing an ordinance providing for liens for taxes, did not intend to transcend the provisions of such an enactment.³⁴ Under some statutory and charter provisions a lien for the whole amount of municipal taxes due from a delinquent taxpayer may attach to all,³⁵ or any part,³⁶ of the property on which the taxes were levied, or may attach to all the realty of a taxpayer situated within the municipality in which the tax list is made and placed in the hands of the proper officer for collection.³⁷ Under some statutory provisions the governing body of a municipal corporation may, by resolution, apportion among subdivisions of a parcel of realty municipal tax liens against the parcel,³⁸ and under such a statute the failure of the tax collector to enter the apportionment on the tax duplicate does not nullify the apportionment.³⁹

A municipal corporation may not acquire a lien on personal property for taxes assessed on realty⁴⁰ in the absence of a provision authorizing such a lien.⁴¹ Under some provisions a municipality has a lien on personal property only where the assessment was specifically made on such property,⁴² and a municipality has been held to have no lien on land for the amount of tax assessments including with the land the personal property thereon.⁴³ The general assets of a nonresident taxpayer's estate have been held not subject to liens of taxes of a municipality assessed on certain of his lots prior to his death.⁴⁴

A provision that real estate shall be "responsible" for taxes on personal property, when owned by the same person, does not create a lien on the realty for personal property taxes but only evidences a legislative intent that ultimate satisfaction of the tax is not confined solely to the personal property.⁴⁵ Under some provisions taxes assessed

Proceeds of personalty

A municipality has been held to have no lien for delinquent taxes due on realty against the proceeds of a fire insurance policy covering a structure thereon, in the absence of a contractual relationship between the owner and the city requiring the owner to devote part of such proceeds to the payment of taxes.—Shelton v. Providence Washington Ins. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 131 S.W.2d 330.

41. No lien on personalty

(1) A statute making taxes a lien on "property" has been construed in connection with other provisions in the same statute relating exclusively to real estate to be restricted to liens on real estate and not to give a lien on personal estate.—Daughdrill v. Crosby, 35 Ala. 345—44 C.J. p 1337 note 36.

(2) A lien on personalty for "taxes due and assessed thereon," in the terms of a statute, has been held to restrict the lien to the identical property on which the assessment was made.—Bird v. Richmond, Va., 240 F. 545, affirmed 39 S.Ct. 186, 249 U.S. 174, 63 L.Ed. 543—44 C.J. p 1337 note 37.

against buildings erected and owned on the taxing date by a lessee for years have been held to create a lien against the realty of the lessor,⁴⁶ and a lien may attach to the estate of the remainderman for taxes properly assessed against the life tenant,⁴⁷ but under other provisions taxes assessed on realty against a life tenant give rise to a lien which extends only to the life estate and not to the estate of the remainderman.⁴⁸

Property belonging to a sovereign government. A municipal corporation may not acquire a tax lien on property belonging to a sovereign government without its consent,⁴⁹ and provisions in a municipal tax lien act have recognized this immunity,⁵⁰ although not automatically including property of an instrumentality of government among the immunized properties excepted from the purview of the lien act.⁵¹ Where a sovereign government takes title to property which at the time is not encumbered by a municipal tax lien, it may not thereafter be encumbered by such a tax lien.⁵² Where part of a parcel of land is conveyed to the state for highway purposes, an apportionment of municipal tax arrears between the portion so conveyed and the remaining portion may be made under some statutes.⁵³

a. Accrual

b. Continuance and duration

a. Accrual

Statutory or charter provisions control as to when a municipal tax lien accrues.

Under different statutory and charter provisions, it has variously been held that the lien of a municipal tax attaches when it is assessed⁵⁴ or imposed;⁵⁵ when the tax duplicate or assessment roll and the warrants for collection come into the hands of the receiver or collector of taxes;⁵⁶ on confirmation of the assessment roll by the common council and delivery of the confirmed roll to the city clerk;⁵⁷ when the tax becomes due;⁵⁸ on a fixed date each

Manner of assessment

The rule is applicable whether the assessment is made correctly in the name of the tenant for life or whether the assessment was made incorrectly in the name of the estate of one creating the life estate and the remainder.—Stark v. City of Norfolk, 32 S.E.2d 59, 183 Va. 282.

Reason for rule

Under statutory rule of construction that legislature does not intend to violate constitution or to effect an absurd result, municipal lien act would not be construed to mean that tax lawfully levied and assessed against taxable governmental instrumentality is not lienable while like assessments against all other taxables of the same district are lienable.—Borough of Homestead v. Defense Plant Corp., supra.

Property subject to lien

(1) The phrase "property of the United States" in such an enactment embraces only such property of the United States as has not been laid open by the sovereign to local taxation.—Borough of Homestead v. Defense Plant Corp., supra.

(2) The land, buildings, machinery and equipment of federal defense plant corporation whose property was expressly subjected by federal statute to local taxation was "property owned by instrumentality of United States" and was not "property owned by United States" within statute confining liens on tax and municipal claims to all real estate other than "property owned by United States," and the fact that the United States owned all stock of reconstruction finance corporation which owned federal defense corporation did not exempt property of defense plant corporation from lien of borough tax.—Borough of Homestead v. part has been taken, shall be equitably apportioned between the parcel so taken and the balance that shall remain, is to facilitate public improvements of streets in a municipality by enabling the governmental authority to secure title to needed land at its fair value, freed of all such municipal liens; and fact that wife of landowner, in response to letter of municipal director of finance, stated that they could not satisfy tax liens against their property at present, but that property would no doubt be taken over by the state for highway purposes, and requested a postponement of foreclosure proceedings until they were sure whether state would take their property, did not estop landowner to complain of method of apportionment by municipality of tax liens on part of land taken over by state and part retained by owners.—Olbis v. year;⁵⁹ or at the time of the first notice for collection of the tax.⁶⁰

Under the provisions of other statutes or charters it has been held that a municipality does not acquire a lien for taxes until the assessment roll is filed in the mortgage office, after which it operates as a lien from a stated date of the current year;⁶¹ and that the property assessed is not subject to lien prior to the institution of appropriate proceedings to enforce the collection of the tax.⁶² In the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary, a personal property tax has been held not to become a lien on the personalty prior to distraint or levy thereon.⁶³

The duration of a municipal tax lien is generally fixed by statutory or charter provisions for a number of years unless sooner discharged.

The duration of the lien for municipal taxes is generally fixed by statutes or charter provisions at a certain number of years, and, for that period of time, the lien continues⁶⁴ unless, as discussed infra § 2063, it is sooner discharged. After the lapse of the statutory period, the lien does not exist⁶⁵ unless its life is extended⁶⁶ by bringing an action within the statutory period to enforce it and prosecuting the action through to judgment, in which case the judgment will be effective and constitute a lien for such a period of time as is prescribed by the statutes of the particular jurisdiction.⁶⁷ In the absence of statutory limitations, the lien continues until the tax is paid⁶⁸ or until the lien is foreclosed,⁶⁹ unaffected by later inconsistent legislation which by its own terms is made inapplicable thereto;⁷⁰ and under the express provisions of some statutes and charters taxes constitute a lien until paid⁷¹ or released,⁷² subject to a restriction, where such exists, that the lien shall be kept alive by bills of revivor at intervals named in the statute.⁷³ Under some statutory provisions the lien of a municipal tax continues until the tax is collected if the realty remains the property of the person "to whom it is assessed."⁷⁴ Certification of unpaid taxes by the city treasurer to the city solicitor, although provided for in the statute, is not a condition precedent to the continuance of the lien therefor where the same statute also provides that the lien shall continue until the tax is paid.⁷⁵

Under some statutory provisions, when a municipality purchases or takes realty for payment of taxes, the lien of the municipality on such realty for all taxes assessed subsequently to the assessment for the payment of which the estate was purchased or taken continues,⁷⁶ at least as long as did the lien for which the land was taken or purchased,⁷⁷ and failure properly to certify subsequent taxes does not invalidate the lien for those taxes.⁷⁸ Where registered land is sold by a city collector for nonpayment of taxes and the collector purchases the land for the city for the amount of the tax, it has been held that the proper recording or filing of a disclaimer and release of the tax title gives effect to a continuance of the tax lien.⁷⁹ A statute declaring all liens for a stated year and the years prior thereto on which no foreclosure proceedings have been instituted to be barred and uncollectable has been held to be within the power of the legislature to enact.⁸⁰

A municipality may be permitted by statute to revive or reinstate its liens for taxes previously lost because of its inaction or failure to take proper action,⁸¹ and such a statute is in the nature of a validating statute and must be restricted to taxes that have lost their liens at the date when the statute takes effect,⁸² and it may not be extended to taxes the liens of which are thereafter lost by inaction or neglect.⁸³ A statute extending a lien beyond the period stipulated in a charter has been held not subject to a constitutional restriction on statutes continuing or reviving taxes and providing that such a statute must specifically state the tax and not merely refer to the law under which the tax was imposed.⁸⁴

A statutory amendment extending the lien for taxes on realty to a stated time has been held not a retroactive law.⁸⁵ Where an enactment relating to liens for taxes in any way broadens the effect of a reassessment on lands that have been alienated, it should not be construed retroactively to apply to reassessments, made after it takes effect, of taxes originally assessed before its passage.⁸⁶ Under some statutes there may be no lien on realty for taxes reassessed more than a stated time after the tax originally assessed was committed to the collector if the land was alienated before the reassessment.⁸⁷ A statutory provision that a lien for taxes shall terminate at the expiration of a given time from a fixed date in the year of assessment if the estate in the meantime has been alienated and the instrument alienating it is recorded has been held applicable only in fixing the duration of the lien once it arises, not in determining whether a lien is created by a reassessment of alienated land.⁸⁸

§ 2061. Priorities

- a. In general
- b. Lien of mortgage on realty
- c. Lien of special assessment

a. In General

Frequently the priority of municipal tax liens is established by statutory or charter provisions, and under some statutory provisions all legally assessed municipal taxes constitute first liens on the property assessed.

The priority of a municipal tax lien is often established by express statutory or charter provisions,⁸⁹ and statutes establishing the priority of such liens have been held to include taxes provided by a subsequent statute for the support of municipal corporations which are not ad valorem or based on property.⁹⁰ Liens or encumbrances already on the property when the tax is levied are entitled to priority over the tax lien under a statute providing that the tax execution shall bind the property only from the date thereof,⁹¹ or under a statute providing, in the case of taxes on personal property, that they "shall be and remain a lien thereon until paid, and no transfer of the personal property assessed shall operate to divest or destroy such lien,"⁹² and some charter provisions are construed to accord a priority over other liens only to real property tax liens, and not to personal property tax liens.⁹³

Under some statutory provisions all legally assessed municipal taxes constitute first liens prior to all other liens on the property assessed, except such other liens as also constitute first liens.⁹⁴ In passing on questions of priority between the liens of taxes imposed by different municipalities, the court must ascertain and follow the legislative mandate which fixes such priority, rather than construe statutes to insure the collection of all taxes wherever possible.⁹⁵ Depending on the provisions of the statutes, there is no preference between liens of current taxation of different municipalities on the same piece of property,⁹⁶ regardless of the year for which the taxes were imposed,⁹⁷ or municipal tax liens may take precedence in the inverse order of the time when they become liens,⁹⁸ the last lien taking priority over the prior liens,⁹⁹ or the liens may have priority in chronological order,¹ and an enactment changing the latter rule has been held not retroactive.² It is the year of the levy, and not the year of the tax sale, which controls.³

The question of the priority of the city's tax lien does not arise in the distribution of the proceeds of the property after its sale on foreclosure where the city still retains its lien against the land in the hands of the foreclosure purchaser,⁴ as it does when it has not been made a party to the foreclosure proceedings.⁵ A municipal tax lien has been held entitled to preference over the lien of a common-law judgment in receivership proceedings.⁶

some provisions municipal real estate taxes are liens paramount to any mortgage on the realty⁸ although executed⁹ and recorded¹⁰ before the tax was levied; but such provisions do not apply to mortgages made to the state or its representatives¹¹ or to a mortgage given prior to the passage of the act¹² unless the law as existing before the passage of the act gave priority to the tax lien.¹³ Under some charter provisions the fact that a certified assessment roll was not filed within a stated time after the making of the original assessment roll does not destroy the lien as against the rights of a subsequent mortgagee of the premises.¹⁴

In the absence of specific statutory authority therefor, it has been held that land may not be burdened with a lien for personal property taxes as against a prior mortgage thereon.¹⁵ Under some statutory provisions the lien of a municipality on realty for personal property taxes which attached prior to the recording of a mortgage on the realty is superior to the mortgage lien,¹⁶ but the lien of a municipality on realty for personal property taxes attaching after the recording of a mortgage on the realty is inferior to the mortgage lien,¹⁷ and this is true notwithstanding the charter and ordinances of the municipality are in conflict with the statutory provisions enacted by the state legislature.¹⁸

Ordinarily, the lien of a special assessment is not of equal dignity with, and is subordinate to that of a general tax for the support of the municipal government.

Although in the absence of constitutional restrictions, the legislature may determine the respective priority of liens for general municipal taxes and special assessments,¹⁹ and statutes providing that special assessments shall be on a parity with general tax liens have been held not unconstitutional,²⁰ ordinarily the lien of a special assessment is subordinate to that of a general tax for the conduct of the municipal government,²¹ and a provision that the lien of a special assessment shall constitute a lien on property of the same nature and to the same extent as a lien for general taxes²² or that special assessments should be a lien superior to all other liens,²³ does not make them of the same dignity as a lien for general taxes. Thus in the absence of any statutory provision with reference thereto, a general tax lien subsequent in point of time is given priority over a prior special tax bill for public improvements.²⁴

ascertain whether or not the taxes have been paid,²⁶ he has been held chargeable with constructive notice of a lien for delinquent taxes,²⁷ so that, as against such a lien, the principle of innocent purchaser for value has been held inapplicable.²⁸ Furthermore, under a statute permitting an assessment of omitted property, a purchaser has been held chargeable with notice that the land has not been assessed if such is the fact and he is not thereafter an innocent purchaser as against the lien for taxes for years during which taxes were not assessed against the land but should have been so assessed.²⁹ It has been held that the lien of taxes assessed against land by a city prior to proceedings by the state and county to foreclose county and state tax liens thereon become permanent when title to the property vests in the state as a result of the foreclosure sale to the state so that one purchasing the land from the state takes it subject to the liens of the city for taxes.³⁰ If a municipal tax lien accrues of record before the new owner of the property involved registers his title, such owner has been held not entitled to the protection of the registry acts.³¹

Statutory requirements as to the recording of the lien ordinarily must be complied with in order to make it enforceable as against the rights of a subsequent purchaser without actual notice thereof;³² one of the objects of registry acts is to insure notice to a registered owner of property of municipal tax claims against his property.³³ A statute providing that a person acquiring for valuable consideration an interest in land covered by an official tax search shall hold his interest free from any municipal lien not shown on that search is intended to provide that the certification as to outstanding liens is one on which an intending purchaser may act with safety.³⁴ However, one taking title to property in partial reliance on a municipal certificate of tax search, under such a statute, attesting the existence of no municipal liens against the property as of a given date does not take the property free of a municipal lien for taxes which were not a lien at the date of the certificate.³⁵ Where a tax lien is defective for the want of a properly named owner of the realty and the real owner is never brought on the record, the lien and all the revivals thereof have been held void as against a subsequent purchaser for value of the land.³⁶ A statute authorizing municipalities to revive lost tax liens by filing a suggestion of default within a stated time after the date of the statute does not authorize the revival of a lien against a purchaser who acquired title to the property at a time when no lien existed.³⁷

and a statute permitting and providing for assignment is constitutional.⁴⁰ The test of an effective assignment is whether the municipality has divested itself of the right to enforce or test the validity of the lien,⁴¹ and the lien is not lost by combining it with other invalid liens in a joint transfer of all.⁴² A taxpayer's default, after making several payments under a contract with a municipality for the payment of delinquent taxes in installments, has been held to afford the municipality a legal basis for a sale of the lien,⁴³ but only for the unpaid balance of such taxes together with any interest and penalties.⁴⁴

The rights acquired by the holder of a municipal tax lien arise solely out of, and are fixed by, statute.⁴⁵ It has been held that one to whom a tax lien is transferred by a municipality is entitled to all of the rights that the municipality had at the time of the transfer,⁴⁶ including the status of the lien as to priority,⁴⁷ and a transfer of the lien has been held to act as an assignment of an unpaid installment of interest due thereon.⁴⁸ It has been held that the right or interest acquired by the possessor of a transfer of the lien is not an estate,⁴⁹ but a mere right to satisfy the lien.⁵⁰

Ordinarily the rule of caveat emptor applies to an assignment or transfer of the lien if the assignment is consummated, even though the transfer proves to be utterly worthless,⁵¹ but where the assignment never is consummated the rule of implied warranty applies.⁵² Thus, where a purported transfer of the lien is void because the statute permitting the municipality to sell is unconstitutional, the purchaser of the lien may be entitled to recover the amount paid to the municipality for the transfer of the lien,⁵³ although the payment was voluntarily made under a mutual mistake of law, without fraud or misrepresentation.⁵⁴ However, where a municipality makes an invalid attempt to transfer liens to private individuals, warranting that it has the power to make the transfers, one subsequently purchasing the liens from such individuals may not be entitled to recover from the municipality the moneys paid to it,⁵⁵ in the absence of a showing that the original purchasers assigned the cause of action to him.⁵⁶ One purchasing a supposed lien at a sale inadvertently held by a municipality after it has canceled the lien acquires nothing,⁵⁷ and he may be entitled only to receive back his deposit.⁵⁸

b. Discharge

The lien may be discharged by payment or other methods depending on statutory provisions.

The payment of taxes according to the description of the property on the tax roll has been held to discharge the lien therefor,⁵⁹ where the description is not wholly void for indefiniteness.⁶⁰ Also the lien may be discharged by the municipal authorities settling with the owner of the land and accepting a reduced amount from him;⁶¹ by an abatement of the tax;⁶² by the abatement or dismissal of an action to enforce the lien;⁶³ by the gross negligence of the municipality in prosecuting such action;⁶⁴ or by its negligence in permitting a confusion of goods so that the property on which the lien exists cannot be separated from other property belonging to the owner.⁶⁵

In the absence of some law expressly limiting the time within which to enforce the lien or to collect the tax, the lien is not lost by the failure of officers to take the steps prescribed for collection,⁶⁶ or by a failure to collect by the institution of the prescribed proceedings,⁶⁷ or by the recovery of a personal judgment against the taxpayer,⁶⁸ or by the institution of proceedings and the conduct therein of a void sale,⁶⁹ since an irregular or defective tax sale does not destroy the lien.⁷⁰ When a municipality becomes the owner of a transfer of a tax lien it has been held that the taxes are not thereby paid or discharged,⁷¹ and that the taxes are not merged in the transfer of the lien.⁷²

Where the possessor of a transfer of a tax lien later purchases the premises involved such interest is not merged in the fee,⁷³ and the fact that the liens are bid in by the municipality which acquires title to the property by condemnation has been held not to constitute a merger of the liens in the title

so acquired so as to discharge the liens.⁷⁴ Also tax liens may not be merged in the fee or canceled where a municipality bids in at a tax sale the assessed property for which no other bids are made, where neither payment in redemption nor a referee's deed in foreclosure has been made.⁷⁵

A lien which attached prior to the enactment of a statute transferring the property involved to another municipality survives such transfer,⁷⁶ notwithstanding the first municipality divided the lien into annual installments and suspended the lien while the installments were paid,⁷⁷ and although such municipality lost jurisdiction to assess the property after such transfer.⁷⁸ While it has been held that a sale of the property under legal process does not divest a municipality of its lien for taxes,⁷⁹ and that a judicial sale of the property for less than the amount necessary to pay all taxes due does not operate to divest the municipality of its lien, but that the lien for the unpaid balance continues,⁸⁰ it has also been held that in such a case the lien does not continue⁸¹ unless it is so provided by a valid statute.⁸² Thus a tax lien for unpaid taxes for a specified year is divested by a judicial sale subsequently held where the purchase price is sufficient to pay the costs of the sale and the taxes in question.⁸³ Participation in the proceeds of a foreclosure sale of the lien of a tax deed for unpaid state, county, and district taxes may discharge the lien of a municipal tax certificate for unpaid municipal taxes.⁸⁴

5. PAYMENT AND REFUNDING OR RECOVERY OF TAXES PAID

The primary liability to pay taxes assessed by a municipal corporation is on the person assessed. However, a person having an interest in the property assessed, who in good faith is obliged to pay the taxes thereon to protect his own interest, is subrogated to the rights of the municipal corporation.

The primary liability to pay the taxes assessed by a municipal corporation is on the person assessed.⁸⁵ In the absence of a lawful levy or assessment there is no duty to pay the tax,⁸⁶ and the fact that others in the municipality had paid the tax would not require persons who had not done so to pay it.⁸⁷ Statutes sometimes provide for the apportionment of municipal taxes among the subdivisions or parcels of the real estate assessed,⁸⁸ while other statutes provide for the proportionate payment of municipal taxes by owners and lienholders.⁸⁹ A tax certificate or receipt is not conclusive of payment unless made so by statute.⁹⁰

Subrogation. A lienor or other person having an interest in property, who in good faith is obliged to pay the taxes thereon to protect his own interest, may be subrogated to the rights of the municipality,⁹¹ and is entitled to reimbursement for the amount so paid from the person who should have made such payment,⁹² but the rule is otherwise where the person making the payment knows, or is chargeable with knowledge, that he has no interest in the property.⁹³ Subrogation has been denied to a person who has by an honest mistake paid the taxes of another, where such a payment by virtue of statutory provisions has deprived the other person of the right to apply for cancellation of the taxes so paid.⁹⁴

Partial payment. The law ordinarily intends that taxes shall be paid in full at one time, and, unless it is otherwise provided by statute, a taxpayer cannot tender or pay a part only of his municipal tax liability.⁹⁵ However, where taxes are separable, a taxpayer has the right to pay the amount of any one tax listed against him.⁹⁶

Abatement. In some jurisdictions by virtue of statute, a municipal corporation has the right to

Correction of erroneous entry on tax book

Where a city solicitor has begun proceedings on a lien filed for delinquent taxes, and the delinquent taxpayer pays him the taxes due, but, by an error on the part either of the assistant city solicitor or the receiver of taxes, in no way chargeable to the taxpayer, the payment is erroneously credited to another property, the taxpayer is entitled in equitable proceedings to compel the correction of the city's books to show payment of the taxes on his property, but the court will not in such a proceeding direct the striking off of the erroneous entry of payment on the other property.—Germantown Trust Co. v. abate taxes, where the person against whom the taxes are assessed is poor and unable to pay.⁹⁷ Under such a statute, it has been held that a municipality could abate the taxes of a person after his death in favor of his surviving family,⁹⁸ since the death of applicant while the application was pending does not deprive the municipality of the power to abate, where the statute does not require action only on petition.⁹⁹

Municipal taxes are due and payable at the time fixed by statute, charter, or ordinance, and until then there is no obligation to pay.

Taxes are due and payable at the time fixed by statute, charter, or ordinance,¹ and until then there is no obligation to pay.² The date when taxes are due is not advanced by the granting of an option to the taxpayer under the statute to pay them before the statutory date.³ Municipal power to provide for the levy and collection of local taxes includes power to provide that such taxes shall become due at a different time from the general taxes;⁴ but any discretion granted to the city authorities in this respect can be exercised only within the limits imposed by statute or charter.⁵ Statutes providing for payment of all taxes in the state in equal semiannual installments apply to city as well as to state taxes.⁶

Necessity of determination by statute, charter, or ordinance. Some provision, either in the charter or in a statute or ordinance, fixing the date when taxes become due, is a necessary condition precedent to the bringing of an action by the municipality for their recovery.⁷ Where no time is fixed by statute or charter, the tax does not become delinquent until the council has determined by ordinance the date when it shall be paid.⁸ In some jurisdictions the time when the taxes shall become payable must be determined at the time the tax levy is made.⁹

Postponement. A delay in filing the assessment roll beyond the date fixed by statute as the date when taxes shall become due and payable operates as a postponement of the due date to the day when the roll is filed,¹⁰ and a taxpayer is entitled to a reasonable time thereafter for payment without incurring penalties.¹¹

Municipal taxes are generally required to be paid in money, although it is sometimes provided that payment may be made in other specified property.

Municipal taxes are generally required to be paid in money,¹² although it is sometimes provided that payment may be made in other ways.¹³ A provision in a city charter directing that taxes shall be payable only in current money of the United States has been construed to permit payment by check, where the check has been accepted by the bank on which it is drawn and a transfer of funds in accordance therewith made,¹⁴ although in an action under the same charter provision it has been held that, where the drawee bank pays its own taxes by a cashier's check, and, on the city depositing it at the bank, credits the city therewith under an agreement that payment thereof would not be demanded, the transaction does not constitute a payment within the meaning of the charter.¹⁵ However, where a check is actually paid, the taxpayer's liability is discharged.¹⁶

Surrender or cancellation of claims against city.

Except where it is otherwise provided, the municipality cannot be compelled to accept as payment of taxes due to it a cancellation of a debt it owes to the taxpayer.¹⁷ Even where the taxpayer is entitled to deductions of certain items of city indebtedness to him within limits fixed by the statute, he is not entitled to deductions of items outside the statutory limits.¹⁸ Where a remission of taxes is agreed on as the consideration for services rendered or supplies furnished to the municipality, as discussed supra § 2013, such an agreement, if valid, is enforceable by setting off the value of the service against the annual tax as it accrues.¹⁹ Under some statutes a municipality may extinguish and settle a judgment against it by offsetting taxes due from the judgment creditor.²⁰

City warrants, bonds, or other evidences of debt.

A city cannot be compelled to receive in payment of taxes its own warrants or certificates of indebtedness, where it never has been authorized by law to issue corporate obligations to circulate as money,²¹ certificates of city indebtedness which are void as having been issued in excess of the constitutional limitation of indebtedness,²² or city notes issued during the Civil War as a part of the Confederate currency.²³ However, city warrants are receivable for city taxes under a statute authorizing it,²⁴ and, in the absence of statutory restriction, it is not necessary that the warrants should have been issued on account of debts incurred during the year for which the taxes were assessed.²⁵ Furthermore, an injunction will not be granted to restrain a city from receiving city scrip where it appears that, unless such scrip is taken, the taxes cannot be collected.²⁶ The privilege conferred on particular persons to pay taxes in judgments or evidences of debt against the city does not enable other persons to claim the same privilege;²⁷ and, when the privilege is given of paying in coupons, warrants, or scrip, it must be exercised before the time for payment has passed.²⁸

Generally, municipal bonds cannot be used as a set-off against municipal taxes unless the law permits and the contracting parties consent.²⁹ Hence, an ordinance, even if authorized by statute, directing municipal officers to accept for taxes bonds and past-due coupons of the city in lieu of money is invalid where it changes the law requiring the payment of taxes in money, which was in effect at the date of the contract.³⁰ However, a statute authorizing the issuance of bonds with a provision that such bonds and coupons attached thereto may be tendered in payment of municipal taxes is not invalid, under a constitutional provision prohibiting a surrender or suspension of the power of taxation.³¹

Power to take security for payment. Public policy does not forbid a municipality to take the taxpayer's note and mortgage for his delinquent taxes;³² and, in the absence of charter restrictions, a city to which land is struck off at a tax sale in default of other bidders has the power to surrender the certificates of sale to the taxpayer, and to take from him a mortgage to secure the payment of the delinquent taxes.³³

Payment out of proceeds of judicial or execution sale. Municipal taxes are not payable out of sales of land to satisfy a debt,³⁴ except where it is otherwise provided by statute,³⁵ and a statute making it the duty of a sheriff selling property under a levy to ascertain the amount of taxes due and pay them over to the tax collector has been held to apply only to state and county taxes, and not to be extended by construction to taxes due to, and collectable by, a municipal corporation.³⁶

Interest is not recoverable on delinquent taxes due a municipal corporation unless it is expressly so provided by statute, charter, or ordinance.

Interest is not recoverable on delinquent taxes due a municipal corporation unless it is expressly so provided by statute, charter, or ordinance.³⁷ Where the municipal charter itself creates a liability for interest on unpaid city taxes, no ordinance is necessary to make such provision operative.³⁸ The enactment of an ordinance imposing interest for continued delinquency in the payment of municipal taxes is an enactment legislative in character and governmental in function,³⁹ and constitutes a special or specific provision of law within the saving clause of a statute relating to interest on delinquent tax assessments.⁴⁰

Interest on taxes does not begin to run until after a default in making payment,⁴¹ and, under some statutes, the city council must fix a definite time for payment before it can require payment of interest;⁴² but taxes payable in installments carry interest from the date of assessment where the statute makes that provision.⁴³ If a taxpayer tenders as much of a tax as is valid, and keeps his tender good, he is thereby relieved from the payment of interest subsequently accruing.⁴⁴ Interest on delinquent taxes which continue to be an obligation after the government or a political subdivision has taken title to the taxed property on condemnation continues to accrue until the taxes are paid.⁴⁵ It has been held that the interest imposed becomes part of the taxes and are collectable as such,⁴⁶

and that a municipality is entitled to the interest which has accrued on taxes on realty sold in execution on foreclosure proceedings after a federal court, which had appointed a receiver for the realty owner, had relinquished its control,⁴⁷ notwithstanding the federal rule that interest for nonpayment of taxes was not allowable on claims against funds in the hands of a receiver, since such rule is inapplicable to a distribution of funds by a state court.⁴⁸

Rate. The rate of interest depends on statutes, charters, or ordinances and their construction.⁴⁹ Under some statutes the rate of interest which shall accrue on taxes after they become payable must be determined by the council at the time the tax levy is made.⁵⁰ Some charter provisions fixing the rate of interest have been upheld as not in conflict with constitutional provisions relating to rates of interest.⁵¹ The legislature may enact statutes reducing the rate of interest on delinquent taxes which shall operate retrospectively,⁵² in which event the statute in force at the time of collection and enforcement of the tax, and not the earlier statute, must control in computing interest.⁵³

Abatement. Statutes abating interest on municipal taxes are to be strictly construed,⁵⁴ and a taxpayer who seeks an abatement must point to clear and unmistakable warrant to support his claim.⁵⁵ However, a taxpayer on complying with the conditions specified in such a statute is entitled to an abatement of interest.⁵⁶

refund regardless of whether or not the payment of the tax was voluntary.⁶⁴

Furthermore, the legislature may enact a statute making a refunding of taxes paid erroneously, or by inadvertence, discretionary with the municipality,⁶⁵ or obligatory on the municipality.⁶⁶ A statute granting to city councils a power to refund taxes erroneously assessed is not impliedly repealed by a subsequent statute taking away the power to correct erroneous assessments from the city council and vesting it in other officers.⁶⁷ Illegal taxes cannot be recovered back after the enactment of a statute curing the illegality.⁶⁸ The fact that after payment the boundaries of the town which levied the tax were changed and a part thereof annexed to a city did not relieve the town of its obligation to refund its proportion of the tax.⁶⁹

The grounds for refunding are governed by the statute, and in order to be entitled to a refund the taxpayer must bring himself within its terms.⁷⁰ The person who pays the tax ordinarily is entitled to the refund.⁷¹ Thus a vendor who paid the tax and then sold the property was entitled to a refund where the assessment was subsequently reduced by the municipality,⁷² but a vendor who sells the property and makes an adjustment in the price is not entitled to the refund when the assessments are reduced, where the assessments are paid by a subsequent purchaser who purchased under a similar adjustment allowance.⁷³ In some jurisdictions by statute, a municipality is given the right to credit any refund, due to a tax reduction granted by virtue of an appeal, on any unpaid taxes due or to become due thereon in the ensuing years, provided there has been no change of ownership of the property assessed in the interim.⁷⁴

Conditions precedent. Certain statutes have been construed to make the right to a refund dependent on performance of certain conditions precedent,⁷⁵ as, for example, the making of a protest at the time of payment,⁷⁶ or a claim for refund,⁷⁷ within a specified time,⁷⁸ and giving the city authorities a reasonable opportunity to act on the claim before taking further steps to enforce it.⁷⁹

Proceedings. Statutes vary as to the proceedings for a refund of illegal, excessive or erroneous taxes.⁸⁰ Under some statutes, the remedy on the refusal by the municipality to refund taxes, paid in error, is an action in assumpsit.⁸¹ In some jurisdictions, where the payment is of an excessive amount, the only remedy is by an application under the statute for an abatement,⁸² while in oth-

Effect of independent reimbursement

The fact that foreign insurance corporation's trustee was reimbursed for portion of taxes erroneously paid city by trustee on moneys and securities held for such corporation's policyholders' benefit, as required by trust indentures authorizing issuance of corporation bonds on which taxes were imposed, gave city no right to require corresponding reduction in amount of tax refund.—Girard Trust Co. v. Validity of tax

Where public trustees of electric railway paid taxes to city although property was tax exempt, their act of payment did not disclose an administrative practice indicating that taxes were due city, and, even if such practice were established to have been uniform and long continued, practice, when shown to have been unauthorized by law was not affirmative evidence of validity of tax.—Assessors of Boston v. er jurisdictions, on appeal or certiorari to review an assessment, a refund of excessive tax payments may be directed.⁸³ Under other statutes an application may be made to an administrative board of a municipality for the remission or reduction of taxes paid, under protest,⁸⁴ and the order of such a board is that of a statutory tribunal acting within its statutory jurisdiction,⁸⁵ and has the effect of an order of the court.⁸⁶ If the facts are found for the petitioner on a proceeding for a refund, he is entitled to an order for the restoration of the entire tax paid, if none of it was due, or as much of it as was in excess of the sum rightly chargeable⁸⁷ with interest⁸⁸ from the time of payment,⁸⁹ together with costs of the appeal.⁹⁰ Under some statutes, a taxpayer is entitled to interest after a determination of the amount of a refund only from the date of an application for an audit,⁹¹ and under such a statute to start the running of interest the demand must be sufficiently specific to meet statutory requirements.⁹² It has been held that the service on the city officials of the final order in the certiorari proceedings was a sufficient demand,⁹³ but the service of such a final order has been held insufficient so as to start the running of interest under some local administrative regulations governing an application for audit and allowance.⁹⁴

§ 2069. Recovery of Taxes Paid

- a. In general
- b. Voluntary or involuntary payment; protest
- c. Proceedings

a. In General

Subject to some exceptions, municipal taxes which have been illegally and wrongfully assessed and collected may be recovered.

A tax payment may not be retained by a municipal corporation under circumstances making the retention of the payment unconscionable,⁹⁸ and, subject to some exceptions and in the absence of an estoppel,⁹⁹ municipal taxes which have been illegally and wrongfully assessed and collected may be recovered,¹ as where the municipal corporation had no power to levy or collect the particular tax or to assess the particular property.² Money paid to a municipality for taxes for the second half of a year is recoverable where the municipality acquired title to the property in condemnation proceedings commenced subsequent to the payment of taxes and concluded during the first half of the year,³ and the municipality may not avoid liability in such a case on the grounds that the payment was voluntary, since the payment was not voluntarily made with knowledge of the city's plans.⁴

An action to recover a tax paid has been allowed in some jurisdictions where the tax, although justly due, has been enlarged by an unauthorized increase or an excessive valuation,⁵ or whenever, through error, it has raised them in excess of the amount needed and authorized by the properly constituted authorities,⁶ but not where the tax levy simply yields a surplus,⁷ and recovery has been

Arbitrary classification

The notion that a tax payment which the payee may not in good conscience retain is recoverable only if it falls strictly within an arbitrary classification, that is, where moneys were paid under coercion, duress, fraud, or under mistake of fact, is not in accord with views which seem likely to commend themselves to present day courts.—Berri v. City of New York, supra.

Absence of benefit

(2) In suit to recover taxes paid, the action of the cashier of the national bank in giving to the officers of the city for taxation against the bank a number of the shares of its stock, taxable under the laws of the state to the stockholders, does not estop a receiver subsequently appointed for the bank, but before the tax is paid, from setting up the mistake.—*Wilmington v. b. Voluntary or Involuntary Payment; Protest

- (1) In general
- (2) Duress or compulsion
- (3) Mistake of law or fact
- (4) Payment under protest

(1) In General

As a general rule, and in the absence of statute otherwise providing, the payment of a wrongful or illegal municipal tax by a person voluntarily and without compulsion cannot be recovered back in an action at law.

It is a well settled general rule that, if a wrongful or illegal municipal tax is paid voluntarily and without compulsion, it cannot be recovered back in an action at law,¹³ unless there is some constitutional or statutory provision expressly or impliedly giving him such right.¹⁴ A payment is voluntary in the sense that no action lies to recover back the amount in all cases where there is no compulsion or duress, or any immediate and urgent necessity therefor.¹⁵ The character of the payment as being voluntary or involuntary is to be determined from the terms of the ordinance under which the tax is imposed, the circumstances attendant on payment, and the consequences which would follow nonpayment.¹⁶ Hence, a payment

Whether payment of a tax under an excessive assessment was voluntary is a question of intention.—People v. Craig, 140 N.E. 209, 236 N.Y. 100.

made in pursuance of a bargain or compromise between a taxpayer and a municipality is voluntary,¹⁷ as is a payment made in advance of the day when it became due for the purpose of securing a rebate,¹⁸ or a discount,¹⁹ or when it was made with knowledge that the land was owned by, and assessed to, another, and for the purpose of acquiring title by adverse possession against him.²⁰

Payment by agent. A payment of illegal or excessive taxes in behalf of a principal by an agent acting without authority is, as to the principal, an involuntary payment and can be recovered back.²¹

(2) Duress or Compulsion

Where the payment of an illegal or excessive municipal tax is made under duress or compulsion, the payment is not voluntary and the amount may be recovered.

Where the payment of an illegal or excessive municipal tax is made under duress or compulsion, the payment is not voluntary and the amount may be recovered,²² but only to the extent of the illegal exaction.²³ A payment is held to be under duress or compulsion when it was made to remove the lien of an assessment regular on its face, which, if allowed to remain, would subject the property to risk of sale,²⁴ or when made to a collector who may without suit enforce payment by levy and sale, or summary distraint,²⁵ or when it is made to prevent an illegal tax from becoming a cloud on title.²⁶ A payment has been held not compulsory, however, merely because it was made to redeem tax certificates outstanding against the property,²⁷ or because the collector holds a warrant for collection,²⁸ or because of mere threats of a levy on land,²⁹ but there must be an immediate and urgent necessity for payment to release the person or property from detention or prevent immediate seizure thereof.³⁰ Although it has been held in some jurisdictions that a payment is not made under duress or compulsion when made merely to escape penalties,³¹ it has been held otherwise if payment is made to avoid heavy, drastic, or onerous penalties.³²

(3) Mistake of Law or Fact

Generally, municipal taxes voluntarily paid under a mistake of law, with full knowledge of the facts, cannot be recovered back, but taxes paid under a mistake of fact are ordinarily recoverable.

It is a general rule that municipal taxes vol-

Test

Where, by reason of the peculiar facts, a reasonably prudent man finds that, in order to preserve his property or protect his business interests, it is necessary to make a payment of municipal taxes which he does not owe and which in equity and good conscience the receiver should not retain, the payment may be recovered.—Flynn v. City and County of San Francisco, 115 P.2d 3, 18 Cal.2d 210.

Existence of other remedy

Payment of municipal taxes made without availing one's self of an immediate and adequate remedy to resist payment is not made under compulsion.—Darby v. City of Vidalia, 149 S.E. 223, 168 Ga. 842.

The mere existence of a lien under city charter against foreign corporation's intangibles did not constitute "duress" sufficient to render payment of tax involuntary, so as to warrant recovery of tax, notwithstanding payment was made without protest.—General Discount Corporation v. untarily paid under a mistake of law, with full knowledge of all the facts, cannot be recovered back,³³ unless recovery is expressly or impliedly authorized by statute.³⁴ In some jurisdictions, however, recovery is not barred where mistake in payment of taxes is one of law,³⁵ unless payment is continued over a period of years indicating an intent to pay independently of any question of illegality in the tax,³⁶ or unless the property is necessarily benefited by the improvement for which the tax was levied;³⁷ but even in these jurisdictions taxes are not recoverable back where they were paid by the taxpayer voluntarily and with knowledge of his rights.³⁸ A mistake of a taxpayer due to his ignorance of the law of another state is regarded as a mistake of fact, not barring recovery.³⁹

by the failure of the taxpayer to pursue other available remedies for the correction of the error,⁴¹ or by the voluntary character of the payment.⁴² Recovery has been allowed where the tax was paid in ignorance of the fact that the property was exempt,⁴³ or that the statute authorizing the tax had not been complied with.⁴⁴ This rule is particularly applicable if the mistake is that of the taxing officers,⁴⁵ although it is otherwise where the mistake is made by the taxpayer himself and is the result of his neglect of some legal duty, or where the facts which should have shown the mistake were within his possession or within his reach.⁴⁶ Hence, where the payment is voluntary, the right to a recovery of the municipal taxes paid depends on a showing of such a mistake of fact and lack of knowledge or means of knowledge as would permit recovery notwithstanding such payment.⁴⁷

Disputed facts

A taxpayer cannot be charged with knowledge of disputed facts, which ultimately must be decided by court, so as to bar his recovery of amount of illegal municipal tax as paid under mistake of law.—Effel Realty Corp. v. City of New York, 299 N.Y. S. 373, 185 Misc. 176, affirmed 11 N.Y.S.2d 250, 256 App.Div. 972, appeal granted 12 N.Y.S.2d 862, 257 App.Div. 806, affirmed 24 N.E.2d 978, 282 N.Y. 541.

Absence of knowledge

The payment of an illegal tax or assessment to a municipality is not "voluntary" so as to preclude recovery back if it is made without actual or constructive notice of its illegality.—County Securities v. Warwick Properties, 24 N.Y.S.2d 971, 176 Misc. 272, affirmed 33 N.Y.S.2d 826, 263 App.Div. 964, appeal denied 34 N.Y.S.2d 520, 263 App.Div. 1008, affirmed 46 N.E.2d 844, 289 N.Y. 774.

Ignorance of fact that statute is unconstitutional is ignorance of law as respects right to recover tax paid under such statute.—Prescott v. Memphis, 285 S.W. 587, 154 Tenn. 462, 48 A.L.R. 1378.

Assessments void on face

Payment of village taxes, based on assessments which were void on their face because assessed descriptions failed to identify property, did not constitute a "mistake of fact" justifying recovery of voluntary payment, since a taxpayer is as much bound to inform himself of what tax records show or fail to show as are public authorities.—McCann v. Village of Lindenhurst, 18 N.Y.S.2d 952, 174 Misc. 14.

Exceptional cases

Recovery of municipal taxes paid by mistake must of necessity be confined to extreme and exceptional cases.—Bridgeport Screw Co. v. City of Bridgeport, 7 A.2d 649, 125 Conn. 593.

Plaintiff was not estopped to recover taxes paid on real property assessed to her by mistake because owner of land assessed reimbursed her for paying tax in certain year and in consideration thereof plaintiff executed general release to such owner, since nothing which plaintiff did without consent of city can affect whatever rights city has against true owner.—Miller v. Negligence of city's agent

In view of notice on tax bill that verification of its accuracy depended on taxpayer, fact that clerk in city tax collector's office in making out tax bill recited incorrect block in describing property did not establish negligence on part of city's agent, so as to entitle taxpayer to recover the payment made with intent to cover taxes on taxpayer's property.—M. S. H. Realty Corp. v. City of New York, 70 N.Y.S.2d 154, 188 Misc. 1039.

47. Conn.—Bridgeport Screw Co. v. City of Bridgeport, 7 A.2d 649, 125 Conn. 593.

Thus, the voluntary payment of taxes under over-assessments caused by an error in the description in the tax lists furnished by the taxpayer to the municipality, which were carried over into the tax roll, may not be recovered,⁴⁸ especially where the taxpayer had acquiesced in the construction placed on the description by the municipal authorities.⁴⁹

(4) Payment under Protest

Generally, in the absence of a statute providing for protest, a protest at the time of the payment of the municipal tax will not save the payment from being voluntary, if it was not made under duress or compulsion.

In the absence of statute, where a municipal tax is paid involuntarily or under compulsion or duress, protest is unnecessary to warrant recovery,⁵⁰ and a protest made at the time of the payment of the municipal tax will not save the payment from being voluntary, in the sense which forbids its recovery back, if it was not made under duress or compulsion.⁵¹ Thus, where at the time payment is made the receiver of taxes could not institute proceedings to enforce it, the payment is voluntary, even though made under protest.⁵² The absence of a protest, however, has evidential value, tending to show the voluntary character of the payment.⁵³

Independently of statute there are cases which hold in general terms that taxes paid under protest may be recovered back on showing that they were illegal provided the defect was not caused by the taxpayer's own neglect,⁵⁴ and, under statutes in some jurisdictions, illegal taxes may be recovered back when their payment was accompanied by a formal protest.⁵⁵ Such statutes are distinct from, and in derogation of, the common-law rule as to voluntary payments,⁵⁶ their effect being to make payment of an invalid tax under protest involuntary, irrespective of any question of compulsion or duress within the rules of the common law.⁵⁷ Where a statute requires a written protest, specifying the grounds, a protest must substantially comply with the statute.⁵⁸ Furthermore, it has been held that, where a voluntary payment is made under protest pursuant to statute, the taxpayer is limited to the grounds of invalidity set forth in the protest, and may recover only if the tax is shown to be illegal for the reason set forth in the protest,⁵⁹ but, where the payment under protest is involuntary, such limitation has been held inapplicable.⁶⁰

In the absence of statute providing a particular remedy, the proper remedy for the recovery of municipal taxes paid is an action at law in the form of assumpsit as for money had and received.

Unless the alleged illegality does not affect the tax but merely the proceedings to collect it,⁶¹ in the absence of statutes providing a particular remedy, the proper remedy for the recovery of municipal taxes paid is an action at law in the form of assumpsit as for money had and received,⁶²

and not a proceeding in equity.⁶³ Where the payment is of an excessive amount, it has been held that an action at law for the recovery of the excess cannot be maintained,⁶⁴ but, where the assessment is wholly void for want of jurisdiction, an action at law may be maintained to recover the illegal tax,⁶⁵ notwithstanding an existing remedy by petition for abatement of the tax.⁶⁶ It has been held that a taxpayer is not limited to administrative remedies set forth in local laws.⁶⁷

In order to maintain an action for the recovery of municipal taxes paid, plaintiff must comply with all conditions precedent fixed by statute.⁶⁸ In jurisdictions where the statute requires that the payment be made under protest as a condition precedent to recovery, it is held that a property owner is not entitled to recover a tax paid under protest in the absence of proof that he made application to the board of equalization for relief from the excessive assessment.⁶⁹ However, where the legality of a tax is attacked on the ground that the city had no jurisdiction over the property, it is not necessary that the taxpayer should exhaust his administrative remedies before bringing action to recover taxes paid.⁷⁰

Whether the claim must be presented to the municipality before action is brought depends on the terms of the particular statutes or charter provisions. Under some statutes, presentation of the claim before suit is required⁷¹ but, under other statutes, presentation of a claim is not necessary,⁷² especially where the city does not have its own complete taxing system,⁷³ and in such a case the municipality may not enlarge or alter the statutory provisions by interpolating therein its charter requirements as to claims generally.⁷⁴ However, even in those jurisdictions where the statute does not require presentation of a claim as a condition precedent to the action, if the municipality has a complete taxing system of its own, including provisions as to refunds, presentation of a claim under charter requirement has been held a condition precedent to the action,⁷⁵ and any ordinance which dispenses with such a requirement or enlarges the time for presentation of the claim as required by the charter is void.⁷⁶ Under a charter provision that the council shall audit and allow "all accounts chargeable against the city," the claim must be audited and allowed before action can be brought.⁷⁷ Where the action is regarded as one ex delicto, rather than one ex contractu, it falls within provisions requiring presentation of the claim where the action is for a tort,⁷⁸ but not provisions requiring presentation where the action is on contract.⁷⁹ Money paid to the city after an

Erroneous assessment

Remedy of taxpayer for erroneous assessment is by applying to equalization board, and then appealing to courts for recovery of taxes paid, and statutory remedy for recovery of illegal municipal taxes, where no appeal is given, cannot be resorted to in order to correct erroneous assessment.—Daniel v. Stucky, 257 P. 776, 118 Okl. 150.

Choice of remedy precluding action

Where assessment was appealed from local board and only remedy was review by court, property owners could not maintain action against taxing municipality to recover allegedly excessive and unlawful tax.—Burling v. Village of Green Lake, 20 N.W.2d 717, 248 Wis. 103.

Cumulative remedy

The fact that the administrative remedy for the refund and recovery of municipal taxes paid expressly requires the filing of a verified claim and the judicial remedy does not require the filing of a claim is indicative of a legislative intent to afford a distinct and cumulative remedy for the recovery of a municipal tax without filing a prior claim by making payment under protest and bringing suit within six months thereafter.—Brill v. unlawful distress may be recovered back from the municipality without previous demand therefor.⁸⁰

Time to sue, limitations, and laches. An action for the recovery of the tax will be barred if not brought within the time fixed by the statutes of limitations applicable thereto.⁸¹ It has been held that a statute providing that no action to recover back a tax shall be maintained unless commenced within a stated time after payment of the tax is not a mere statute of limitations affecting the remedy,⁸² but a statute establishing a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action to recover back the tax;⁸³ and, under such a statute, if the action is not brought within the stated time, it cannot be maintained, even though the tax was levied under an unconstitutional statute.⁸⁴ A statute stipulating that an action to recover back "a tax" must be brought within a stated time is held to apply to municipal taxes.⁸⁵

The taxpayer's action is unaffected, however, by limitations contained in a statute relating to state taxes, in the absence of a provision making it applicable to city taxes;⁸⁶ by limitations contained in general statutes as against limitations contained in a later special act relating particularly to defendant city;⁸⁷ or by limitations contained in a statute applicable to actions against the collector, where the taxpayer has elected to bring his action against the city.⁸⁸ Charter provisions requiring all actions on any contractual liability, express or implied, to be begun within a specified time after the accrual of the cause of action,⁸⁹ or within a specified time after the refusal of the claim by the city council,⁹⁰ have been held inapplicable to actions for the recovery of tax moneys collected under a void assessment. Furthermore, it has been held that the limitations of a local law as to a refund of an erroneously or illegally collected tax are inapplicable to an action for money had and received to recover a tax on the ground that the tax was void in part because of unconstitutionality.⁹¹ A failure of the taxpayer to seek his remedy for a period of time sufficient under the circumstances to constitute laches bars recovery.⁹² A lapse of time, short of the statute of limitations, has been held not to bar recovery on the ground of laches.⁹³

Parties. In some jurisdictions, the taxpayer may sue either the officer who illegally collected the money or the municipality which illegally received it;⁹⁴ but in other jurisdictions, he can sue the city

Computation of period

Where a city accepts a check in payment of a tax and enters the taxes as paid on that date, the statute of limitations against an action for the recovery of such payment begins to run from that date and not from the date on which the check is cashed.—New York Second Nat. Bank v. New York, 107 N.E. 1039, 213 N.Y. 457.

Amendment of statute

Rights of property owner paying delinquent city real estate taxes under protest are governed by the statute prescribing period for the enforcement by city of tax liens before its amendment, where taxes were assessed and became in arrears before enactment of amendment, and period of limitation prescribed by unamended statute had expired before amendment.—Forwood v. Treasurer

It has been held that the payor under protest to a town collector of taxes illegally assessed can recover them from the treasurer of the town, although there is no record to show that moneys were ever paid over to the treasurer, both collector and treasurer being agents of the town.—Albro v. Kettelle, 107 A. 198, 42 R.I. 270—61 C.J. p 1001 note 83 [c].

only.⁹⁵ Suit for the refunding of a city tax cannot be maintained against a county,⁹⁶ unless, by virtue of statute, the right of the city to appear and defend is delegated to the county.⁹⁷ It has been held that a town cannot be sued for taxes collected by it for county and state purposes,⁹⁸ unless the statutes so provide.⁹⁹ Where a tax is irregular, but not void, and payment is made under duress to the collector, who pays the money into the town treasury, an action for recovery of the amount cannot be maintained against the town;¹ nor can the taxpayer recover it from the collector in an action of assumpsit;² and, although the tax is illegal and void, an action cannot be maintained against the town to recover back the tax or that portion thereof paid to the town officers, where the town has no treasurer and the officers to whom such tax can be paid do not represent it in receiving the money, but the money received by them is expended in the performance of official duty.³ It has been held that one or more taxpayers may sue for the benefit of themselves and of all others similarly situated to recover the entire fund accumulated for the collection of an illegal municipal tax.⁴

Pleading. The petition or complaint must distinctly allege the facts relied on as rendering the tax illegal or its exaction unlawful.⁵ The performance of all conditions precedent to the maintenance of the action must be alleged, such as compliance with the presentation of claims as required by statute.⁶

Evidence. General rules of evidence have been held applicable to actions for the recovery of municipal taxes paid,⁷ in respect of presumptions and inferences of facts,⁸ and in respect of the weight and sufficiency of the evidence.⁹ The burden of proof is on the taxpayer to show the illegality of the tax,¹⁰ and, in an action for money had and received, he must show that the receipt by the person collecting the tax was in law a receipt by the city.¹¹

Amount recoverable. Recovery is limited to the amount of the tax illegally exacted.¹² In some jurisdictions it is held that a taxpayer entitled to recover back illegal or excessive taxes is entitled to interest on the amount paid, even though a statute does not expressly so provide,¹³ and, when interest is recoverable, it runs from the time of payment,¹⁴ or from the time of demand for repayment where there is no obligation to repay until demand.¹⁵ Thus, under a statute providing for an abatement of a tax by assessors in cases where a

6. COLLECTION AND ENFORCEMENT

a. In General

§ 2070. In General

The collection of taxes by municipal corporations ordinarily is regulated by statute or constitutional provision, and a statute recognizing the power of a city to levy taxes has been held to contemplate the power to make all reasonable provisions for the collection thereof.

The collection of taxes by municipal corporations ordinarily is regulated by statute or constitutional provision,¹⁹ with respect to both the authority to enforce their collection²⁰ and the manner of collection, as discussed infra § 2074. The general law prevails if a charter provision relating to the collection of taxes is not self-executing and no ordinance in execution of such provision has been passed.²¹ A statute recognizing the power of a city to levy taxes has been held to contemplate the power to make all reasonable provisions for their collection.²² The liability for taxes assessed by a municipality is imposed wholly by operation of law and an exemption against the collection of such taxes does not exist.²³ However, where land is sold to the state for delinquent state and county taxes, the city, during the period title to the land is in the state, may not enforce its lien against the land for taxes due and unpaid at the time of sale to the state.²⁴

The authority to collect may be extended specifically by statute to back taxes, the collection of which through some irregularity has been defeated,²⁵ but it also may be provided that tax liens for certain past years be barred and uncollectable, where no proceedings for foreclosure have been instituted,²⁶ and the effect of such a provision is to preclude the collection of taxes for such years under what-

Under a statute which provides that, where two municipalities enact a similar tax on earnings under its provisions, the municipality of residence has priority in the collection of the tax, and the tax so collected may be used as a credit against a similar tax imposed by the municipality of nonresidence, an ordinance adopted under the provisions of the act need not specifically incorporate such a provision.—

The term "held," as used in statute declaring all tax liens held by municipalities for certain year and the years prior thereto, whether evidenced by original tax certificates, or tax sales certificates, and on which no foreclosure proceedings have been instituted, to be barred and uncollectable, cannot be limited to the physical holding of a tangible thing, but is sufficiently comprehensive to include rights appertaining.—City of Raleigh v. Jordan, supra.

ever guise attempted.²⁷ Moratorium laws have been held not to apply to a municipal lien for taxes,²⁸ and, even if municipal officers enter into an agreement with a property owner to delay the enforcement of tax claims pursuant to a plan for liquidation of the property on which the taxes had become liens, such act by the officers has been held to be ultra vires.²⁹ However, taxes that have been levied may not be enforced until the time for payment fixed by the statute has arrived.³⁰ In this respect the statute may permit the holder of a transfer of tax lien to accelerate the maturity of the lien, for the purpose of enforcement thereof, on default, for a specified time, of payment of a tax or assessment on the land due after the date mentioned in the advertisement of sale of the tax lien.³¹

In the collection of taxes a municipal corporation is discharging a governmental function.³² A municipality, by assessing and adjudicating property to it for a certain year's taxes is not estopped to claim a previous year's taxes,³³ and a city government does not lose its right to taxes justly owing on one parcel of property by reason of failure of its officers to assess other property that is likewise taxable.³⁴ The attempt by a collector to collect taxes several years after they become due does not affect his right to collect them.³⁵ In the absence of legislative authority, a court receiver has no authority to enforce the collection of taxes.³⁶

Dissolved corporation; change of charter. Where a municipal corporation has been dissolved, its offices and officers also become defunct, and no taxes can be thereafter collected by them.³⁷ However, taxes levied for any special public purpose may be collected by the agency succeeding to that function,³⁸ and those pledged to secure any municipal obligation may be collected in equity³⁹ and applied to the obligation.⁴⁰ A municipal corporation operating under a new charter may collect taxes due under its former charter.⁴¹

not abolish the office as a subterfuge to effect the removal of the incumbent prior to the expiration of his lawful term.⁴⁵ A party appointed as acting receiver of taxes holds, until discharged, either a position or a mere employment, although there is no ordinance creating the office.⁴⁶ Where charter or statutory provisions designate the officers to collect municipal taxes, such officers are the only persons who can act as collectors,⁴⁷ but a special tax must be collected by the regular collector where, although the appointment of a special collector is authorized by statute, no appointment has been made.⁴⁸

A collector should be appointed or elected in the manner provided by law,⁴⁹ but an irregularity in the election of a collector does not affect the validity of the tax⁵⁰ or the obligation of the taxpayer to pay it.⁵¹ Where the constitution provides that a municipality shall collect state revenues as though it were a county, the general statutes of the state, and not the charter of the municipality, control the election of a collector of revenue for the municipality, and one who is elected to the office at both state and city elections is legally elected at the former and not at the latter.⁵² A sale by a municipality to the lowest bidder of the right of collecting taxes, without any provisions as to his qualifications for the office of collector or any other election, has been held to be void.⁵³ A person performing the duties of city tax collector for several years with the acquiescence of the governing body of the city is a de facto officer.⁵⁴ The terms of the statute determine whether the office of collector is within the classified civil service.⁵⁵

Single collector

It is policy of law to have borough and other local taxes collected by single tax collector.—School Dist. of Borough of Olyphant v. American Surety Co. of New York, 184 A. 758, 322 Pa. 22.

Effect of amendment

An act purporting to amend city charter act and to abolish office and department of receiver of taxes in cities of first class, providing for transfer of books, papers, records, and documents to department of city controller and supplies, materials, and equipment to board of revision of taxes, and empowering city treasurer to "receive" taxes, does not authorize treasurer or board of revision to "collect" taxes.—Stewart v. Hadley, 193 A. 41, 327 Pa. 66.

Treasurer

A municipal wage tax ordinance adopted under the provisions of statute is not invalid because it imposes the duty of collecting the tax on the municipal treasurer, although under the relevant local legislation there has hitherto been a single tax collector and a single tax collection system for the municipality.—Bloom v. City of Scranton, 64 Pa. Dist. & Co. 358.

49. Ky.—Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Commonwealth, for Use of City of Jackson, 67 S.W.2d 719, 252 Ky. 476.

Selection by commissioners

Law contemplates that commissioners of city will exercise discretion and good judgment in selecting from their number those best qualified to serve city as tax collector.—Frith v. State ex rel. Kinsaul, 28 So. 2d 255, 158 Fla. 175.

Resolution or ordinance

(1) Fact that act of borough council appointing tax collector to fill vacancy was in form of a motion instead of a resolution did not render the appointment void.—Commonwealth v. Bitner, 144 A. 733, 294 Pa. 549.

(2) Entry, under ordinances of city, that certain person was nominated for office of tax collector, and showing vote thereon, was sufficient to show appointment to city office.—Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Commonwealth, for Use of City of Jackson, 67 S.W.2d 719, 252 Ky. 476.

55. Conn.—State ex rel. McNamara v. Civil Service Commission of City of Bridgeport, 24 A.2d 846, 128 Conn. 585.

Executive position or office

Although assistant city tax collector had general charge of office and its personnel and performed many duties in which she was required to use her judgment and discretion, but all final decisions were made by the collector, position of assistant tax collector was not an executive position or office within civil service act placing executive offices or positions in the unclassified service, but was in the classified service.—State ex rel. McNamara v. Civil Service Commission of City of Bridgeport, supra.

Transfer of duties

Where city charter provided that city taxes should be collected by city collector, the constitution did not prohibit the legislature from transferring the duties of the collection of city taxes and other duties as to taxes from the city officials to the county officials.—Bagley v. Gilbert, 122 P.2d 227, 63 Idaho 494.

collecting taxes for municipalities of certain classes is imposed on county officers; but a statute requiring the county to collect unpaid municipal taxes has been held invalid as taking from municipal officers the constitutional right and duty to collect municipal taxes.⁵⁸ County officers when collecting taxes for a municipality are ex officio officers of the municipality, and, while not losing their identity as county officers, they become agents of the municipality to collect taxes for it.⁵⁹

b. Term of Office; Removal

A tax collector or similar official ordinarily is entitled to hold his office or position for the time fixed by statute or charter provision, but where no definite term is prescribed a person appointed as collector by the governing body of the municipal corporation is entitled to hold the office only at the will of the governing body. A collector may be removed only on the grounds and in the manner authorized by statute.

A tax collector or similar official ordinarily is entitled to hold his office or position for the time fixed by statute or charter provision,⁶⁰ but where no definite term is prescribed by statute a person appointed as collector by the governing body of the municipal corporation is entitled to hold the office only at the will of the governing body,⁶¹ even though such body by resolution specified that the appointment was for a definite term of years.⁶² A receiver of taxes of a city is a public officer and not a private employee, and where the charter provides that he may be removed at pleasure, his appointment for a period of five years does not constitute an irrevocable contract which will prevent his removal during such time.⁶³ The term of office of a deputy receiver is coterminous with that of the receiver whose deputy he is.⁶⁴ Where there is no ordinance creating the office of acting receiver of taxes, no particular term attaches thereto, with respect to a claim of unlawful discharge from office,⁶⁵ and an acting receiver may be summarily removed on appointment and qualification of a receiver, since the appointment of an acting receiver is a temporary one, the occasion for which ends when a receiver is appointed.⁶⁶

Statutes frequently govern the matter of removal of a collector from his office or position,⁶⁷ and in such case a collector may be removed in the manner, and on the grounds, authorized by the statute,⁶⁸ but only where so authorized.⁶⁹ In this respect the city council is not governed by general law restricting the causes for removal where a charter provision specifically applies.⁷⁰ A tax collector is a municipal officer within the purview of a statute authorizing the removal of a municipal officer for failure to comply with any reasonable direction in statutory provisions for the sale of realty to enforce tax liens;⁷¹ and a collector of delinquent taxes of a city is an officer within the meaning of a constitutional provision permitting the removal

Statement of reasons

(1) Council of city which in reof appointed officers at the pleasure of the appointing power.⁷³

c. Powers, Duties, and Liabilities

- (1) In general
- (2) Payment over and accounting

(1) In General

The powers and duties of a tax collector are fixed by the terms of the statute under which he acts, and his jurisdiction is limited to the boundaries of the municipal corporation for which he is appointed or elected.

The powers and duties of a tax collector are fixed by the terms of the statute under which he acts,⁷³ and his jurisdiction is limited to the boundaries of the municipal corporation for which he is appointed or elected.⁷⁴ He is a subordinate ministerial officer,⁷⁵ having no discretionary power to determine the legality of the tax,⁷⁶ but merely a duty to collect the taxes⁷⁷ as they are certified in the assessment roll.⁷⁸ His authority to collect back taxes has been held not to be adversely affected by the fact that the tax bill therefor describes the taxes other than those for the general fund merely as special taxes and sewer taxes.⁷⁹ Under some statutes the authority of the collector to collect is extended for a fixed period beyond the time when his term of office expires,⁸⁰ and during the period of his extended authority he may certify delinquent real estate to the city solicitor.⁸¹ Under a statute so providing, the collector must have a warrant in due form of law before he can proceed with his duties as collector,⁸² but in the absence of such a statute a special and formal warrant or other precept, directing the collector to proceed with the collection of taxes and to enforce their payment, is not required.⁸³

Place and time of business. The city council may by ordinance require the office of the tax collector to be located in the municipal building and the business of his office to be transacted there;⁸⁴ but the council has no authority to impose requirements as to the days and hours of the collector's attendance at his office beyond those permitted by statute.⁸⁵

Duty to furnish certificates as to tax liens. Under some statutes a duty is imposed on a municipal receiver of taxes to furnish certificates as to tax liens

Additional duties

Statute permitting city to provide by ordinance that collector of taxes shall collect, under title of city collector, all accounts due city, merely added new duties to existing office of collector of taxes to be performed by the incumbent of that office under designation of "city collector."—McGah v. Quigley, 22 N.E.2d 192, 303 Mass. 598.

Necessity of demand

Per capita and occupation taxes levied and assessed for certain year against employee were not delinquent on last day of year within meaning of act defining the rights, powers, and duties of collectors of municipal taxes, and providing for the collection of such taxes from employers of delinquent taxables, where no previous demand had been made on the employee for the payment thereof.—Martin v. Danko, 18 A.2d 324, 143 Pa. Super. 106.

Protection of bondholders

Provision of statute that when city council orders suits to foreclose delinquent improvement assessment liens, tax collector shall be relieved of further duty with respect to such assessments, simply indicates that he has no duty as far as foreclosure proceedings are concerned, but does not render inapplicable provisions of such act as to tax sales of delinquent properties and levy of taxes to pay for such properties purchased by city or negative such officer's authority and obligation to act under such provisions when demanded for bondholders' protection.—Wulff-Hansen & Co. v. Silvers, 131 P.2d 373, 21 Cal.2d 253.

Properties improperly included

The command contained in a warrant to collect taxes delivered to one of the collectors of the tax district in the city would be ineffective and invalid as to exempt property or properties illegally assessed which were included in the list; warrants which included land divided by boundary line between the two districts, without distinguishing part subject to tax in each district, was invalid as to property which was not contained within the tax district.—Banks v. in order to make available, to one wishing to know, the exact state of the official record so that such person may act on the information received.⁸⁸ A person receiving an incorrect or false certificate as to liens from an officer required, as receiver of taxes, to furnish such information may recover damages suffered as a result of the error.⁸⁷

Refund of taxes. If the collector of taxes binds himself personally to refund a tax on a condition stated in his agreement, he becomes liable therefor under his contract on fulfillment of the condition.⁸⁸ The fact that he signed the contract as "collector" does not affect the personal nature of his undertaking⁸⁹ or liability.⁹⁰

A receiver of rents and income, appointed under a statute dealing with the receivership of property to enforce the collection of delinquent municipal taxes, has the duty to collect rents and pay them to the municipality in reduction of unpaid taxes.⁹¹ The receiver owes to the owner of the premises a fiduciary duty to use reasonable efforts to collect from the tenant the rent as it accrues,⁹² and he may be liable to the owner for damages resulting from his negligence or intentional omission to attempt to collect such rent;⁹³ but the city is not liable for such damages.⁹⁴ In order to hold the receiver liable for damage resulting from his failure to perform his duty to collect the rents and apply them to unpaid taxes, the owner must show actual damages caused thereby,⁹⁵ and such damage is not shown unless the owner proves that, as a result of the receiver's failure to use reasonable efforts to collect the rent, he has thereby been compelled to pay a greater price to redeem the premises from the tax lien than he would have had to pay had the receiver performed his duty, or that he would have been able to redeem at a lower figure but has been unable to redeem at the higher figure.⁹⁶ In the absence of proof of actual damage from the receiver's neglect, the owner is entitled to a decree for nominal damages and costs.⁹⁷

(2) Payment Over and Accounting

The collector must pay over or account for taxes collected, and suit may be brought against him to enforce such duty, or he may be held criminally liable for misapplying municipal funds.

Estoppel of city

City commission, having recognized authority of city secretary to act as tax collector, was not precluded from holding him responsible as collector because of failure to pass ordinance consolidating the two offices.—Germany v. State, 3 S.W.2d 798, 109 Tex.Cr. 180.

Application to loan

Where municipal tax collector borrowed money to cover uncollected taxes charged in duplicates, he could retain amount of loan from taxes subsequently collected on duplicates, and apply sums retained to payment of loan.—American Surety Co. of New York v. First Nat. Bank, C.C.A. Pa., 96 F.2d 813.

Interest

The official report of a town collector required under the law and his bond to collect and pay the money over to the town treasurer, which shows the amount collected and paid out, is a settlement of his account with the town, and the balance shown and not properly accounted for is chargeable with interest from the date of the report under a statute providing that creditors shall be allowed interest on money due in the settlement of account from the day of liquidating accounts and ascertaining the balance.—Cicero v. Hall, 88 N.E. 476, 240 Ill. 160.

to enforce such duty,⁹⁹ or he may be held criminally liable for misapplying municipal funds.¹ Some statutes are construed to provide an exclusive remedy against the collector for his failure to collect or account for taxes.² No liability attaches to the collector with respect to as much of the taxes as are in excess of the legal limit and which he has not collected.³ The city is estopped to claim that the collector was responsible for taxes which he failed to collect where it appears that such failure was due to acts for which the city itself was responsible,⁴ and, where the city council has by formal action exonerated the treasurer from his failure to collect certain delinquent taxes, it cannot subsequently revoke its action.⁵ The account may be opened on grounds of bad faith or fraud.⁶ A clerk or deputy is not liable to the municipality but only to his principal.⁷

The collector's duty to pay into the treasury monthly all moneys belonging to the city which come into his hands is not performed by his placing of the city's funds on time deposit in a bank, where such practice is not authorized by statute.⁸ On the other hand, the council may have statutory authority to require the collector to deposit in designated banking institutions all moneys received by him, and this carries with it implied authority to require that deposits be made with such frequency as is incident to sound business practice.⁹ It has been held that a collector depositing city funds in a bank is liable for the loss of such funds through the insolvency of the bank, since he is an insurer of the safety of public funds in his custody, even though the loss occurred through no fault of his own.¹⁰ A collector who collects state and county taxes as well as municipal taxes must issue separate receipts and keep separate books for the municipal taxes.¹¹

d. Bonds

A collector or receiver of taxes may be required to give a bond with sureties conditioned for the faithful performance of his duty or to secure his due accounting for the money collected, and, in a proper case, suit may be brought against the collector and his sureties to enforce liability on the bond.

It is frequently required by law that a collector or receiver of taxes shall give a bond with sureties conditioned for the faithful performance of his duty or to secure his due accounting for the money collected,¹² but a municipal council has been held

Right to commissions

Phillips*, supra.

Sufficiency of complaint

In town's action against former mayor and aldermen thereof to recover sum, for which mayor, as tax collector, was alleged to have wrongfully and fraudulently failed to account, complaint, not alleging, directly or impliedly, that other defendants acted corruptly or maliciously, stated no cause of action against them for negligent failure to perform official or governmental duties involving exercise of judgment and discretion.—*Town of Old Fort v. officers should furnish a surety company as surety, that bond should be given before commitment to collector of taxes, and that selectmen or mayor and aldermen could declare the office of tax collector vacant on failure to give bond, disclosed a legislative purpose to standardize form and security of collectors' bonds, to remove in a large measure such matters from local control, and to provide that only one bond should be given.—McGah v. Quigley, supra.

(2) Statute requiring tax collector to give bond is intended for protection of the city and is of no concern to taxpayer.—City of Lowell v. Marden & Murphy, 74 N.E.2d 666, 321 Mass. 597, certiorari denied 68 S.Ct. 354, 332 U.S. 850, 92 L.Ed. 420.

Holding over

Under statute authorizing cities of fourth class to appoint tax collector to hold office for two years from appointment and until successor is appointed and qualified, where city permitted collector to hold over and execute bond annually, bond was binding on surety.—Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Commonwealth, for Use of City of Jackson, 67 S.W.2d 719, 252 Ky. 476.

Liability for premium

(1) City was bound by law to pay premium on bond given by city treasurer who was also tax collector, but was not bound to pay whatever premium the treasurer fixed in his application.—National Surety

to have no authority to require by ordinance that assistants employed by the collector at his own expense and liability be bonded on bonds approved and held by the municipality but paid for by the tax collector.¹³ Where the collector holds, also, another office for which the statute prescribes the giving of a bond, it has been held that he must give a separate bond for each office,¹⁴ and in such case a default by the collector subjects to liability only the sureties on the particular bond which has been breached;¹⁵ but, where a single bond is given by a person acting as tax collector for the city as well as for other governmental units, the bond is executed for the benefit of all such units.¹⁶

The bond must be in the form required by statute or ordinance,¹⁷ but where the collector assumed duties on the faith of a bond with the surety's knowledge, and the bond was left with the proper custodian, the collector and his surety may be estopped to dispute the regularity or validity of the bond or its due approval or acceptance.¹⁸ The qualifications of the surety on a collector's bond are determined by the charter or statute,¹⁹ and a city ordinance inconsistent therewith is void.²⁰ The sureties on the collector's bond are liable to the city for any default of the collector in the collection of the taxes or his accounting therefor to the city;²¹ and the collector may be liable to the city on his bond for taxes legally committed and uncollected.²² A bond given under some statutes, however, limits the liability of the surety to the ordinary liability of a surety on a fidelity bond,²³ in which case the surety is not liable for negligent but honest failure of the collector to collect or pay over taxes.²⁴ A collector's bond does not create a lien on land of the sureties where the statute under which the bond was executed makes no provision therefor.²⁵

Approval of form

Tax collector was not disqualified because his bonds were approved by commissioner of corporations and taxation and by city council, although statute provided for giving bond in form approved by commissioner and in sum fixed by mayor and aldermen, as city council possesses powers of mayor and aldermen.—*City of Lowell v. Collections during year

Where city tax collector's bond referred to appointment for term beginning January 1, and ending December 31, surety was liable for collector's failure to account for any money collected during the year, although tax books were delivered to collector on July 1, and bond did not come to council's attention until October 5.—*Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Impossibility of showing source of funds

Where funds collected by a defaulting city collector from the city and from improvement districts are jointly deposited in his name as collector, and it is impossible to show from what source the funds came, further than that they were collections for the benefit of the city and the districts in order to determine the shortage to each, it is proper to divide the joint fund pro rata, in accordance with the amounts due to each.—Ætna Casualty, etc., Co. v. North Little Rock, 248 S.W. 294, 157 Ark. 291.

Liability not assumed

Mayor and council of city had power to limit responsibility of surety on official bond of city treasurer so as not to include any liability for failure by subordinate officer to collect taxes; representation to bonding company that city clerk and treasurer did not have duty of collecting taxes amounted to rescission, in so far as bonding company was concerned, of any such duty theretofore conferred on city clerk and treasurer.—*Mason v. Brenner, supra.

Evidence

Burden was on use-plaintiff to show that mortgagee, who had applied to use-plaintiff for a locality claim search to ascertain what liens, if any, were prior to mortgage and thereafter foreclosed mortgage and bought mortgaged land, lost title to the land by reason of proceedings subsequently brought and prosecuted to recover taxes not shown in certificate issued by receiver; where use-plaintiff offered evidence showing a settlement with mortgagee, and produced evidence showing title to have been in mortgagee and details of proceedings enforcing tax liens, use-plaintiff made a prima facie case.—City of Philadelphia, to Use of Land Title Bank & Trust Co. v. A defaulting tax collector has been held not to forfeit the right to commissions on taxes actually paid over by the collector because of his embezzlement of other taxes received;³⁹ but where a collector is guilty of misappropriating funds the municipality may offset its claim for such defalcation against the collector's claim for fees earned during his last term of office, regardless whether the funds were misappropriated during such or a prior term of office.⁴⁰

§ 2072. Contracts for Collection

In the absence of statutory or charter prohibition, a municipal corporation may make a contract with any person for the collection of any of its taxes, but it may not provide for compensation in an amount greater than that permitted by law or employ the collection device of contingent compensation where the statute requires compensation by fees only.

Where, under charter or statute, it is the duty of a particular municipal officer to collect taxes, a contract made with any other person to collect them has been held ultra vires;⁴¹ but in the absence of statutory or charter prohibition a municipal corporation may make a contract with any person for the collection of any of its taxes,⁴² and is liable for a breach thereof,⁴³ although it may not provide for compensation in an amount greater than that permitted by statute or charter provision.⁴⁴ A municipal corporation having full charter power to provide for the collection of taxes may utilize banks as collection agencies⁴⁵ and adopt some reasonable and convenient method of remittance by such banks.⁴⁶

It has been held that a municipal corporation may employ a special attorney to enforce the payment of delinquent taxes for a stated commission on taxes collected;⁴⁷ but it has also been held that a municipal corporation may not, in the absence of statutory authority therefor, employ the collection device of contingent fees or compensation for services employed in the collection of public revenue,⁴⁸ and may not enter into a contract of employment with an attorney as a private practitioner to foreclose tax sale certificates on behalf of the municipality for a contingent attorney's fee from the proceeds of the sales.⁴⁹ A contract which is invalid by reason of the fixing of compensation as a per cent of the taxes recovered gives the attorney no right to recover damages on an alleged breach of the contract;⁵⁰ nor can the attorney recover on quantum meruit an amount in excess of the amount which could by express contract be authorized or legally paid by the governing body of the municipality.⁵¹ A contract for the collection of taxes must

(1) It has been held that statute authorizing cities to employ attorneys to collect delinquent taxes contemplates compensation by fees only, and does not authorize contract whereby attorney should receive a per cent of the taxes collected.—City of South Houston v. Dabney, 120 S.W.2d 436, 132 Tex. 96—

Dodson v. City of Del Rio, Civ. App., 172 S.W.2d 125, error refused.

(2) It has been held, however, that even if a contract providing for compensation on a percentage basis were invalid, a delinquent taxpayer could not defeat the payment of his taxes on the ground that the city exceeded its authority in allowing such compensation where the governing body of the city authorized the suit to be brought.—McCullum v. City of Richardson, Civ. App., 121 S.W.2d 423, error dismissed.

comply with statutory requirements as to the execution of municipal contracts generally,⁵³ and it may not be claimed that these requirements are inapplicable and that the contract is one governed by statutes dealing with the authority of the mayor to appoint an accountant to audit the books and accounts⁵³ or dealing with the duties and compensation of county tax assessors and collectors.⁵⁴

The state legislature may not, in violation of a constitutional provision, release taxes owing to a municipal corporation or authorize the municipality to compromise a claim for taxes due it; but in the absence of a constitutional prohibition a municipal corporation may be authorized by statute to effect such a compromise, although its officers may not act in this respect except in conformity with the statute.

Ordinarily the state legislature may not, in violation of a constitutional provision, release assessments of taxes owing to a municipal corporation,⁵⁵ and, where the constitution of the state prohibits the legislature from authorizing a municipality to release or extinguish in whole or in part the indebtedness or liability of any person or corporation to the municipality, the municipality has no power to compromise a claim for taxes.⁵⁶ So the municipality cannot release the property from liability for taxes in whole or in part even after it has passed to another than the original taxpayer,⁵⁷ and it will not be bound by an agreement negotiated by the city attorney with the taxpayer that the suit involving the right of the city to collect the tax shall abide the result of another suit to which the city is not a party and over which it has no control.⁵⁸ Even after a compromise has been made and the taxpayer has made a payment thereunder, the municipality may sue for the taxes,⁵⁹ without first paying back to the taxpayer the amount received under the void compromise agreement,⁶⁰ since it is sufficient to credit the amount paid on the taxes due.⁶¹ Also, a municipal corporation forbidden by its charter to compromise municipal taxes may not ratify an unauthorized compromise made by another.⁶²

Rio, Civ.App., 172 S.W.2d 125, error refused.

Statutory schedule

Where attorney fees which city could pay for collection of delinquent taxes were fixed in statutory schedule, there was no implied contract for payment of larger sum, since municipality must have power to enter into contract before it can be bound on implied contract to pay reasonable value of services rendered in reliance on an express contract which is void for some irregularity.—Dodson v. City of Del Rio, Tex.Civ.App., 172 S.W.2d 125, error refused.

52. Ala.—Council v. City of Dothan, 181 So. 293, 236 Ala. 166.

Issue for court

In certiorari proceeding to review resolutions of city authorizing contract whereby attorney was engaged to take necessary legal action to liquidate tax lien certificates held by city for stated compensation for each certificate, court was only concerned with legality of contract and not with fact that other cities had allegedly paid considerably less for similar work.—Boscia v. City of Garfield, 25 A.3d 251, 128 N.J.Law 267.

Mere authorization; rescission

Where resolution of councilmen of borough was a mere authorization to mayor and borough clerk to execute a contract with attorney for liquidation of tax title liens and agreement itself prepared by attorney contemplated formal execution of contract before binding obligations were to arise, no binding contract arose on part of borough notwithstanding contract was executed by attorney and signed by borough clerk in attestation and by councilmen as witnesses and tax sale certificates were delivered to attorney, where mayor refused to sign; in such case subsequent resolution rescinding resolution authorizing agreement was valid.—*Samuel v. Some statutes, however, have been held to authorize a compromise of taxes by the municipality,⁶³ or they may provide for an abatement of taxes in favor of taxpayers in default.⁶⁴ Also, in the absence of a constitutional prohibition, and independently of statutory provisions, it has been held in some jurisdictions that a municipality may compromise a claim for taxes,⁶⁵ as by accepting a deed of land for a road;⁶⁶ but in other jurisdictions it is held that a municipal corporation has no power to compromise⁶⁷ or remit⁶⁸ taxes in the absence of a statute granting such power. So state⁶⁹ or municipal⁷⁰ officers, or attorneys retained by a city to collect taxes by suit,⁷¹ may not remit, abate, settle, or compromise taxes due the municipality, except in conformity with statute. In the absence of an authorizing statute, a claim for city taxes cannot be compromised by a county court.⁷²

Adjustment of back taxes. Under some statutes providing for the appointment by the court of commissioners to adjust taxes in arrears, the making of an application for the appointment is discretionary with the municipal authorities,⁷³ and, where an order of appointment has been annulled on the application of the municipal authorities, the order of annulment will not be disturbed by a higher court.⁷⁴ Sometimes such a statute is so worded and construed as to apply only on arrearages which had accrued prior to the date of the approval of the act,⁷⁵ and not to authorize the adjustment of unpaid taxes subsequently accruing;⁷⁶ and so a supplemental act merely extending the authority of the board has been construed in the same way to give it power to deal with taxes in arrears up to the date of its enactment,⁷⁷ but not to invest the commissioners with a prospective jurisdiction to deal independently with future arrearages.⁷⁸ The vacation by the court of its order confirming an award of commissioners of adjustment, and the substitution therefor of a final order with the consent of the parties and based on a settlement agreement in which a gross amount for a series of years was substituted for the award, cannot be questioned by the municipality in an equity action brought by the taxpayer to restrain the collection of the tax.⁷⁹

a. General Principles

Questions relating to the manner of collecting municipal taxes depend almost entirely on statutory or charter provisions or ordinances enacted under authority conferred by charter or statute; and, within limits imposed by such provisions, a municipal corporation generally may enforce collection by the adoption of such means as will render effective the exercise of the power of enforcement.

authority conferred by charter or statute.⁸¹ Where a municipal corporation has been granted express power to enforce taxes, it has the implied power to enforce collection by the adoption of such means as will render the exercise of the power effective.⁸² A statute or charter provision providing certain methods of collecting taxes does not preclude the adoption of other methods not inconsistent therewith where the statutory remedy is by its terms cumulative,⁸³ but it has been held that a municipality is without power to change by local law the method of collecting taxes established by the legislature,⁸⁴ and that, where a statute specifies certain methods of collection, a municipality cannot by ordinance provide a new method, not provided by law, to collect delinquent taxes.⁸⁵

Where it is so provided by constitutional or statutory provision, municipalities have the right to enforce collection of their taxes in the same manner as the state⁸⁶ or county,⁸⁷ and the state or county method prevails if the statute so provides,⁸⁸ in which case changes made in the state method apply also to the collection of municipal taxes.⁸⁹ Unless otherwise provided by constitution or statute, however, the method of enforcing municipal taxes may vary from the procedure provided for the enforcement of state and county taxes,⁹⁰ and such differences in procedure are valid when the tax is legal and the procedure adopted by the municipality does not deny due process or equal protection of the laws.⁹¹ The collection of municipal taxes does not follow the method used in collecting state or county taxes where a different method of collecting municipal taxes is provided.⁹² Where a statute or charter provides several remedies for the enforcement of delinquent taxes and such remedies are cumulative and consistent, the municipality has an option, although not technically an election, between such remedies unless contract rights are involved,⁹³ and it is not required to adopt one statutory method of collection rather than another.⁹⁴ A municipality is not limited in the collection of taxes to statutory remedies; equitable relief may be invoked if a proper basis for it is established.⁹⁵ In any case, where persons have made it impossible for the city to pursue its statutory remedy for the collection of taxes, they may be equitably estopped to assert that the city is limited to such remedy.⁹⁶ A court of chancery has been held to have general jurisdiction over proceedings for the collection of taxes by municipalities,⁹⁷ and a charter provision authorizing the city to elect to enforce its tax lien on realty in a court of equity adds nothing to the power of the city, since a city has a right under general law to proceed in equity or at law.⁹⁸

General laws and special statutes. Under some constitutional requirements methods of collection must conform to the general laws,⁹⁹ even though the municipality has a home-rule or freeholders' charter adopted under authority of law;¹ but in the absence of a constitutional requirement that the collection of taxes must conform to the general laws a method prescribed by a special statute or charter will exclude methods under the general law.²

Repeal of statutes. Methods of collecting municipal taxes adopted in an earlier charter or statute are not abrogated by the enactment of later statutes where the later statutes do not deal with municipal taxes,³ or, if they deal with municipal taxes, they do so in a way not inconsistent with the provisions of the earlier statute,⁴ or they preserve the provisions of the prior law either expressly or by fair implication.⁵ Even where the provisions conflict, those contained in a special city charter will prevail over a general law subsequently enacted in the absence of any express repealing clause.⁶ An earlier special charter is repealed, however, by a subsequently enacted general law which in terms provides for repeal of the charter at the election of the city, and the city so elects,⁷ in which case the city may proceed to the collection of back taxes

according to the method provided in the general law.⁸

b. Particular Methods

(2) Receivership or sequestration

(1) In General

Collection of taxes due a municipal corporation may be enforced, under various statutes, by the withholding of money payable by the municipality to the tax debtor or by the withholding by an employer of taxes payable by his employee.

In addition to the ordinary modes of collection of taxes discussed infra §§ 2075-2099, collection may be enforced, under a statute so providing, by the withholding of payment by the municipal treasurer of any money payable to a person whose taxes are due and unpaid, whether or not they are secured by a tax title held by the municipal corporation.⁹ Also, an ordinance may require that an employer withhold and return taxes on employees' earnings,¹⁰ without payment of compensation to the employer for such service;¹¹ and an employer corporation present and subject to the jurisdiction of the city council may be required to collect a wage tax at the source from residents of the city even though they are employed and are paid by the corporation outside the city.¹² The city may proceed to attach land to fix a lien for taxes assessed against realty,¹³ but a statute furnishing a summary remedy for the collection of taxes by a collector on personality has been held to negative the right of the mayor of the city to enforce the collection of taxes by the institution of an attachment proceeding.¹⁴ Also, a city has been held without authority to provide for the collection of a sales tax by the enforcement of a mechanics' lien therefor.¹⁵ A city has been held not entitled to maintain a credi-

(2) Receivership or Sequestration

The collection of taxes may sometimes be enforced by a receivership or sequestration of the tax debtor's property for the application of the rents and profits to the tax indebtedness, but settled equitable principles govern the appointment of a receiver for this purpose.

Under some statutes a city, on ex parte application, may secure the immediate appointment of its treasurer as receiver of the property affected by a tax lien.¹⁸ Such a statute should not be construed as repealing settled equitable principles governing the appointment of a receiver, or as depriving owners and mortgagees of substantive property rights, or as limiting the jurisdiction of a court to apply such principles and to protect such rights,¹⁹ and accordingly the city has no absolute right to the appointment of its treasurer as receiver.²⁰ The ownership of a valid tax lien is essential to the city's right to enforce collection of taxes due in this manner.²¹

Where the city treasurer is appointed receiver of business property as a method to enforce the payment of tax liens held by the city, the city is entitled to compel the owner to pay the receiver the reasonable rental value of the premises occupied by the owner in the conduct of its business;²² but the court should not fix the rent or occupation charge for the premises on affidavits submitted by the city without a hearing thereon,²³ and the taxpayer occupying the premises may not be compelled to pay occupation rent for the period before the appointment of the receiver.²⁴ The receiver has power to apply moneys received not only in payment of unpaid taxes for which the city held the lien, but also in payment of subsequently accruing taxes,²⁵ and he may apply the rents to the satisfaction of unpaid taxes rather than to interest due the city.²⁶ After the city has sold its lien the owner of the realty is entitled to an order directing the receiver to turn over to him the realty before the receiver's account is settled and he is formally discharged, where the rents are in arrears and have not been collected.²⁷

Under some statutes a sequestrator may be appointed to collect rents in aid of the municipal lien for taxes,²⁸ and, in the distribution of rents collected by such sequestrator, the only items which

§ 2075. Actions for Unpaid Taxes

a. In general

b. Persons liable to suit

a. In General

A municipal corporation may enforce the collection of taxes by action or suit in the courts where the power to sue has been conferred by statute or charter, and it may in such case recover a personal judgment.

As a general rule a municipal corporation may enforce the collection of taxes by action or suit in the courts where the power to sue has been conferred by statute or charter,³³ and, where legislative provisions give a remedy by action and also other remedies, such remedies are generally held to be cumulative.³⁴ So a municipality may sue for recovery of a personal judgment for unpaid taxes under authority conferred by statute or charter,³⁵ and, where the charter gives the city council power to determine the method of collecting taxes, the remedy by suit may be provided by ordinance.³⁶ Under some statutes, however, a personal judgment for real estate taxes may be obtained only against a landowner residing within the municipality in which the property is assessed,³⁷

Tax as "debt"

Statutory provisions for collection of taxes for the city by action of debt against person assessed, or against some other person owning land, or by attachment against non-resident owner, merely relate to procedure for collection of tax and do not change character of tax or make the tax a "debt" within the ordinary meaning of that term.—Boyd v. Dillman, 197 A. 830, 9 W.W.Harr. Del., 231.

Purpose of tax

Statute imposing personal liability for taxes assessed by municipality, uses word "municipality" as meaning that tax is for municipal purposes.—Vanzandt v. Town of Braxton, 14 So.2d 222, 194 Miss. 863.

Suit by another

City may bring action to enforce collection of taxes, or may be made party to action by another lien claimant and be required to come in and assert lien.—Wood's Ex'x v. City of Middlesboro, 90 S.W.2d 1018, 262 Ky. 627.

Trustee, a domestic banking cor-whose name is correctly entered on the assessment rolls of the city,³⁸ and not against a nonresident.³⁹ A city may be entitled to maintain an action to collect taxes which had become a lien subsequent to taxes for which a tax sale was had and tax sale certificates theretofore issued.⁴⁰

Independently of statute, there is some conflict of authority as to whether taxes may be enforced by a personal action. On the theory that a tax is not a debt in the ordinary sense, it has been held that no action can be maintained for its collection, in the absence of statutory provision therefor,⁴¹ and that, where other remedies but no action to recover a personal judgment are provided for by statute, the statutory remedies are exclusive.⁴² Some decisions, however, hold that the rule against recovery by personal action in the absence of statutory authorization applies only where the statute provides other remedies,⁴³ and that if a statute makes no provision of any kind for collection, a remedy by personal action is implied,⁴⁴ the right of action in such case belonging to the people of the state,⁴⁵ and not to the city.⁴⁶ According to other decisions a city, independently of statute, may bring suit to recover a personal judgment for a tax due to it the same as in the case of any other debt owing to the municipality,⁴⁷ and other remedies, even though they are the only remedies expressly granted by statute, are not exclusive.⁴⁸ The right of a municipality to maintain a separate suit for delinquent taxes due it must be challenged in such suit, and may not be determined in a suit by the state to collect state and county taxes wherein the municipality is not a party.⁴⁹

An action for unpaid municipal taxes should be brought against the person who is directly and primarily liable for the payment of the tax.

An action for unpaid municipal taxes, where it is a proper method of enforcing collection, should be brought against the person who is directly and primarily liable for the payment of the tax.⁵⁰ Ordinarily there is no personal liability to a municipal corporation for unpaid taxes on realty resting on anybody other than the registered or real owner,⁵¹ and a mortgagee in possession, as such, is not personally liable to the municipality for payment of taxes.⁵² When the real owner of property sets up an irresponsible party merely to hold title and retains the beneficial interest for himself, the mu-poration with its principal offices in city, was a resident of the city within meaning of section of tax law providing that if owner of realty is a resident of tax district in which realty is assessed, and his name is correctly entered on assessment roll, he shall be personally liable for tax.—In re Martin's Will, 66 N.Y.S.2d 679, 187 Misc. 980.

Deficiency after sale

Under the statute providing for the raising of revenue for city purposes, and for the collection of taxes therein, a tax is not a debt, and hence estate of insane person was not chargeable with tax deficiencies remaining after application of full proceeds of sale of lands taxed to payment of delinquent taxes.—In re Schwartz, Del.Ch., 45 A.2d 461.

Monument Ave. Development Corp., 34 S.E.2d 223, 184 Va. 152.

Stipulation pour autrui

The assumption of a municipal tax in a contract of sale is not a stipulation pour autrui for the city's benefit so as to enable city to recover against party making the assumption rather than against the tax debtor.—Homestead Assoc. v. Garland, 31 So. 892, 107 La. 476.

Possession on condition broken

A mortgagee who, on condition broken, takes possession of premises, pursuant to provisions of mortgage, does not thereby become either real or registered owner of premises, with respect to mortgagee's liability for city taxes; mortgagee sustains no trust relation to either city or prior mortgage holder, with respect to mortgagee's liability for city taxes.—Fassitt v. North Tioga Building & Loan Ass'n, supra.

municipality, or one subrogated to its rights, may sue the real or beneficial owner to collect any tax levied;⁵³ but where a person has transferred real estate to another and retained no beneficial interest for himself he is not liable to the municipality for taxes accruing after the transfer.⁵⁴

An owner of realty on which a tax has been assessed has been held not personally liable therefor for the years during which the land was owned by another;⁵⁵ but it has also been held that, although as between the seller and buyer the seller may be liable for taxes, every person who becomes the owner of property on which taxes have not been paid is personally liable therefor to the municipality, and personal judgment may be recovered against him.⁵⁶ In a proceeding to determine the owner of the proceeds of a fire insurance policy on a dwelling house which burned, it has been held that the court may not order the owner of the dwelling to pay part of the proceeds to satisfy the claim for delinquent taxes of a city which intervened in the proceeding.⁵⁷ A purchaser of land at a trustee's sale has been held not liable to the city for unpaid taxes where the trustee failed to apply the proceeds of the sale to the payment of taxes as required by law, since the trustee in such case acted as agent for the city in collecting taxes.⁵⁸

There must be a compliance with conditions precedent fixed by statute or ordinance before bringing suit to recover municipal taxes.

There must be a compliance with conditions precedent fixed by statute or ordinance before bringing suit to recover municipal taxes.⁵⁹ So a return by the tax collector of "no property found"⁶⁰ or the giving of notice that the taxes are due and demanding their payment⁶¹ may be a condition precedent to suit; but a demand or notice is not necessary where the statute requiring it is not applicable to the particular case.⁶² A resolution is usually sufficient as a basis for the institution of the action,⁶³ and it is not required that authority to bring suit should be given by the county treasurer to the municipal officer⁶⁴ or that the city attorney should have been directed to file suit;⁶⁵ but it has also been held that compliance with a statutory provision authorizing the mayor and treasurer of the city to which the tax is due to direct the commencement of the action is a condition precedent to the maintenance of the action.⁶⁶

Under particular statutory and charter provisions, it has been held not to be a condition precedent to the bringing of the action that the lists should have been prepared,⁶⁷ that verified claims for taxes should have been put in the city attorney's hands by the tax collector,⁶⁸ or that money received by the city under a void compromise agreement for the payment of the taxes should be returned to the taxpayer before bringing suit for the balance, as discussed supra § 2073. Efforts to collect the tax by distress are not, in some jurisdictions, a condition precedent in an action to recover the tax,⁶⁹ nor is it necessary that the tax collector should have exhausted the powers of a sheriff given him by statute in order that the city may institute an action to recover the tax.⁷⁰ All errors in the assessment which are fatal to the maintenance of an action for the recovery of the tax must be corrected before action is brought.⁷¹

§ 2077. — Time to Sue and Limitations

A suit to collect unpaid municipal taxes may not be brought before the time fixed by statute, but such a suit must be brought within the time limited by statute.

Under some statutes a suit to collect unpaid municipal taxes may not be brought before a specified day of the year in which they were assessed⁷² or before the day fixed on which they become delinquent.⁷³ In some jurisdictions a personal action by a municipal corporation to recover taxes cannot be barred by prescription, lapse of time, or application of statutes of limitation.⁷⁴ In other jurisdictions the time for bringing suit may be limited either by special statutory or charter provision or by general statutes held applicable thereto;⁷⁵ such provisions, however, do not affect suits pending at the time the legislation is enacted⁷⁶ or the institution of suits for taxes due prior thereto.⁷⁷ An action to recover taxes may be within the terms of a statute of limitations applicable to statutory actions⁷⁸ or to actions for the recovery of state and county taxes;⁷⁹ but an action to recover taxes due on forfeited property is not an action on a judgment within the meaning of a statute limiting actions on judgments, since the forfeiture of the land is a forfeiture in fact and not by judgment in law.⁸⁰

The period of limitations may begin to run from a particular day, fixed by statute, after the taxes have been levied.⁸¹ The tax for each year is considered as a separate cause of action in making the computation of the statutory period.⁸² Tender of the amount of taxes that could have been barred by the statute of limitations is an acknowledgment of liability therefor preventing the operation of the statute.⁸³ Where an action to recover the tax has been begun within the statutory period against the life tenant and vested remaindermen in the property taxed, the statute does not begin to run against one not joined as a party who holds a contingent remainder therein until his interest has become vested.⁸⁴

- a. Right to sue
- b. Defenses
- c. Set-off and counterclaim

a. Right to Sue

Where the statute so provides, and the authority of the officer is established, an action for unpaid taxes is properly brought by the municipal treasurer or attorney, or by written direction from the mayor and the treasurer.

Where the statute so provides, and the authority of the officer is established,⁸⁵ an action for unpaid taxes is properly brought by the municipal treasurer⁸⁶ or attorney⁸⁷ in the name of the city, as discussed infra § 2079. Under a statute providing that the action may be brought in the name of the city on relation of the city solicitor or any other authorized agent, it may be brought on relation of any authorized agent of the city,⁸⁸ even though he is not an officer named in the statute⁸⁹ and the statute elsewhere authorizes the city solicitor to begin suit for the city.⁹⁰

Under some statutes the right to bring suit to collect taxes in the name of the municipality may be conferred only by written direction from the mayor and the treasurer;⁹¹ but notwithstanding the statute the governing body of the municipality may have power to direct a city official to bring suit against tax collectors who are delinquent on their commitments,⁹² although in such case, the order of the council should specify whether the action shall be commenced against the collector individually or on his bond, with a joinder of his surety.⁹³ The direction of the mayor and treasurer to sue for taxes must contain specific authority to institute the action and state the names of the parties to be sued.⁹⁴ Where the action is brought to recover back taxes for several years, a written direction is sufficient if it names specifically the delinquent taxpayer⁹⁵ and recites the years for which taxes remain unpaid;⁹⁶ it is not necessary that there should be a separate written direction for each year's taxes.⁹⁷ The sending of the direction to the city solicitor is sufficient.⁹⁸

b. Defenses

- (1) In general
- (2) Invalidity of tax and irregularities
- (3) Equitable defenses
- (4) Estoppel to urge defense

(1) In General

In an action to recover unpaid municipal taxes, the taxpayer may raise such defenses as will preclude the enforcement of the tax against him; but it is not a defense that the taxpayer is not benefited by the tax, or that it is being, or will be, improperly expended or applied.

In an action to recover unpaid municipal taxes, the taxpayer may raise such defenses as will preclude the enforcement of the tax against him.⁹⁹ It is no defense, however, that the taxpayer is not benefited by the tax¹ or that it is being, or will be, improperly expended or applied.² In an action to recover a tax levied to pay a judgment against the municipal corporation, the taxpayer cannot set up in defense that the municipality has already paid the judgment,³ nor can the fact that belligerent occupation of a city has ceased be set up in defense of an action to recover a tax levied by the military authority.⁴

Payment of an amount based on the taxpayer's valuation of his property is no bar to the collection of the remainder of his tax on the valuation properly fixed by the assessors,⁵ nor can the payment of delinquent taxes by the tax collector to the city be set up as a defense by the taxpayer in a suit by the tax collector against him to recover the amount advanced.⁶

(2) Invalidity of Tax and Irregularities

In an action to recover unpaid municipal taxes, irregularities or overvaluations in the assessment are not available as defenses, where the defendant has not availed himself of the statutory procedure for correcting the errors; but ordinarily it is a defense that the municipal corporation had no authority to levy the tax, or that there had not been a compliance with some mandatory statutory provisions.

Irregularities or overvaluations in the assessment are not available as defenses, in an action to recover unpaid municipal taxes, where defendant has not availed himself of the statutory procedure for correcting the errors⁷ or, under a statute so restricting defenses, where there is an absence of evidence warranting an injunction.⁸ It is no defense that the bonds for which the tax was levied were irregularly issued,⁹ that the municipality levying the taxes was not a corporation de jure,¹⁰ that there were irregularities in the appointment or proceedings of the board of review,¹¹ that the description of the property taxed was not made as directed by statute,¹² or that the collector was a collector de facto.¹³ Also, a delinquent taxpayer may not defeat payment of his taxes on the ground that the municipality exceeded its authority in allowing an attorney, employed to collect taxes, a fee greater than that permitted by law.¹⁴ It is a defense, on the other hand, that the municipal corporation had no authority to levy the tax¹⁵ or that there had not been a compliance with some mandatory statutory provision;¹⁶ and, where the lack of compliance affects the legality of the levy so that there is no legal levy in existence, a statute limiting the defenses in actions for delinquent taxes does not apply.¹⁷ It is also a defense that the assessment list issued to the collector and on which suit was brought included property in part outside of his district.¹⁸ A defense that taxes are in excess of a statutory limitation is good if they are shown not to be within the terms of a validating statute.¹⁹ It has been held that, where a determination of an alleged invalidity of a tax involves complicated questions of fact and law, the taxpayer should contest the point, by bringing a bill in equity to redress the alleged grievance in the imposition of the tax,²⁰ and not by motion to vacate an order for his examination.²¹ Also, it has been held that, where the validity of the tax depends on the population of the city, the taxpayer cannot raise the question whether the city had the requisite number of inhabitants except by a quo warranto proceeding.²²

(3) Equitable Defenses

Some statutes allow equitable defenses in actions to recover a municipal tax.

Some statutes allow equitable defenses in actions to recover a municipal tax,²³ and under such a statute defendant may show that the tax commissioner representing the municipality had wrongfully refused him permission to inspect the assessment roll and had later informed him that there was no tax against him.²⁴ Also, where the action is brought against a purchaser of the land subject to tax, a certificate of a city officer that he had made a search and found no unpaid tax against the land may be set up in defense where the officer was authorized by statute or charter to make the search,²⁵ but not otherwise.²⁶ Similarly, such a certificate may estop the city to attempt to collect the tax as against a mortgagee of the property who forebore the institution of foreclosure proceedings in reliance on the certificate.²⁷ It cannot, however, be shown in defense of an action to recover taxes based on a valid assessment that an officer of the city had previously without authority made another assessment of the same property which the city had repudiated.²⁸ A municipality may not be estopped to assert its tax lien against realty because of a mortgage foreclosure action to which it was not a party.²⁹

Agreement between taxpayer and city attorney. In an action to recover judgment for a tax, based on what the taxpayer regarded as an overvaluation in the assessment but which he was contesting on the ground of exemption, an agreement entered into between the city attorney and the taxpayer that, if the claim of exemption was ultimately overruled by the appellate court, the taxpayer might have an opportunity to file a supplemental statement on the valuation, is a valid equitable defense, in whole or in part, to the extent of allowing the taxpayer opportunity to show the alleged overvaluation.³⁰

Delay by city in prosecuting an action once commenced for so long a time as to raise a presumption of abandonment will have the effect of dissolving the lis pendens in the interest of a purchaser of the property without notice where the circumstances are such as to constitute an estoppel against the city,³¹ but, where the title to the property continues in the person against whom it was assessed and against whom the action was brought, he has no equity entitling him to set up the delay of the city in prosecuting the action as a defense.³²

(4) Estoppel to Urge Defense

In an action to recover unpaid municipal taxes, the taxpayer may be estopped to deny the validity of the tax.

of the tax,³³ as where it appears that he knew that the work, for which the tax was levied, was going on and remained silent about it;³⁴ but unless it appears that defendant's silence was with knowledge he is not estopped thereby.³⁵ Payment of taxes in past years does not estop the taxpayer to set up the defense that the property is not taxable;³⁶ nor does the making of a tax return for a particular year affect the right of the taxpayer making it to later assert in defense of an action for taxes for such year that he was not liable therefor.³⁷ So the reduction of the assessment, where it is not shown that the taxpayer asked for the reduction or that he appeared before the board of review, does not estop him to question the validity of the assessment roll.³⁸

Inconsistent defenses. A taxpayer's defense, denying removal from the city since the assessment, is not inconsistent with his defense of nonresidence in the city, where the latter defense raises a question of the validity of the tax, and the former merely the right to recover in a particular form of action.³⁹

A taxpayer cannot set off, or counterclaim for, obligations due to him from the municipal corporation in an action brought against him to recover a tax.

A taxpayer cannot set off, or counterclaim for, obligations due to him from the municipal corporation, in an action brought against him to recover a tax,⁴⁰ even though municipal officers have agreed with the taxpayer that it may be done,⁴¹ and even though the statute grants to the municipality a right to collect the tax in an action "as upon contract."⁴² So, in a suit to recover delinquent taxes, the taxpayer is not entitled to set off the amount of taxes paid to the municipality in previous years under an erroneous assessment.⁴³

- a. Parties
- b. Process

a. Parties

Generally a municipal corporation may sue to recover unpaid taxes in its own name, and persons charged with liability for the tax are necessary parties to the suit.

Generally a municipal corporation may sue to recover unpaid taxes in its own name;⁴⁴ but under some statutory provisions suit must be brought in the name of the state,⁴⁵ at least in certain cases.⁴⁶ It has also been held that a collector charged with the duty of collecting all delinquent taxes in the behalf of the municipality has the capacity to prosecute in his own name a suit against the taxpayer for past-due taxes.⁴⁷

Persons charged with liability for a tax are necessary parties to a suit to enforce collection of the tax.⁴⁸ In the case of real estate the proper party defendant is the present record owner of the property,⁴⁹ rather than former owners,⁵⁰ but in an action to recover delinquent taxes not assessed until after defendant bought the land under a war-

b. Plea or answer

c. Issues, proof, and variance

a. Petition or Complaint

The complaint or petition in an action to recover unpaid municipal taxes must state the facts necessary to show a cause of action, but a complaint is sufficient if it meets the statutory requirements.

The complaint or petition in an action to recover unpaid municipal taxes must state the facts necessary to show a cause of action,⁵⁹ as, for example, the imposition of the tax according to law,⁶⁰ the amount of the tax claimed to be due,⁶¹ nonpayment of the tax,⁶² and the situs and description of the property taxed.⁶³ A mere statement of the amount due is not sufficient.⁶⁴ A complaint is sufficient if it meets the statutory requirements.⁶⁵ In some jurisdictions the facts constituting the levy need not be set out,⁶⁶ and a petition to recover special taxes to pay bonded indebtedness, where the ordinances making the levy are alleged, need not allege the existence or nature of the debt.⁶⁷ Where the tax bill is prima facie evidence of the correctness thereof and that all proper steps were taken, as discussed infra § 2081, the petition need not allege the publication of the ordinance levying the tax,⁶⁸ and it is necessary and sufficient to allege the facts which the statute makes prima facie evidence of the right to recover.⁶⁹

Facts within judicial notice. It is not necessary to allege a fact of which the court will take judicial notice,⁷⁰ as, for example, the incorporation of the municipality.⁷¹

Amended or supplemental pleading. An amendment of the complaint will be allowed for the purpose of giving a more accurate description of the property,⁷² and, where taxes accrue and are payable after the filing of the original petition, a supplemental petition is proper.⁷³

b. Plea or Answer

The defendant in a suit to recover unpaid municipal taxes must sufficiently state his defenses by answer, and affirmative defenses must be specially pleaded.

Defendant in a suit to recover unpaid municipal taxes must sufficiently state his defenses by answer.⁷⁴ Affirmative defenses must be specially pleaded,⁷⁵ and under some statutes the particular grounds on which defendant claims the tax is invalid must be set forth.⁷⁶ While a denial of knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to certain allegations in the complaint may be proper in some instances,⁷⁷ it may be improper in other instances,⁷⁸ as where it relates to matters of public record.⁷⁹ A plea in abatement that the state and county are necessary parties, in order that their respective tax liens may be marshaled, is properly overruled where it does not appear that the state and county taxes are unpaid.⁸⁰

c. Issues, Proof, and Variance

In an action to recover unpaid municipal taxes, essential averments of the complaint which are put in issue by the answer must be proved; and allegations of invalidity of the tax must be supported by proof sufficient to establish the defense.

General rules as to issues, proof, and variance apply in an action to recover unpaid municipal taxes.⁸¹ Essential averments of the complaint which are put in issue by the answer must be proved;⁸² and, if there is no evidence to show any delinquent tax against defendant, the municipal corporation cannot recover.⁸³ However, matters which are not a condition precedent to the validity of the assessment need not be proved.⁸⁴ Allegations of invalidity of the tax must be supported by proof sufficient to establish the defense.⁸⁵ The use made of property is admissible as bearing on the issue whether or not it is within the meaning of an exemption statute.⁸⁶

- a. Presumptions and burden of proof
- b. Admissibility
- c. Weight and sufficiency

a. Presumptions and Burden of Proof

In an action to recover unpaid taxes, certain presumptions will be indulged in favor of the validity of the tax and the authority of the municipal officer to begin the action. The plaintiff has the burden of proving the material allegations of his complaint while the defendant has the burden of proving the defenses raised by his answer.

of the tax,⁸⁷ and the authority of the municipal officer to begin the action.⁸⁸ However, a statute providing that an assessment roll shall be presumptive evidence of the contents thereof does not apply where an irregularity appears on the face of the roll;⁸⁹ and, where there is delay in taking action to collect the tax, amounting to laches, and a loss of part of the assessment roll, no presumption will be indulged favorable to the regularity of the proceedings beyond what appears on the face of the record.⁹⁰ After the lapse of twenty years, there is a presumption of payment in the absence of other proof of delinquency than the assessment.⁹¹

As in other actions, plaintiff in a suit to recover unpaid taxes has the burden of proving the material allegations of his complaint,⁹² while defendant has the burden of proving the defenses raised by his answer.⁹³ Ordinarily the burden of proof is on defendant where he relies on the invalidity of, or defects in, the tax,⁹⁴ or on the invalidity of the debts for which the tax was levied,⁹⁵ or on its payment.⁹⁶ Where, however, there is a presumption of payment arising from lapse of time, the burden shifts to plaintiff to prove the fact of nonpayment.⁹⁷

A municipal corporation seeking to recover delinquent taxes is entitled to establish the amount of taxes due by any method fixed by law as sufficient; assessment rolls, when duly authenticated and identified, are admissible to show the making of the assessment on which the tax for a particular year was levied, but not to prove the levy.

A municipal corporation seeking to recover delinquent taxes is entitled to establish the amount of taxes due, if any, by the taxpayer, by any method fixed by law as sufficient.⁹⁸ When duly authenticated⁹⁹ and identified,¹ assessment rolls are admissible to show the making of the assessment on which the tax for a particular year was levied,³ but not to prove the levy.³ Where an appropriation is a condition precedent to a tax levy, an appropriation ordinance is admissible to prove the appropriation.⁴ The fact that an assessor failed to make an assessment on personal property of defendant in the city after a particular date cannot be shown in evidence against the collector to show a change of domicile at that time.⁵ An objection to the introduction in evidence of the certificate or tax bill sued on that it was not such as the law contemplated is too general.⁶

Generally, by charter or statutory provisions, the municipal corporation makes out a prima facie case by introducing the tax roll or a certified statement of delinquent taxes in evidence; but, where the proceedings are not in rem and the defendant's ownership is put in issue, a prima facie case of ownership independent of the tax roll must be made out.

General rules as to the weight and sufficiency of evidence apply in an action to recover unpaid taxes.⁷ Generally, by charter or statutory provisions, the municipal corporation makes out a prima facie case by introducing the tax roll or a certified statement of delinquent taxes in evidence,⁸ and any error in the certificate is cured by the production of the original assessments, if they sustain the certificate;⁹ but, where the proceedings are not in rem and defendant's ownership is put in issue, a prima facie case of ownership independent of the tax roll must be made out,¹⁰ and the tax roll alone does not establish the fact of ownership.¹¹

Evidence held insufficient

Ky.—Moss v. Board of Councilmen of

A delinquent tax roll which did not describe personalty has been held insufficient to establish the existence of a tax lien on personalty, although admitted without objection.¹² In the absence of charter or statutory provisions, the delinquent list is not prima facie evidence of the correctness of the prior proceedings,¹³ and the establishment of a valid assessment roll is necessary.¹⁴ Where a valid assessment roll has been once established by proof, it has been held that it has the force of a judgment for plaintiff,¹⁵ and that it is conclusive on defendant¹⁶ and not open to collateral attack.¹⁷

§ 2082. — Trial, Judgment, Execution, and Review

On the trial of an action to recover unpaid municipal taxes, questions of law are for the court while questions of fact are for the jury. A personal judgment may be had for the amount of the taxes properly due, together with interest where a statute authorizes it, and the judgment is conclusive on all issues which the court was required to inquire into on the trial.

Where an appropriation is a condition precedent to a tax levy, and the appropriation ordinance is admissible in evidence, but proof of the appropriation ordinance has been inadvertently omitted, the case should be reopened to admit it,¹⁸ especially where the levy ordinance, containing a reference to the appropriation ordinance, has already been admitted in evidence.¹⁹ Questions of fact are for the determination of the jury,²⁰ but the court need not submit to the jury the question of construction of the defendant taxpayer's written rendition.²¹

Judgment. Where an action by the municipality to recover unpaid taxes is authorized, a personal judgment for the amount of the tax may be rendered,²² in addition to any authorized judgment for foreclosure of the lien on the property.²³ In a joint action against numerous delinquents, a general judgment against all is permissible.²⁴ Where a part of the taxes was unauthorized, recovery may be had only for the authorized taxes.²⁵ Where a judgment inadvertently entered by default is void, it does not affect the validity of a judgment properly rendered at a subsequent time.²⁶ The judgment must correspond with the pleadings²⁷ and proof,²⁸ but, asking for excessive relief, as where a lien is sought, will not prevent recovery as in an ordinary action.²⁹ Where a city recovered judgment against the mortgagor of property for taxes due thereon, the mortgagor who became the purchaser of the property at a judicial sale is not en-

Interest on judgment. Judgments for taxes do not bear interest in the absence of statutory authorization.³¹ Generally, however, under the statutes, the judgment bears interest from its date,³² unless penalties have been imposed under a statute which also provides that, where penalties are imposed, recovery of interest shall not be allowed.³³ Interest in excess of the statutory rate will not be allowed as a penalty in the absence of power of the city under the statute to impose penalties, as discussed infra § 2115.

Conclusiveness of judgment. The judgment is conclusive on the question of regularity of the assessment,³⁴ and all issues which the court was required to inquire into on the trial.³⁵

Setting aside judgment. Proceedings to set aside a judgment for taxes will not be allowed where the party seeking to set aside the judgment has been guilty of laches.³⁶

Appeal. The acceptance of taxes by a clerk according to a judgment reducing their amount, in ignorance of the fact that an appeal had been taken from the judgment, is not such an assent to the judgment by the municipality as to authorize a dismissal of the appeal.³⁷ The appellate court will not consider matters not proper for determination on the record before it.³⁸ Where the appellate court determines that certain property is not taxable as personalty but only as realty, it need not determine the further question whether, if the property were personalty, it is exempt from taxation.³⁹

Execution. An execution sale under a judgment in favor of a city for taxes does not divest the title of the owner where he was not a party to the suit in which the sale was made and the sale was made after the return day of the writ had expired, and the constable failed to return it and retain a copy as required by law.⁴⁰

§ 2083. — Costs and Fees

Costs and fees are taxable and recoverable in proceedings to collect municipal taxes when and to the extent that they are fixed by statute or by ordinance under legislative authorization.

Costs and fees are taxable and recoverable in proceedings to collect municipal taxes when and to the extent that they are fixed by statute⁴¹ or by ordinance under legislative authorization.⁴² Where, under the statute, costs are to be taxed as may be deemed just and reasonable, a plaintiff who prevails on numerous frivolous questions raised may be awarded full costs,⁴³ even though only a part of the taxes sued for are recovered.⁴⁴ Where constitutional and statutory provisions permit the payment of taxes and interest in scrip or other evidence of the indebtedness of the municipality, but omit all reference to costs, the latter must be paid in cash.⁴⁵ Usually attorney's fees are not allowable,⁴⁶ but in some jurisdictions such an allowance is made.⁴⁷

§ 2084. Sale, Lease, or Taking of Land

As a general rule, under the various statutes, municipal taxes may be enforced by a sale of the land liable for the tax.

The sale of land for unpaid municipal taxes is a mode of enforcement of payment of the tax,⁴⁸ which is usually provided for and regulated by statutory or charter provisions.⁴⁹ Such provisions

Duration of lien

A provision in the act relating to collection of taxes for city that lien of city taxes continue until tax was collected if realty remained property of person assessed referred to a sale on a judgment and execution thereon in an action of debt as pro-

are determinative of the municipal power and duty to conduct a tax sale, as discussed infra § 2085, or to take title to the property without a sale, infra § 2090. As a general rule, a sale may be had only for such taxes as the land is liable for.⁵⁰ Under some provisions, the property is to be sold to discharge the specified unpaid tax advertised with interest and expenses computed to the time of sale, and the sale does not discharge all taxes against the property then due, whether or not included in the advertised amount due and unpaid.⁵¹ So, the sale by the municipality of property for taxes of any year does not discharge the taxes for any other year.⁵² The property of an incompetent may be subject to sale.⁵³

Before there can be a valid sale for taxes, there must have been a valid assessment of the tax,⁵⁴ and a valid lien on the property;⁵⁵ and a sale may be void if the execution includes taxes the lien of which has expired,⁵⁶ or penalties for certain years for which no penalty had been legally provided.⁵⁷ It is sometimes a condition precedent to the sale of land that an attempt first be made to collect the tax from the personal property of the taxpayer, as discussed infra § 2096.

§ 2085. — Power and Duty to Sell

Real property may be sold for unpaid municipal taxes only where the power has been conferred on the municipal corporation either expressly or by necessary implication, and then always subject to the statutory limitations thereon, and the authority conferred on the municipal corporation may make the sale mandatory and not discretionary.

A municipal corporation has no authority, apart from that conferred by statute, to sell real property for unpaid municipal taxes;⁵⁸ but such a sale may be made where power has been conferred on the municipality either expressly or by necessary implication,⁵⁹ subject always to the statutory limitations thereon.⁶⁰ Under some statutes, the authority conferred on the municipality may make the sale mandatory and not discretionary.⁶¹ The power to sell is not to be inferred from mere power to levy and collect taxes,⁶² or, in the case of a public service corporation, where the sale would destroy the public use of the property;⁶³ but the power is necessarily implied from charter power to provide for redemption of land sold for taxes,⁶⁴ or from power to collect taxes in the same manner as township officers authorized to sell real estate for unpaid taxes.⁶⁵

44 C.J. p 1354 note 26.

Grounds of invalidity

The statute prescribing that no tax assessment sale or conveyance shall be held invalid except on proof

In exercising a power delegated to it by the state respecting the foreclosure of tax liens on real estate, a municipal corporation acts as an agency of the state in proceedings to foreclose tax liens against land.⁶⁶ A municipal officer may be authorized to offer property for sale to satisfy a municipal tax lien, although the state purchased the property at a previous sale for state and county taxes,⁶⁷ but it has been held that, where the county has conducted a sale of land for delinquent taxes and county commissioners have taken title thereto as trustees for all other tax levying authorities, the municipality is not authorized subsequently to conduct its own tax sale and take title to the property in competition with the county.⁶⁸ The state board of tax appeals has been held to have no authority to review the validity of a resolution of the city governing body authorizing a tax sale, based on action of the county board of taxation, but may only review the actions or determination of such board.⁶⁹

sell because of a compromise made by a city officer and ratified by the municipality,⁷⁰ or because of a certification to a prospective purchaser of the property that all taxes due on the property had been paid.⁷¹

Repeal of statutes. A section in a general law, enacted under a constitutional requirement, giving to cities electing to abandon their charters and reorganize under the general law a right summarily to sell lands for "the total amount of taxes due on the property," has been construed to give the city power to sell the land for taxes accruing prior to the reorganization, as well as since,⁷² and its right to do so is not abridged by other sections of the same law giving the city a right to bring an action for the recovery of such taxes.⁷³ An earlier statute providing a method of collecting back taxes and water rates and for the levy of a tax to include both is not impliedly repealed by a later general statute relating to the collection of taxes generally,⁷⁴ and a sale in fee under the earlier statute is not invalidated by a provision of the later act requiring a sale to the person who will purchase for the shortest term, or in fee where no one will purchase for a shorter term.⁷⁵ While an amendatory act generally operates as a repeal of all inconsistent provisions in the statute which is amended, the right of a city summarily to sell land for taxes under a statute is not affected by a later amendatory act which in terms provides that nothing therein contained should be construed to impair any of the city's rights or remedies under the that property was not subject to taxation, or that taxes had been paid or property redeemed, was not applicable to municipal taxes—Henderson v. Boose, 196 So. 671, 142 Fla. 804.

Sale clear of liens

In a proceeding by city for an order on the sheriff to sell on its judgment for city taxes certain realty clear of liens, statutes relating to the validating of tax liens and statutes relating to judicial sales and the preserving of the lien of mortgages, were not applicable.—City of Erie v. A Piece of Land Fronting on Southeast Corner of Eighth and Peach Streets, 14 A.2d 428, 339 Pa. 321.

Curative statute

The act providing that improvement district may foreclose on any delinquent lands in district, even though lands may have been forfeited and sold to state for nonpayment of general taxes, subject to paramount lien of state, is curative and retroactive and validates previous sales of land for improvement district taxes while title thereto was in the state.—Deniston v. Burroughs, 190 S.W.2d 623, 209 Ark. 436.

earlier statute;⁷⁶ but a city charter granting the right to sell is a "special law" within the meaning of a later statute repealing all inconsistent provisions in prior special laws,⁷⁷ and a provision conferring power to sell, when inconsistent with the later provisions, is thereby repealed.⁷⁸

Resale. The city may make a second sale of the same property for the same taxes, where the first sale was made to the city and was probably invalid,⁷⁹ or where the purchaser failed to complete the purchase;⁸⁰ but, where property is once sold in satisfaction of a municipal claim under circumstances making it the duty of the city to discharge its lien for taxes out of the proceeds, it cannot, after failure to do so, have the property sold a second time for the taxes.⁸¹

§ 2086. — Procedure for Sale in General

A statute or charter provision establishing the procedure for the sale of real property for unpaid municipal taxes should be observed in effecting such a sale.

A statute or charter provision establishing the procedure for sale of real property for unpaid municipal taxes ordinarily should be observed in effecting such a sale.⁸² It has been held that statutes fixing the procedure for sale are to be liberally construed in favor of the owner and occupant of the property,⁸³ but it has also been held that any doubt of the procedure in effect in a past year for the sale of land for taxes will be construed in favor of the legality of the sale.⁸⁴

The procedure to sell land for taxes thereon may be either summary, or by an action to foreclose the lien on the real estate for the unpaid taxes, as discussed infra § 2087 a, d. In some jurisdictions the summary mode prescribed by statute or charter is exclusive,⁸⁵ while in other jurisdictions the municipality may proceed in either way.⁸⁶ Sometimes the procedure is by a scire facias sur municipal claim, or by an application for judgment of sale without formal pleadings, as discussed infra § 2087 b, c. In any case if the proceedings for the sale of realty for city taxes were irregular, the sale may be void,⁸⁷ and a jurisdictional defect in the sale has been held not validated by a curative act legalizing tax sales for unpaid city taxes.⁸⁸ It is sometimes provided, however, that no tax sale shall be invalid because of any irregularity in any proceeding that does not prejudice the property rights of the owner.⁸⁹

Where such a procedure is prescribed by statute, the collector must serve on the taxpayer a statement of the amount of taxes due with a demand for payment, before a sale may be made,⁹⁰ but it has

Ordinance

Where a city is authorized by charter or statutory provision to sell realty for taxes, the city has implied authority to provide by ordinance the manner of effecting a valid sale of realty for taxes authorizedly levied against the realty by the city, notwithstanding the charter neither created nor delegated power to the city to create a lien to secure the taxes.—Patten v. Sale held not defeated

Under such a statute, the fact that the collector used the original tax roll, instead of a copy as required, and that the treasurer failed to verify his statement of uncollected taxes within the time specified does not defeat the tax sale.—Turner v. Hutchinson, 71 N.W. 514, 113 Mich. 245.

been held that a tax sale is not invalid because of the alleged failure to comply with the statute purporting to give the holder of a mortgage the right to be informed by the proper authorities of the exact amount to be paid for taxes, in the absence of fraud or mistake.⁹¹

It is sometimes required that, prior to sale, a delinquent list must be made up,⁹² and, where the statute so requires, the delinquent list must be recorded.⁹³ The property subject to sale must be sufficiently described in the delinquent list.⁹⁴ However, a sale to the city was not invalid because the delinquent tax list was published after the time required where a subsequent ordinance extended the time for publication.⁹⁵

A valid levy on, or seizure of, the property prior to sale may be essential under some statutes,⁹⁶ and usually it is necessary that there be a valid order of sale.⁹⁷ So a sale made after expiration of the order of sale may be void and, therefore, subject to either collateral or direct attack.⁹⁸

A tax sale has been held not to be void because the minutes of the board of aldermen do not adjudicate necessary jurisdictional facts.⁹⁹

§ 2087. — Particular Remedies, and Proceedings Thereunder

a. Summary sale

b. Application for judgment of sale

c. Scire facias

d. Action to foreclose lien

a. Summary Sale

Under some statutes, a summary sale of land for municipal taxes may be had, but such sale must be in strict compliance with the statutory requirements.

Under some statutes, a summary sale of land for taxes may be had,¹ and in such case the sale and the proceedings therefor must be in strict compliance with the statutory requirements,² as, for example, requirements that a delinquent list shall be made out and returned by the city collector,³ or that an order shall be made by the common council and entered on the records particularly describing the premises to be sold,⁴ or that the owner's name shall be given and published in the proceedings.⁵ However, where the statute so provides, an irregularity, error, or mistake within its terms will not invalidate the sale.⁶

Where the statute so provides, a proper remedy for the collection of delinquent municipal taxes is by application for judgment of sale.

Where the statute so provides, a proper remedy for collection of delinquent municipal taxes is by application for judgment of sale.⁷ So, it is sometimes provided that taxes may be enforced by the filing of a praecipe in the office of the prothonotary of the court containing specified details, whereupon a monition is issued to the sheriff stating the amount of the judgment for taxes due with other details, with authority to sell the property therefor.⁸ Such

Demand on former owner

City's demands on former owners for payment of taxes were sufficient even if premises at time of demands were owned by another to whom copies of demand were mailed.—City of Chicopee v. Manset Realty Corp., 66 N.E.2d 364, 319 Mass. 434.

Mailing

Placing of a notice of demand for city taxes in the mail is "prima facie evidence" that notice was received by the addressee; the mailing of demand addressed to company owning land in question in care of its treasurer, who was designated "president" in the address, but to address of a different company of which treasurer was also a director, constituted an irregular service of demand.—*City of Boston v. Review

A resolution of city's governing body listing certain property for sale for delinquent taxes, and based on proceedings before county board of taxation from whose decision an appeal was pending before the state board of tax appeals, was not reviewable directly by certiorari, since board before which appeal was pending was competent to give whatever relief taxpayer was entitled to.—*Toone v. Validity of provision for notice

a proceeding is strictly in rem,⁹ and the word "judgment" is not used in the sense of a final determination by a court of the rights of the parties but is used as an apt legalistic term for the record to be made by the prothonotary as the basis of the selling writ.¹⁰ In such a proceeding, the court exercises a special and limited jurisdiction, and may not exercise powers in excess of those conferred by statute.¹¹

Objections. An objection that the purported tax levy ordinance was not certified by the county clerk is broad enough to allow the point to be raised that it was not a certified copy of the tax levy ordinance.¹² An objection to the general corporate tax of the city for which judgment is sought may not be considered where the record does not contain either the appropriation ordinance or the levy ordinance on which the objection was made.¹³ However, the taxpayer may properly raise an objection as to an alleged overestimate of tax anticipation warrant liabilities constituting part of the city indebtedness for which the tax was imposed for which recovery is sought.¹⁴

Proof. A prima facie case is established by introducing the delinquent tax list and proof of notice of application for judgment.¹⁵ One filing objections to a judgment for a city tax on the grounds of noncompliance with the statute has the burden of proving the objection.¹⁶ Where a taxpayer shows an overestimate of liabilities constituting the basis of the imposition of the tax, the burden is on the collector to show compensating errors in other items of estimate to show that the taxpayer was not harmed by the overestimate.¹⁷ Proof of the time when an ordinance was filed with the county clerk does not of itself establish the time when it was passed by the city council.¹⁸

Appeal. Where the validity of a city tax is questioned below on the ground that it is excessive and the ordinance is introduced merely for the purpose of showing an excessive rate, the tax cannot be attacked on appeal because the ordinance was defective.¹⁹

A proper remedy for the collection of delinquent taxes is by scire facias sur municipal lien, where the statute so provides.

Where the statute so provides, a proper remedy for the collection of delinquent taxes is by scire facias sur municipal lien.²⁰ Such a proceeding is one in rem.²¹ Judgment should not be granted where the lien of the taxes has expired,²² but it is not a defense to the proceeding that the assessment was erroneous where defendant has not availed himself of the statutory methods for correcting it.²³ It is ordinarily necessary and sufficient that notice of the proceeding be given to the registered owner of the property,²⁴ and notice by posting and advertising may suffice where the registered owner

since general notice and opportunity to be heard with respect to assessment are provided by assessment statute and taxes are imposed each year at stated times and places fixed by law; nor is statute invalid on ground that twenty days allowed between return of sheriff with respect to posting of monition and issuance of writ of venditioni exponas are too short.—Pottock v. Notice of lien

Where purchase-money mortgage expressly mentioned mortgagees' original appeal to test validity of municipal tax lien, and mortgagees agreed to accept reduction in purchase price if city taxes should be adjudged valid lien against mortgaged property, mortgagor did not take title without "notice" of lien and subsequent proceedings thereunder.—City of Philadelphia v. is deceased.²⁵ The fact, however, that a corporation which was the registered and assessed owner was not named in the scire facias and was not given notice of the tax proceedings is not available as a defense to the real owner at the time the tax was levied, who was made a party to the record and personally served.²⁶ A mistake in setting forth the name of defendant in the scire facias and the judgment has been held amendable,²⁷ and an owner who raised no objection when the court ordered an amendment of the scire facias on a municipal tax lien to designate the real registered owner may not thereafter, when the owners became mortgagees, raise an objection that the rights of intervening third persons have intervened.²⁸

Opening judgment; satisfaction. The judgment ordering the sale will not be opened except for good cause shown why the taxes should not be paid,²⁹ and only where the taxpayer has asserted his rights promptly and without delay.³⁰ Under the express provisions of statute, on the delivery by the sheriff of a deed for property sold under a tax claim, the judgment on which the sale was had becomes conclusive, and the validity of such a judgment cannot thereafter be impeached on the ground that certain persons in interest were not notified.³¹ A judgment entered on a scire facias on a claim for one year's taxes must be satisfied on payment of the amount of the judgment and costs, and the city has no standing to demand payment of all delinquent taxes, with penalties, interest, and costs, as a condition precedent to satisfying the judgment.³²

(1) In General

Under some statutes, a municipal corporation or other holder of a tax lien on real estate may sue to foreclose it, but compliance must be had with conditions precedent and suit must be brought within the time permitted by law.

Under some statutes a municipal corporation may sue to foreclose the lien on real estate for unpaid taxes,³³ and, to the extent that a statute confers

Remedial statute

The provision in statute relating to municipal claims and tax liens, authorizing amendment of any claim, petition, answer, replication, scire facias, affidavit of defense, or other paper filed of record, is remedial in nature, and should be liberally construed.—City of Philadelphia v. Sulzer's Estate, supra.

Time of amendment; effect

Tax claims can be amended to set forth real name of owner even after time for filing has expired, and such amendment is not equivalent to substituting a new party after time for filing lien has passed, but is a correction in name of person intended to be described.—City of Philadelphia v. Sulzer's Estate, supra.

a right of action, a private individual holding a tax lien against land may enforce such lien by an action in the nature of foreclosure.³⁴ It has been held that municipal tax liens may be foreclosed in equity even without statutory authority for the proceeding,³⁵ but it has also been held that an action to foreclose such liens may not be maintained in the absence of statutory authority therefor,³⁶ and that a statute setting forth the remedies of a municipality to collect delinquent taxes may deny the right to institute suit for foreclosure.³⁷ The proceeding under these statutes is usually one in rem.³⁸ A municipality may be authorized to prosecute a suit to foreclose several distinct tax liens on different pieces of property,³⁹ but a court of equity may order a separation of the suit if justice requires it.⁴⁰

Conditions precedent. Under some statutes, the return of nulla bona on a distress warrant,⁴¹ or the giving of a notice to redeem,⁴² is a condition precedent to the maintenance of the foreclosure action. It is sometimes provided that, in order to give the court jurisdiction over the proceedings, the city or town clerk must file with the register a certified list of taxable property, described and designated as required by statute, on which taxes are delinquent within a certain time after the taxes have become delinquent.⁴³ The notice required by statute to be mailed to the landowner a certain time before institution of the suit to foreclose the tax lien has been held not jurisdictional but only directory,⁴⁴ but the intentional omission to give holders of record title the required warning notice of the action may constitute fraud.⁴⁵

Time to sue. The suit must be brought within the time fixed by the statute,⁴⁶ but it may not be instituted prior to the time permitted by law.⁴⁷

Provisional remedies. In an action to foreclose a tax lien, the city may have the right under statute to secure the appointment of the city treasurer as receiver of the rents and profits of the premises to be foreclosed,⁴⁸ and on such appointment, the court has general equity jurisdiction to maintain and preserve the property and income pending foreclosure by fixing a reasonable occupational rent to be paid, even where the occupant is the owner of

Assessment omitted from sale

Where certain special assessments were inadvertently omitted from advertisement of sale of tax liens by the city and the purchaser of the tax lien purported to purchase only the lien for the annual taxes and not for the special assessment, the purchaser in a proper action for the foreclosure of the tax lien might cut off the city's right by making the city a party defendant, or if in the meantime the city should attempt to include the assessment in a later sale for unpaid taxes, by making the purchaser of such tax lien a party defendant.—Mount Vernon Trust Co. v. Acceleration of maturity

A statute relating to default in payment of tax on lands affected by transfer of tax lien was interpreted to mean that six months' default was necessary to give owner of prior tax lien election to accelerate maturity date thereof for purpose of bringing suit thereon, as against contention that any default that happens within six months after the tax becomes a lien may be basis of election.—Safe Collateral Corporation v. Yonkers Home Liquidators, supra.

Expiration of redemption period

Where village which had accepted provisions of statute relating to foreclosure by action in rem, of tax liens which are at least four years old, proceeded to sell liens which were less than four years old at tax sale as provided by Village Law, village could not foreclose on such property until owner's right of redemption expired.—Boeck v. the equity.⁴⁹ The holder of a tax lien other than the city who brings suit to foreclose such lien also may be entitled to the appointment of a receiver of the rents of the property where the facts show that plaintiff's security interest may be materially injured or destroyed unless the rents are impounded.⁵⁰ Plaintiff may be entitled to a temporary injunction restraining the owner's commission of waste on the property.⁵¹

(2) Defenses

A taxpayer may raise all proper defenses to an action to foreclose a municipal tax lien against his property, and ordinarily it is a good defense that conditions precedent to the bringing of the suit have not been performed; but it is not a defense that there has been a prior sale of the land for the tax where such prior sale is shown to be void.

A taxpayer may raise all proper defenses to an action to foreclose a municipal tax lien against his property,⁵² and he is not precluded from defending against the suit by reason of his failure to contest the levy and assessment of the taxes by the municipal corporation as invalid because made by resolution instead of by ordinance as required by its charter.⁵³ A tender or payment of the tax is not required in order to permit the taxpayer to defend against the foreclosure, at least where the validity of the entire tax is contested because of the lack of power to impose it.⁵⁴

It is a defense to an action to foreclose a lien for delinquent municipal taxes that conditions precedent to the bringing of the suit have not been performed,⁵⁵ that tax officials arbitrarily and with intent to fix an excessive valuation on property raised the valuation thereof in violation of law,⁵⁶ or that the suit is brought to foreclose a tax lien for a gross sum assessed against several lots in a block, on the aggregate valuation and assessment of them made by the city authorities, without a return of the lots as one tract or parcel of land by the owner.⁵⁷ The defense that the suit was not brought within the statutory period is available to a mortgagee of the property.⁵⁸ It has been held that the court may decline to foreclose the lien where the descriptions of the parcels of land were so vague, indefinite, and uncertain that the lands attempted to be assessed could not be located by reference to any description or matter appearing on the assessment roll,⁵⁹ but mere insufficiency of the description of the property in the assessment roll has been held not a defense to foreclosure of the tax lien, where taxes are unpaid and the property is not exempt.⁶⁰

It is not a defense that there has been a prior sale of the land for the tax where such prior sale is shown to be void.⁶¹ A defense on a technical ground will not excuse the nonpayment of a tax for a long series of years where the taxpayer neglected to avail himself of a remedy for the correction of the error open to him at any time during such period.⁶² The validity of a foreclosure proceeding authorized by statute is not affected by the failure strictly to comply with provisions of the statute as to filing of a copy of the resolution of the city electing to adopt the terms of the statute prior to commencement of the proceeding.⁶³

Limitation of liability

In proceeding for foreclosure of tax liens, court in enjoining owners' removal of top soil from premises incumbered by tax liens would limit municipality's maximum liability in the event that it would be ultimately determined that municipality was not entitled to the injunction.—City of White Plains v. Dimensions shown on map

On foreclosure of a city tax lien, court would not proceed strictly in accordance with dimensions shown on assessment map which showed a fifty-foot frontage, where the actual frontage, by legal title and physical possession, was only forty-six feet, seven inches, so that the result of proceedings strictly in accordance with the dimensions shown on the map would be to include a strip of land from adjoining lot so as to take in part of the frame structure erected on that lot.—Levine v. Jonkheer Realty Corporation, 17 N. Y.S.2d 926.

Substantial compliance

The filing in county clerk's office of certified copy of adoption by legislative body of tax district electing to adopt statute relating to foreclosure of tax lien by action in rem subsequent to commencement of foreclosure proceeding and before an-

or by the failure of the collecting officer to file a list of delinquent taxes within a certain period after the adoption of the resolution electing to adopt the statute.⁶⁴ A mistaken course of a tax assessor does not deprive a municipality of the right to enforce a tax lien against the realty,⁶⁵ and the fact that the officers and council of the city improperly compromised taxes for certain years is no defense in a suit to foreclose other taxes.⁶⁶

Set-off or counterclaim. Ordinarily, a taxpayer cannot set off or counterclaim for an obligation due to him from the municipality in an action brought against him to foreclose a tax claim against land,⁶⁷ but in some circumstances defendant may counterclaim for damage to his property inflicted by the municipality by the construction of a storm sewer.⁶⁸

(3) Parties and Process

In some instances a suit to foreclose a municipal tax lien should be brought in the name of the state against the present owner of the property. Notice of the action must be given in accordance with statutory or charter requirements.

Where a city charter provides that a tax shall be a lien on the real estate, and afterward a general statute is passed providing that there shall be a lien in favor of the state for city taxes, a suit to enforce the lien for city taxes should be brought in the name of the state.⁶⁹ Where the property has been conveyed subsequent to the accrual of the tax lien, the suit may be brought against the present owner⁷⁰ without joining former owners as defendants.⁷¹ The failure to bring a tax foreclosure suit against the person in whose name the property was assessed does not invalidate the proceedings where the record discloses that the person in whose name the lands were originally assessed was long since deceased, and that the widow and heirs at law were made parties defendant.⁷²

A mortgagee of the property is a proper party to the action,⁷³ but owners of property adjoining the taxed property and having private easements over it of light, air, and access are not necessary parties.⁷⁴ The wife is not a necessary party to a suit to foreclose a tax lien against her husband's homestead.⁷⁵ The state must be made a party in authorized municipal tax foreclosure proceedings against lands, the fee-simple title of which is vested in the state for public governmental purposes,⁷⁶ but it may not be made such a party in the absence of legislative authority therefor.⁷⁷ The municipal corporation from which plaintiff obtained an assignment of the tax lien sought to be foreclosed is not always a proper party defendant to the suit.⁷⁸

Notice of the action to foreclose a tax lien must be given in accordance with the requirements of statute or charter provision.⁷⁹ Provision is sometimes made for notice by publication,⁸⁰ and it has been held not necessary that the statute obviate by try of judgment of foreclosure, was a substantial compliance with requirement of law that such copy shall be filed prior to commencement of first foreclosure proceeding.—Village of Pleasantville v. Gross, supra.

Alternative relief

In action to foreclose tax lien evidenced by certificate sold by village to holder, holder was not entitled to serve a supplemental complaint on the village asking for alternative relief if the tax certificate assignments were void, where there was a failure to allege that claim was filed with the village in compliance with village law provision.—Hessol v. Hathaway, supra.

Posted notice

Where adequate notice was provided for in statute authorizing proceedings in rem for collection of delinquent municipal taxes, fact that notice was also required to be posted at front door of courthouse in county wherein land was located was immaterial.—Harris v. City of Sarasota, 181 So. 366, 132 Fla. 568.

Noncompliance

Where publication of notice of summary tax lien foreclosure action by city fixed last day for redemption at less than the required statutory seven weeks from date of first publication, a news item appearing in local newspaper to effect that common council of city had extended time for redemption did not cure the failure to comply with the stat-

special language the necessity of serving resident defendants with summons in chancery.⁸¹

(4) Pleading

It is necessary and sufficient that a petition or complaint in an action to foreclose a lien for delinquent municipal taxes allege the ultimate facts warranting the relief sought; and the defendant's plea or answer must sufficiently state the matter relied on to defeat the enforcement of the lien.

It is as a general rule regarded as necessary and sufficient that a petition or complaint in an action to foreclose a lien for delinquent municipal taxes allege the ultimate facts warranting the relief sought.⁸² The pleading must show a valid levy and assessment,⁸³ describe the land,⁸⁴ and state the name of the owner, if known or ascertainable,⁸⁵ the amount due,⁸⁶ and the nonpayment thereof⁸⁷ after due notice.⁸⁸ Also, it must allege the performance of conditions precedent;⁸⁹ in the case of transfer of the lien, the date of transfer must be alleged;⁹⁰ and, where acceleration of the due date of the lien is relied on, the bill must allege the facts on which the acceleration is based.⁹¹ The city may file a supplemental petition for taxes accruing after the filing of the original petition in a suit brought before the taxes were collectable.⁹²

Defendant's plea or answer must sufficiently state the matter relied on to defeat the enforcement of the tax lien.⁹³ Defenses going to the enforceability of the tax arising out of the manner in which the tax proceedings have been carried out by the tax officers should be asserted by answer rather than by demurrer.⁹⁴ A statute may validly fix a reasonable time within which defendant may answer,⁹⁵ and, on the expiration of the time prescribed by ute.—City of White Plains v. Hadermann, 72 N.Y.S.2d 155, 272 App.Div. 507, affirmed 75 N.E.2d 634, 297 N.Y. 623.

Clerk's certificate

Fact that clerk's certificate concerning mailing of copies of notice to defendants in proceedings in rem to enforce payment of delinquent municipal taxes was defective and insufficient proof, if taken alone, of due mailing, did not, on appeal from order refusing to vacate final decree, show lack of jurisdiction over defendants, where due publication of required sufficient notice to defendants and adequate proof thereof had been made, there was some evidence of due mailing, and no appeal had been taken from final decree.—*Harris v. Adoption of statute

(1) In action for summary foreclosure of tax liens, plaintiff's pleading need not contain allegation of plaintiff's enactment of resolution adopting statute authorizing such action, in view of form of complaint prescribed by statute.—*City of New Rochelle v. (2) Complaint alleging that city authorized its attorneys to institute proceeding to foreclose delinquent tax liens together with proof that governing body of city expressly adopted procedure set forth in gen-

the statute, the rights of the parties become fixed, and it is improper for the court to relieve the owner of his default in answering.⁹⁶ An answer denying that defendant has any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of plaintiff's allegation of the assignment of the tax lien to him is sufficient as a general denial of plaintiff's right and title to sue.⁹⁷

Issues, proof, and variance. General rules as to issues, proof, and variance have been applied in actions to foreclose municipal tax liens.⁹⁸ Defenses must be sustained by proof.⁹⁹ Where the city has pleaded the legality of the tax levy, evidence showing the illegality thereof is admissible under a general denial.¹ However, in an action to foreclose a transfer of tax lien purchased by plaintiff whose wife later obtained a deed to the premises, a general denial of plaintiff's allegations presented no issues, in the absence of proof offered by defendant lessee to overcome the presumptions established by the records.²

(5) Evidence

In an action to foreclose a tax lien, the municipal corporation ordinarily makes out a prima facie case by introducing the tax roll and proof of nonpayment of the tax, and the burden is on the taxpayer to establish the alleged invalidity of the tax, or the absence of liability therefor.

Tax rolls

In city's action for delinquent taxes and to foreclose lien, there was no error on ground that tax rolls were not read or offered in evidence, where collector testified as to the contents of the tax rolls.—Rachford v. Absence of certification

In city's action to recover delinquent taxes and penalties, delinquent tax roll, which was admitted without objection, established, prima facie, city's right to foreclose its tax lien against realty, although tax roll's correctness was not certified by city's mayor.—City of Lewisville v. Merritt, Tex. Civ. App., 123 S.W.2d 470.

quent tax roll prepared by the city in compliance with law carries with it the presumption that taxes were levied by a duly enacted ordinance.⁷ The burden is on the taxpayer to establish the alleged invalidity of the tax,⁸ that no ordinance was passed levying taxes,⁹ or the absence of liability for the tax.¹⁰ The city's prima facie case made by the tax rolls and proof of the amount of the delinquent tax has been held rebutted by evidence that only certain levies were made.¹¹

(6) Trial, Judgment, and Review

- (a) In general
- (b) Relief granted
- (c) Conclusiveness and effect of judgment; review

(a) In General

The judgment condemning property for sale in payment of taxes must be in the name of the municipal corporation. Such judgment need not set out all the evidence which induced the court to render it, and it is not subject to objection on the ground that it describes the property more fully than it is described in the petition.

General rules as to trial and judgment apply in an action to foreclose a lien against land for unpaid municipal taxes.¹² In such an action, the court has jurisdiction at the time judgment is rendered to pass on the question of the constitutionality of the statute under which the municipal corporation assumed to act in selling and transferring the tax lien to plaintiff,¹³ but, on a bill brought against the estate of a person owing taxes on land subject to a trust deed, the determination of the question whether the municipality under the doctrine of marshaling assets should be required to exhaust its remedy against the estate before it should have the land sold to pay the taxes is not within the scope of the bill.¹⁴ If it describes the property more fully than it is described in the petition, it is not subject to objection on that ground.¹⁵

The judgment condemning property for sale in payment of taxes must be in the name of the municipal corporation.¹⁶ It is not necessary that it should set out all the evidence which induced the court to render the judgment or decree;¹⁷ nor is it necessary that it should recite in terms that the court was satisfied by the evidence of all facts necessary to support the decree.¹⁸ A judgment of foreclosure is not erroneous for failure to adjudge the value of the property involved as required by statute, where there was no showing that the court was requested by the taxpayer to adjudge the value of the property,¹⁹ and where no prejudice resulted to the owner by reason of the fact that the court would not have been authorized to adjudge the value of the property at an amount less than the judgment.²⁰ The entry of a decree pro confesso against the land is unauthorized where the owner has entered his appearance at the time required.²¹

(b) Relief Granted

Judgment may be rendered only for the amount for which the tax lien may be foreclosed. In a proper case, the judgment may include the costs of the tax collector, interest allowed by statute, and attorney's fees.

Judgment may be rendered only for the amount for which the tax lien may be foreclosed,²² but, where the entire assessment is invalid because of inequalities therein, the court is not authorized to enter judgment for the proper amount of taxes after striking out the excessive portion of the tax.²³

Reduction in levy

To entitle taxpayer to claim a reduction in levy for corporate purposes fund and for free text-book fund by reason of uncollected taxes for previous years, taxpayer must prove what, if anything, could be collected from such taxes, and, in absence of contrary showing, court must presume that city council did not consider such uncollected taxes as asset which could be realized on.—People ex rel. Tax erroneously included

In action to foreclose tax liens on realty, trial court, in determining the debt due in each year, properly deducted the amount represented by tax on personal property which had erroneously been included in tax list and certificates of lien.—Town of Windsor v. Bedortha, supra.

23. Fla.—Coombes v. City of Coral Gables, 168 So. 524, 124 Fla. 374.

A provision in a tax foreclosure judgment that it is without prejudice to further claims of litigating taxing units for taxes not enumerated in the judgment has been held a nullity to the extent that it can be considered an effort to abrogate the effect of a statute giving the purchaser at a tax foreclosure sale a title clear of all liens for delinquent taxes due taxing units which are parties to the suit.²⁴ Where foreclosure is sought against several lots of land, it may be required, in some instances, that the decree foreclosing the liens should adjudicate the amount due on each of the lots.²⁵

In a proper case, the judgment may include the costs of the tax collector,²⁶ interest allowed by statute,²⁷ and attorney's fees;²⁸ but it has also been held that a sale of land for taxes is void where it includes costs.²⁹ In any case, the improper inclusion of costs of a former sale as a part of the taxes recoverable under a statute providing for the collection of taxes in arrears can be inquired into only in direct proceedings by certiorari,³⁰ and such inquiry cannot be made in a suit to quiet title against the purchaser from the city.³¹ Where it is impracticable to tax the costs pro rata against various pieces of property on which a tax lien is foreclosed, it is proper to charge the whole amount of costs against all the property,³² thereby making each bear an equal share of the burden.³³ The statutory charge for the certificate of sale may not be regarded as costs.³⁴

Damages to defendant. In an action to foreclose a transfer of tax lien, plaintiff's recovery will not necessarily terminate defendant lessee's occupancy, and, hence, the lessee is not entitled to damages for permanent improvements installed under the lease.³⁵

(c) Conclusiveness and Effect of Judgment; Review

Where the court in an action to foreclose a municipal tax lien has jurisdiction to determine a particular matter, the fact that it makes an erroneous determination does not affect the validity or binding effect of the judgment or decree, and ordinarily the judgment may not be set aside except by appeal or other appropriate proceedings, and is not subject to collateral attack.

Where the court in an action to foreclose a municipal tax lien has jurisdiction to determine a particular matter,³⁶ the fact that it makes an erroneous determination does not affect the validity³⁷ or binding effect³⁸ of the judgment or decree. So, a decree in a suit to foreclose a tax lien procured under a valid statute and with jurisdiction of the parties and the subject matter may not be set aside except by appeal or other appropriate proceedings,³⁹

Separate tracts

Where defendant's property was divided into blocks and lots, each block constituted separate tract as regards liability for city taxes.—Rachford v. City of Port Neches, Tex.Civ.App., 46 S.W.2d 1057, followed in Dearing v. City of Port Neches, 46 S.W.2d 1062, error refused.

Judgment in bulk

On court's finding that it was impossible in city's action for delinquent taxes to tax cost pro rata on each tract of land, it was proper to render judgment in bulk against all property.—Rachford v. Waiver

A property owner who failed to appear in action to foreclose tax lien or to raise by pleading or on trial question concerning constitutionality of statute under which city had assumed to act in selling tax lien to plaintiff, and who waited until premises were divided and residences erected thereon and mortgaged and until some parts of improved premises were sold to others apparently for homes, before moving to set aside judgment and proceedings, waived his right to question the constitutionality of statute and became bound by judgment of foreclosure.—Jahn v. Berzon, 8 N.Y.S.2d 640, 255 App.Div. 1028, appeal granted 10 N.Y.S.2d 679, 256 App.Div. 932, motion granted 21 N.E.2d 694, 280 N.Y. 808.

and is not subject to collateral attack;⁴⁰ but a decree which is void or is procured through fraud may be stricken down on collateral attack.⁴¹ The fact that the final decree of foreclosure was not recorded in compliance with provisions of a statute concerning the duty of the clerk of court to keep a judgment lien record does not invalidate subsequent proceedings for the sale of property after failure of the owner to redeem.⁴² The judgment of foreclosure does not operate as an extinguishment of easements of light, air, and access over the property taxed and in favor of owners of adjoining property.⁴³

Under some statutes, a decree of foreclosure may be vacated, in a proper case, in a suit in the nature of a bill of review attacking the validity of the decree.⁴⁴ So, the failure to comply with statutory requirements as to the procedure for foreclosing tax liens may constitute a legal fraud on the rights of the owners who, to the extent that their land is held or claimed by the city by virtue of the foreclosure, are entitled to a cancellation of the foreclosure, without prejudice to the city's liens attempted to be foreclosed.⁴⁵ However, no decree may be entered affecting the rights of innocent

third persons who purchased the land at the foreclosure sale or from the city thereafter until such persons are properly brought into court;⁴⁶ but plaintiffs may apply to the court for leave to bring in additional parties as respects lands claimed by them.⁴⁷ In setting aside a decree pro confesso and final decree in a suit to foreclose a municipal tax lien, the chancellor should exercise discretion with caution,⁴⁸ and, in the absence of sufficient ground shown, the decrees should not be set aside.⁴⁹ A nonresident who owned land in the city may not file a petition to set aside a default entered against him in tax lien foreclosure proceedings after he had been served by publication.⁵⁰

§ 2088. — Notice

- a. In general
- b. Publication
- c. Contents

a. In General

Notice to the owner or agent, as provided for by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions, is an essential prerequisite to a valid tax sale for delinquent municipal taxes, and strict compliance must be had with the requirements of such provisions.

Recital as to service

Judgment, in suit by city against owner of property for taxes in suit seeking a foreclosure of tax lien on the property, which recited a valid service of process on owners, was not void and subject to collateral attack but voidable only after the term, in a suit brought to set the judgment aside.—Hendricks v. City of Sherman, Tex.Civ.App., 220 S.W.2d 189, error refused, no reversible error.

Representation of infant

The fact that an infant defendant was not represented by a guardian in an action to enforce a tax lien on his land does not render the judgment void, but merely erroneous, and it is binding until vacated or reversed.—Keller v. Wilson, 14 S.W. 332, 90 Ky. 350, 12 Ky.L. 471.

Cross action

Judgment denying recovery on city's cross action for taxes and foreclosure of tax lien was final where city did not appeal or file cross assignment of error.—Baker v. Black, Civ.App., 83 S.W.2d 811, modified on other grounds 111 S.W.2d 706, 130 Tex. 454.

40. Tex.—Rollison v. Puckett, 198 S.W.2d 74, 145 Tex. 366.

Presumptions

Where judgment rendered in proceeding by city to foreclose tax lien was attacked collaterally, every reasonable presumption would be induced to uphold such judgment.—Rollison v. Puckett, supra.

Ejectment action

Where a proceeding for foreclosure of a municipal tax lien and an ejectment action for such land involves the same subject matter, and the foreclosure proceeding tends to establish a link in the chain of title in the ejectment action, an objection to the competency of the foreclosure is unavailable as a collateral attack.—Adams v. Adams, 180 So. 516, 131 Fla. 777, followed in Adams v. Dommerich, 180 So. 519, 131 Fla. 782.

41. Fla.—Adams v. Adams, 180 So. 516, 131 Fla. 777, followed in Adams v. Dommerich, 180 So. 519, 131 Fla. 782.

44. Fla.—Fleming v. Fleming, 177 So. 607, 130 Fla. 264.

Notice

Allegations of amended bill of complaint, in suit to set aside final decree foreclosing city tax liens, that complainant did not receive notice of foreclosure suit by registered mail or observe notice published in newspaper, were insufficient to show that either provision of statute as to notice was not strictly complied with or that statutory form of notice was not substantially followed.—Fleming v. Fleming, supra.

Want of jurisdiction

Allegations of bill of complaint as to matters transpiring after entry of final decree foreclosing city tax liens are immaterial on question of plaintiff's right to cancellation or rescission of decree for want of jurisdiction.—Fleming v. Fleming, supra.

Agent's default

The fact that the agent of owner representing owner at municipal tax lien foreclosure sale did not properly look after owner's interest was not chargeable to purchaser at foreclosure sale so as to entitle owner to set aside final decree.—Certain Lands Upon Which Taxes Are Delinquent v. City of Coronado Beach, supra.

Notice to the owner or agent, as provided for by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions, either by personal service, by mail, or by advertisement, is an essential prerequisite to a valid tax sale,⁵¹ and there must be a strict compliance with the requirements of such provisions.⁵² It is not necessary, under some statutes, to show that notice by mail was actually received,⁵³ although it must be shown that it was mailed to the owner if that is the method provided.⁵⁴ Where personal service on the owner is required, service on the registered owner is sufficient,⁵⁵ regardless of whether or not he has good title.⁵⁶ Under some statutes,⁵⁷ but not under others,⁵⁸ notice to the mortgagee of the property is required. A certificate of the comptroller of the city that the requisite notice of a tax sale has been served is fatally defective where it is not under seal.⁵⁹

Private sale. While the offering of land at a public sale properly advertised ordinarily is a condition precedent to the right to sell at private sale,⁶⁰

there is no necessity for further notice in connection therewith in the absence of statutory requirements.⁶¹

b. Publication

Some statutes or charter provisions provide for notice by publication of sales for delinquent municipal taxes, and, in such case, the notice must be given as many times, and for as long a period, as is required by law.

Some statutes or charter provisions provide for notice by publication of sales for delinquent municipal taxes.⁶² If posting or publication is required, it must appear that the notice was given under direction of the municipal council,⁶³ as many times,⁶⁴ and for as long a period,⁶⁵ as is required by law; and that, if the publication was in a newspaper, it was in an authorized paper.⁶⁶ However, a statute, providing that "the time, place and manner of the sale of property" for taxes due to municipal corporations shall be the same as that provided by law for sheriff's sales for state and county taxes, has been construed not to apply to the

(1) Failure to give notice required by law relating to tax sales by cities is a jurisdictional defect which cannot be overlooked or remedied by a curative statute.—Olds v. City of Jamestown, 20 N.E.2d 756, 280 N.Y. 281.

(2) However, where, while the legality of the publication of notices of sale in a daily newspaper, by the referee, in actions foreclosing tax liens, was in question, a curative act was passed, legalizing publication in such paper, a sale under such notice was valid, and the purchaser cannot be relieved on the ground that the curative act was unconstitutional.—William E. Statutory requirements for notice of sale by custodian of property acquired by municipality by foreclosure of tax titles is a mere direction to custodian in order to secure a minimum of advertising, a matter of grace to former owner who might be interested in repurchasing, and affords former owner opportunity to contest validity of deed to municipality.—Parrotta v. matter of advertisement,⁶⁷ and under such a construction it is not necessary that the advertisement of sale for municipal taxes should be in the same paper in which the sheriff's sales for state and county taxes were advertised.⁶⁸

Where the record owner is dead, notice must be given by posting or publication as in the case of nonresident owners in the absence of any provision of the statute specifically relating thereto.⁶⁹

Unknown owners. Under statutes requiring personal notice to owners but permitting publication where the owners are unknown, a nonresident owner who has a resident agent known to the municipal authorities as such agent cannot be regarded as an unknown owner, and service of notice must be made personally in such case on the resident agent.⁷⁰

The notice of a municipal tax sale must contain the matter required by statute or ordinance, such as the time and place of the sale, and the amount of the delinquent taxes for which the land is to be sold.

It must appear that the notice of a municipal tax sale contained the matter required by the statute or ordinance.⁷¹ The notice should state with certainty the time and place of sale,⁷² but, under a statute requiring the sale to be held at the city hall, a notice advertising the sale to take place at the city hall is sufficient, without designating any particular room, in the absence of evidence showing that the city hall was so large a building as to make a more definite notice necessary.⁷³ The notice must list all the delinquent taxes for which the land is to be sold.⁷⁴ If the sale is to include lands ordered to be sold in other proceedings but not yet sold, they must be expressly referred to in the notice as being included in the sale.⁷⁵ A notice setting forth the amount of unpaid taxes is not rendered improper because of the fact that taxes are subsequently reduced as the result of the settlement of pending certiorari proceedings.⁷⁶ A notice of tax sale has been held not incomplete because it does not include unpaid taxes for parcels which are subject to foreclosure pursuant to statutory provisions for foreclosure of tax liens by an action in rem.⁷⁷

Description of property. Under some statutes, the notice must contain a particular and detailed description of the property to be sold,⁷⁸ and there should be no material variance between the description of the land in the pleading and the description in the notice.⁷⁹ Where the description in the notice is ambiguous, applying equally well to two distinct tracts of land, it is too indefinite to constitute a valid notice by publication;⁸⁰ but uncertainty of description of the property in the caption of the notice will not invalidate the sale if a correct description appears in the body of the citation.⁸¹ On the other hand, a provision requiring notice of delinquent tax sales without requiring publication of a description of each parcel is valid,⁸² and the failure to describe separately each parcel of land in the published notice does not invalidate the sale, particularly where personal notice by letter is sent to each owner.⁸³

sale must give the lots consecutively and in numerical order, and where the assessment was in disregard of the requirements of the charter, and the notice did not give the lots consecutively and in numerical order, the notice was ineffectual, and a sale was void.—Meriwether v. ments with respect to the mode and conduct of a sale for municipal taxes, such as the time and place of sale, and the quantity of land and the estates or interests therein that may be sold.

Compliance must be had with all statutory requirements with respect to the mode and conduct of a sale for municipal taxes.⁸⁴ Ordinarily the sale must be at public auction;⁸⁵ but a statute may dispense with the necessity of a public sale,⁸⁶ and require that the city treasurer bid in for the city all parcels of real estate at a rate sufficient to pay the taxes with accrued charges, as discussed infra § 2090. The sale must be held and conducted at the time⁸⁷ and place⁸⁸ fixed by law, and by the officer authorized by law to make the sale;⁸⁹ and it cannot be postponed by a municipal officer other than the one authorized to conduct the sale.⁹⁰ It has been held that a sale of property for city taxes should be made separately from, and not simultaneously with, but subsequent to, a sale thereof for state and county taxes.⁹¹

Ordinarily the municipality is authorized to sell only the land in fee,⁹² but in some jurisdictions a sale of the land to the municipality cannot be for a longer term than a specified number of years, as discussed infra § 2090. Under some statutes, in the case of taxes assessed against a life tenant, the sale should be restricted to the interest of such life tenant,⁹³ and the court is without jurisdiction to order the sale of the whole property until the life estate is exhausted.⁹⁴ However, the interest of the owner of the fee in land on which a lessee erected buildings may be sold because of the nonpayment of taxes assessed against both the land and buildings,⁹⁵ and it is immaterial in such case that the buildings had been previously assessed against the lessee.⁹⁶

The general rule is that only as much of the land of one proprietor may be sold as will bring enough to satisfy his entire delinquency.⁹⁷ Where two or more tracts are occupied together for a single purpose, the separate entities become merged, and the tracts may be valued and assessed in solido and the tax lien fixed and foreclosed on all tracts as one.⁹⁸ The foreclosure of a tax lien embraces all interests in the property, including the rights of the owner and mortgagees in an award for damages for part of the property condemned for public use.⁹⁹ The city may include in the sale other lands ready for sale under other judgments,¹ provided sufficient notice has been given that such lands are to be included in the sale, discussed supra § 2088. It is sometimes required that the purchaser at the sale pay all prior city bids for the property for delinquent taxes of previous years, and the failure to do so renders the sale void,² notwithstanding a subsequent payment of the amount due the city for prior taxes by a trustee which was granted a decree of foreclosure of the mortgage on the property sold for taxes.³

Who may purchase. Ordinarily the state is not authorized to purchase property at a sale for city taxes.⁴ The right and duty of a municipal corporation to purchase at the sale is discussed infra § 2090.

b. Matters and Proceedings after Sale

Compliance must be had with statutory requirements as to the submission by the official making the tax sale of a report or return of the sale, and as to the rendition by the collector to the municipal clerk of a list of the lands sold; and the proceeds of the sale should be applied in the discharge of the various taxes and costs against the land in the manner specified by law.

Under the terms of some statutes and charter provisions, the official who has made the tax sale is required to submit a report or return of the sale⁵ at the ensuing term of court following the sale, and within the redemption period.⁶ Such a return informs the owner as to what part, if any, of his land has been sold for taxes, and, therefore, what he is required to redeem, and the cost of redemption.⁷ The court is forbidden to approve the return if the owner is ready at the court to redeem the lands sold, in order to afford the landowner an opportunity speedily to redeem his lands at a fixed time and place.⁸ The failure to make such a return as required by law may render the sale void,⁹ but the failure of a city tax collector to forward a copy of his report of city tax sales to the state comptroller as required of the state collector under statute does not invalidate the sale.¹⁰ It may also be required by statute that the collector render a list to the municipal clerk of the lands sold at the sale,¹¹ but where it is provided that the failure to transmit or record a list or a defective list does not render the purchaser's title void, the failure properly to certify such a list does not affect the validity of title acquired at the sale.¹² The execution and delivery of a certificate of sale to the purchaser are discussed infra § 2091.

Disposition of proceeds. The proceeds of the sale should be applied in the discharge of the various taxes and costs against the land in the manner specified by statute or charter provision,¹³ and the beneficial owners of taxes enforced by the city are entitled to a strict accounting of the avails of tax foreclosures prosecuted by the city, on the basis of the integrity of the separate funds involved.¹⁴ It may be required by statute that the proceeds of the sale be applied to pay all taxes, state, county and municipal, which were due and unpaid against the property, and such sums as were necessary to redeem the property from the liens of all back taxes for tax certificates outstanding against the property.¹⁵

Purpose

(1) The return of sale required to be made in proceedings for sale of lands for unpaid taxes is statutory source of information to which landowner may properly refer, whether he intends to contest validity of proceedings or to redeem his land.—Hill v. Ellis, 23 A.2d 112, 2 Terry, Del., 402.

(2) Charter provision requiring return of sale was not alone for purpose of making a record, or merely for convenience of officer making sale, or simply to promote system and dispatch in conduct of public business, but should be regarded as a recognition of fact that a fixed time and place for making return of sale is of importance to landowner in exercise of his substantial right of redemption.—Hill v. Apportionment

(1) Under statute providing for compromise of taxes and municipal claims due on realty purchased by municipality at tax sale, private sale of such realty after expiration of period of redemption and distribution of proceeds of compromise or private sale to respective taxing authorities in proportion to their tax and municipal claims, municipal lien for paving was not entitled to participate in distribution of such proceeds until taxes had been paid in full.—In re Peplinski's Estate, 39 A.2d 271, 155 Pa.Super. 564.

(2) In action to foreclose lien of tax deed based on tax certificate for unpaid state, county, and district taxes for 1928, lien of prior tax certificate for unpaid city taxes for 1927 on same property was entitled to share ratably or in proper proportion and without priorities in proceeds of foreclosure sale with such tax certificate held by complainant and with the lien held by complainant for state, county, and municipal taxes paid by him for years subsequent to 1927 in order to obtain tax deed covering same property.—Allison Realty Co. v. § 2090. — Purchase or Taking by Municipality and Resale

- a. In general
- b. Title, rights, and remedies

a. In General

A municipal corporation may purchase at a tax sale only where a statute or charter provision authorizes it to do so, and in order for it to make a valid purchase there must be a sufficient compliance with all statutory requirements. Some statutes permit a municipal corporation to take title to land on the taxpayer's failure, within a specified time, to comply with a demand for the payment of taxes due.

A municipal corporation has no power, apart from that conferred by statute, to buy in realty for taxes,¹⁶ but it may purchase at a tax sale if it is expressly authorized to do so,¹⁷ or if, accordingly to some,¹⁸ although not other,¹⁹ decisions, such authority may be implied from the general authority to purchase land for governmental purposes. Under some statutes, in the absence of bids at a tax sale, the collector has the mandatory duty to adjudicate property to the municipality and to file a deed, unless a legal reason for not so doing appears;²⁰ and under other statutes, where the purchaser at the tax sale fails to make payment within the time required, the municipality is deemed to be the purchaser and tax deeds are made to it.²¹ It may also be required that a public sale be dispensed with, as discussed supra § 2089, and that the city treasurer bid in for the city all parcels of real estate at a rate sufficient to pay the taxes with accrued charges.²² In order for a municipality to make a valid purchase of the property at its tax sale, there must be a sufficient compliance with all statutory requirements with reference to the purchase,²³ such as a proper report and return of the sale,²⁴ the filing of a list of the lands sold,²⁵ the recording and filing of the certificate of sale,²⁶ and the execution, filing, recording, and transmitting to the proper city officer of a deed.²⁷ Under the terms of some statutes a sale to the municipality

Where county acquired title to city lot at tax sale in 1937 and sold the property free of taxes in 1944, the 1933 tax claim of the city was entitled to participate in the distribution of the proceeds of sale, notwithstanding city's lien for such taxes had expired, since the county held title as trustee and the interest of the city was an equitable interest entitled to recognition.—Appeal of City of Erie, 46 A.2d 592, 159 Pa. 27. Mass.—City of Quincy v. Wilson, 25 N.E.2d 369, 305 Mass. 229. Tax deeds generally see infra §§ 2111-2114.

Necessity of formal deed

(1) Statutory list of land sold for municipal taxes containing description and name of purchaser constituted a conveyance required by ordinance providing that tax collector shall execute conveyances to purchasers at tax sales, and formal deed of conveyance to city which bought land was not necessary.—Lear v. Hendrix, 187 So. 746, 186 Miss. 289.

(2) Where commissioner was appointed to conduct sale of lot to sewer district, and his report was duly made to court and approved, and certificate of purchase was made but deed was not executed, and district did not object to commissioner's failure to have deed approved and delivered, district's title was referable to the decree, and was as effective as though the formalities ordinarily attending a judicial sale had been meticulously complied with.—Daniels v. Newsom, 213 S.W.2d 367, 213 Ark. 736.

Notice of intent

Tax deed taken by city subsequent to expiration of statutory period of redemption and taken in accordance with the city's interpretation of the statute then in effect and in accordance with custom, without giving notice of intent to take tax deed, was voidable under subsequent supreme court holding that notice was essential, but was not void, and gave right of possession to holder under deed from the city and to holder's assignee who stood in the shoes of owner of the fee until challenged.—Phillips v. City and County of Denver, 175 P.2d 805, 115 Colo. 532.

Time for delivery of deed

Statutory provision that amount of tax for which city collector purchases, and charges and expenses of

may be made only for a specified term of years.²⁸ The purchase by a city at a tax sale and the execution of a deed to it may be insufficient to pass title to the property to the city where the taxes for which the sale was made were transferred to the back tax records and carried as delinquent taxes.²⁹

Taking of property by municipality. Under some statutes a municipal corporation may demand the payment of the taxes due, and on the taxpayer's failure to comply with such demand within the time specified the municipality may take title to the land.³⁰ Compliance must be had with the formalities required by law,³¹ such as the proper posting of notice in a public place of the intention to effect the taking,³² but a further provision that no tax title so derived shall be held to be invalid by reason of any errors or irregularities in the proceedings of the collector which are neither substantial nor misleading is not invalid.³³ The city's abatement of taxes for certain years does not preclude a subsequent taking of property for nonpayment of taxes of later years.³⁴ The taking by the city, in a single proceeding and as a single parcel, of two contiguous parcels separately assessed has been held to invalidate the taking as to such parcels.³⁵

b. Title, Rights, and Remedies

- (1) In general
- (2) Tax claims
- (3) Resale or other disposition of property

(1) In General

The title, rights, and remedies acquired by a municipal corporation on the bidding in of property at a tax sale depend on the terms of the statutes or charter provisions relating to such sales and on the existence of rights of redemption afforded the owner.

The title, rights, and remedies acquired by a municipal corporation on the bidding in of property at a tax sale depend on the terms of the statutes or charter provisions relating to such sales and on the existence of rights of redemption afforded the owner.³⁶ The municipality by purchasing at the sale and receiving a tax sale certificate has been held not thereby to acquire full title to the property,³⁷ but to hold such property subject to the owner's right of redemption within the time limited by statute.³⁸ Under some statutes the municipality, as holder of a tax sale certificate, has only a lien on the property for the amount of the purchase money paid, with the right to foreclosure thereof by judicial action,³⁹ and it has been held that if levy and sale, and cost of recording deed of purchase, shall be allowed collector in settlement, provided he has caused deed to be duly recorded within a designated number of days after purchase and to be delivered to city treasurer, prescribes only time within which deed shall be recorded, rather than time for delivery of deed to treasurer.—City of Lowell v. Lowell Bldg. Corporation, 34 N.E. 2d 618, 309 Mass. 165.

Misrecital

Where recital in tax deed to city that five years had elapsed since tax sale was false, the misrecital of the facts nullified the deed.—Hosson v. City of Long Beach, 189 P.2d 787, 83 Cal.App.2d 745.

Correction deed

(1) Failure to comply with city ordinances relating to correction of tax deed to city rendered correction deed void by virtue of doctrine that where a particular form of tax deed is prescribed by law, the form becomes substance.—Hosson v. City of Long Beach, supra.

(2) Correction tax deed to city was not rendered effectual by either tax validation act, or by city ordinance, where such laws became operative subsequent to redemptive efforts of record title holders and both related to deeds executed prior to their effective dates.—Hosson v. City of Long Beach, supra.

To whom demand sent

Where collector's demand for city taxes described premises, stated to whom they were assessed, and otherwise complied with statute, fact that demand was sent to treasurer of corporate owner in care of such owner, instead of to owner direct, did not invalidate tax title acquired by city.—*City of Lynn v. Taxes erroneously included

The error of including taxes for more than fourteen hundred dollars in proceeding by city taking registered land for nonpayment of taxes was a substantial error, within statute providing that no tax title should be invalidated by reason of errors in proceedings of collector which were neither substantial nor misleading.—City of Quincy v. Wilson, 25 N.E.2d 369, 305 Mass. 229.

it wrongfully gains possession of the premises covered by the certificate it is a constructive trustee of the property for the benefit of the owner, and its rights, duties, and liabilities are governed by principles applicable to such a trustee and are analogous to those of an administrator or executor de son tort.⁴⁰

A municipal corporation may, however, become vested with title to the property purchased by it at the tax sale where the right of redemption has been foreclosed or has expired, and where the proceedings are not void and have not been attacked within the time limited therefor by statute.⁴¹ In such case, the municipality does not hold the property as trustee for the former owner,⁴² and its purchase or taking may give it a tax title to the entire estate paramount both to that of mortgagees and to that of the original owner of the equity in the land.⁴³ So it has been held that the municipality as a purchaser takes a new and independent title based on the foreclosure decree with no rights or remedies different from those which would have obtained with respect to a stranger had such a stranger been the purchaser at the foreclosure sale;⁴⁴ but it has also been held that the title acquired by the municipality is not of the same nature as the title vested in a private purchaser, since the object of the purchase is not the acquisition of the property but rather the collection of the taxes,⁴⁵ and that the municipality is not vested with complete title to the land so as to permit its devotion to public use until it obtains the requisite authority to purchase the land for such public use.⁴⁶

A statute giving the purchaser of the tax title a lien on the property for the amount paid, where the sale is illegal, has no application to a municipality to which the property is struck off for want of a private bidder.⁴⁷ Where the municipality is the plaintiff in the suit to foreclose tax liens and the purchaser at the foreclosure sale, it is not a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the fraud on the rights of persons resulting from failure to give the required notices of suit.⁴⁸

Waiver or disclaimer of rights. A municipal corporation which acquired its title under a tax foreclosure judgment has the power to waive its rights under the judgment,⁴⁹ but, in order to show a waiver by the municipality of an adjudication of property to it for taxes, it must appear that the owners were in undisturbed corporeal possession and were lured into inaction by the conduct of the municipality.⁵⁰ Under a statute so providing, where the tax deed to the city is invalid by reason of error, omission, or informality, the city officials may disclaim or release the city's tax title,⁵¹

Where owner was not in possession at time unimproved realty was adjudicated to city for delinquent taxes, and had not been in possession or paid taxes thereon, for more than five years following recordation of tax deed, city's title was perfected under constitutional preemption requiring institution of proceedings to annul tax sale within five years, notwithstanding notice of tax sale was not served on owner or that city had not filed suit to confirm title.—City of New Orleans v. Operation of enterprise

Ordinance of city attempting to authorize city manager to occupy and possess tax deeded land for public purpose is invalid as an attempt to invest city with power to operate an enterprise not strictly a municipal affair within purview of constitution and as concerning a state and county affair controlled by statute.—Hossom v. City of Long Beach, supra.

Effect of disclaimer

Where registered land was sold by city collector for nonpayment of taxes and collector purchased the land for city for amount of the tax, the proper recording or filing of disclaimer and release would give effect not only to discharge of tax title which itself has become a sort of lien, but also to a continuance of the tax lien, since recording is made a condition precedent to collection of the unpaid tax, in conformity to law.—City of Quincy v. Wilson, supra.

but the failure to record or file the disclaimer as required by law renders it ineffective.⁵²

(2) Tax Claims

Ordinarily when a municipal corporation purchases property at a sale held to satisfy certain tax liens, such liens are extinguished, and the municipality also loses the right to sell the property for any subsequent tax; but claims for taxes for prior years not included in the sale are not extinguished, nor are existing tax liens on the property in favor of the state or the county discharged.

Ordinarily when a municipal corporation purchases property at a sale held to satisfy certain tax liens, such liens are extinguished,⁵³ but the adjudication of the property to the municipality does not extinguish the municipal claim for taxes for prior years not included in the sale.⁵⁴ Where, however, the municipality has taken the property by adjudication or purchase, it loses all right to sell the property for any subsequent tax,⁵⁵ or to receive any payment of such tax,⁵⁶ where there has been no redemption of the property from the tax sale. It has been held that neither the property nor the former owner is obligated for such subsequent tax, since the municipality is the absolute owner of the property,⁵⁷ but it has also been held that, while a sale for such subsequent taxes cannot be made, satisfaction of such taxes may be obtained on redemption or by enforcing a personal liability.⁵⁸ A purchase by, or adjudication of property to, the municipal corporation for unpaid taxes does not preclude the enforcement of taxes subsequently owing where the municipality did not assert ownership or take possession of the property,⁵⁹ or where no certificate of sale to the municipality was ever recorded, so that the municipality never obtained title;⁶⁰ and the municipality may make another sale of the property for the taxes of subsequent years where the tax deed to it has been declared invalid because of defects in the proceedings.⁶¹

Under a statute providing that a city bidding in property sold for taxes could sue for taxes and that a judgment therefor should have priority over all other liens, the city may not be deprived of the right to bring suit for taxes accruing subsequent to the issuance of a special tax bill by a foreclosure suit brought on such tax bill.⁶² Also, under a statute providing that a city officer should bid in the property sold for taxes where it could not be sold for the amount due, and that such officer could later issue a certificate of purchase to any one paying the amount due, the bidding in of the property by the officer was not equivalent to a purchase by the city so as to give the city the right of a holder of a certificate of purchase inferior to the right of a holder of a special tax bill previously issued against the same land.⁶³ It has been held, however, that a city which purchased land at a sale for general taxes obtained title subject to the lien of a special improvement assessment which under statute was coequal with the lien for general taxes and that its quitclaim deed conveyed only a title subject to the lien of the special assessment.⁶⁴

Satisfaction of execution

Where city purchased property sold under municipal tax execution for an amount sufficient to pay execution in full and plaintiff purchased a lot subject to the same execution relying on execution sale as having satisfied the execution, city was not entitled to levy on the lot so purchased by plaintiff on theory that the municipal tax execution had not been satisfied because the execution sale was invalid; and the fact that the city passed a resolution purporting to cancel the deed executed pursuant to the sale did not entitle the city to attempt to sell the lot purchased by plaintiff under the same execution where the acts of the city canceling the deed were subsequent to plaintiff's purchase.—Elder v. Chambliss, 28 S.E.2d 176, 195 Ga. 148.

and other tax levying authorities, such as the state or county.⁶⁵ The purchase by the municipality ordinarily does not obliterate existing tax liens on the property in favor of the federal government, state, or county.⁶⁶ The title vested in the city as the result of the sale has been held not to be absolute but to be subject to defeasance by enforcement of the existing liens for state and county taxes,⁶⁷ and the city must protect its tax sale certificate from subordination to liens under later county tax sales.⁶⁸ In this respect the city has the same right that any other purchaser at the sale would have had to redeem the land from the outstanding liens for delinquent state and county taxes.⁶⁹ It has been held, on the other hand, that the liens for state and county taxes are not affected by the sale only where the state and county were not parties to, and had no notice of, the foreclosure proceedings,⁷⁰ and that if they were parties to the proceeding, the title passing by the sale to the municipality is free and clear of all liens and claims for taxes by such taxing units.⁷¹ So it has been held that where legal title vests in the city by its purchase, tax liens asserted by the state, county, and other governmental units become merged with such title, and that where the land is thereafter used for a public purpose it cannot be subjected to seizure and sale to satisfy such preëxisting liens or any tax liens created subsequent to its acquisition by the city.⁷² Lands purchased by a city at a municipal tax sale are exempt from subsequent state taxes when,⁷³ and only when,⁷⁴ the title is vested in the city and so remains.

(3) Resale or Other Disposition of Property

A municipal corporation which has bid in realty at a tax sale may be authorized to assign its own interest under such sale to one who will repay the amount of its bid and interest, and where it has acquired title to the realty by foreclosure or expiration of the right of redemption it may sell or rent the property on compliance with all statutory requirements.

Where a municipal corporation has bid in realty at a tax sale for delinquent municipal taxes, it may be authorized by statute to assign its own interest under such sale to one who will repay the amount of its bid and interest.⁷⁵ So also, where a municipality has acquired title to land by purchase at a tax sale, or by a taking of the property for unpaid taxes pursuant to law, and the owner's right of redemption has been foreclosed or has expired, the municipality may sell⁷⁶ or, according to the decisions,

Tax sales which were made to municipality after death of owner of realty for old tax assessment by municipality and for more recent taxes did not disturb the order of priority of lien of the state for transfer inheritance tax, lien of the United States for estate tax, and municipal tax liens.—Town of Irvington v. In suit by city for a decree removing state and county tax deed interest of defendant as a cloud from title acquired by city in suit for foreclosure of municipal tax deeds and tax certificate, on ground that there was a conspiracy to assign the state and county tax certificates to defendant, so as to obtain money through foreclosure of municipal tax deeds and retain the state and county tax certificates with which to obtain title to the property, court would not extend law of merger or doctrine of subrogation to state and county tax certificates, since they remain first liens until paid.—Horn v. City of Miami Beach, 194 So. 620, 142 Fla. 178.

Lands of low value

(1) The statutes dealing with the sale of lands of low value held by city or town under tax titles are not the municipality may rent⁷⁷ the property, and in such case it is not required to account to the former owner for the amount received from the sale of the land in excess of the amount paid by the municipality therefor.⁷⁸ Where a statute or charter authorizes either a sale to the municipality itself for a term of years only or to other purchasers in fee, a sale to the municipality for a term of years does not exhaust its power under the statute or charter to sell later to others in fee if at the time of the subsequent sale it still holds the land as purchaser for years.⁷⁹

The assignment or resale by the municipal corporation must conform to statutory requirements;⁸⁰ but a defective sale may sometimes be validated by remedial legislation.⁸¹ Requirements imposed by law with respect to sales of municipal real estate may be inapplicable where a special charter provision governs sales of property acquired by the municipality at a tax sale,⁸² and a city may be empowered to sell the land acquired at the sale in such manner as it may prescribe by order or resolution.⁸³ Under some statutes, the officer authorized to make the sale may waive the terms of the notice of sale and accept such bids as he deems advantageous,⁸⁴ and he is not bound to refuse to sell if he does not obtain a bid within the stated conditions in the notice of sale.⁸⁵ A prospective auction purchaser of realty, having bid under conditions that any bid accepted at the sale was subject to future confirmation by the city, may not contend that such condition did not exist.⁸⁶ A private sale may be proper in some circumstances.⁸⁷ The assignment may be on credit with security in the discretion of the common council.⁸⁸

Sale or assignment of tax certificates. Although the transfer or assignment of tax sale certificates for property purchased by a municipality on a tax sale may sometimes be restricted by law,⁸⁹ ordinarily a city may have the power to sell and assign unconstitutional for failure to provide direct notice to taxpayer of intended sale thereunder; nor are such statutes invalid because of the fact that methods of foreclosing right of redemption differ according to whether the land taken or purchased by the municipality is or is not, in commissioner's opinion, sufficient to pay charges.—Napier v. City of Springfield, 28 N.E.2d 157, 304 Mass. 174.

(2) Under statute commissioner is not limited in exercise of his investigating powers to land of any particular value but may investigate any lands held by a municipality, in determining whether to act under the statute, and if he is of opinion that certain lands are insufficient in value within meaning of statute he has jurisdiction to make affidavit to that effect as basis for sale.—*D'Olimpio v. Intent of statute

Statute relating to tax delinquent property held by municipalities under foreclosure was intended to freeze tax sale certificates in status quo in hands of clerk of circuit court until such time as the municipality holding title to the lands should dispose of such lands; furnishing such certificates held by it, thereby enabling it to raise money for legitimate purposes.⁹⁰ While a city has been held not to be authorized to sell a certificate held by it subject to redemption during the redemption period at a price less than the full amount of taxes and penalties,⁹¹ the mere inadequacy of consideration for the certificate will not operate to render a contract of sale thereof void where no lack of good faith is involved.⁹² However, a city's assignment of tax certificates for an inadequate consideration and the subsequent exchange of other certificates of equal face value for those certificates so sold and assigned at their face value has been held fraudulent.⁹³ The city may sell tax certificates after expiration of the period for redemption for less than the amount of the taxes and penalties due where it appears that the full amount cannot be obtained by ordinary processes.⁹⁴

The validity of the title of a purchaser at a tax sale rests on the validity of the judgment ordering the sale or of the proceedings prior to sale; and the title taken is subject to statutory limitations and restrictions.

The validity of the title of a purchaser at a tax sale rests upon the validity of the judgment ordering the sale,⁹⁵ or of the tax proceedings prior to the sale;⁹⁶ and the title taken is subject to such limitations and restrictions as may be contained in the governing statute,⁹⁷ unaffected by any provisions to the contrary in an ordinance.⁹⁸ A municipal tax sale ordinarily does not, of itself, operate to transfer full title to the purchaser,⁹⁹ nor does the execution and delivery to him of a certificate of sale so operate, as discussed infra subdivision b of this section; but title vests in the purchaser at the sale only when the tax deed is delivered after termination of the redemption period, as discussed infra § 2111. However, the purchaser of land at a foreclosure conducted pursuant to statute by the city as owner of a certificate of tax sale of an estate for years acquires the premises in fee.¹

The owner of the property may be entitled to remain in possession for the period after the sale in which he is entitled to redeem.² However, a purchaser whose title has been perfected steps into the

Assignment of lien

A payment made by a purchaser at a tax sale does not constitute payment of the tax but is merely an assignment of the tax lien to the purchaser, and such lien remains after the sale.—People ex rel. Oakley v. Bleckwenn, 27 N.E. 376, 126 N.Y. 310, followed in 27 N.E. 378, 126 N.Y. 654.

Statute held valid

A statute under which a purchaser of land at foreclosure sale, conducted by city to enforce its lien as holder of a certificate of tax sale of an estate for years, acquired title thereto in fee, was not unconstitutional because original owner of property thus lost the property outright, where he might merely have lost its use for a term of years if city had taken the estate for years to which it was entitled if the property was not redeemed.—City of Schenectady v. Kalteux, supra.

position of the owner of the property and acquires his right of possession³ with the same right to pay off an assessment lien at his election.⁴ Where land is sold in its entirety for taxes at a valid sale, without limitations, the sale extinguishes negative limitations in a remote vendor's deed.⁵ The sale operates on the land itself and not merely on the title of the person in whose name it may have been listed for taxation, and any person claiming an interest in the land is bound to protect his interest against forfeiture or sale by paying the tax.⁶ The purchaser acquires title discharged from any common-law right of dower or curtesy or statutory right in the nature of dower or curtesy.⁷ However, a tax sale based on a tax lien on property which was the servient tenement to an existing easement of right of way does not extinguish the easement where the easement was appurtenant to the dominant tenement and a part of it and therefore to that extent separate and apart from the servient tenement.⁸

Property previously sold for state and county taxes. Where a municipality makes a sale of real estate to satisfy taxes although the state has purchased the property at a previous sale for state and county taxes, rights under the later sale remain dormant until the prior sale is released through redemption or otherwise, when the sale for municipal taxes would automatically ripen into a perfect title.⁹ The purchaser of property at a sale for unpaid city taxes has been held to acquire title, where no redemption has been made, although the property had previously been adjudicated to the state for unpaid state and county taxes of the preceding year.¹⁰

Where a tax sale is void because of jurisdictional defects in the proceedings, no title passes to the purchaser,¹¹ and no rights are acquired by a grantee from such purchaser, at least where he is charged with notice of the proceedings composing his chain of title.¹²

b. Certificate of Sale

Provision is frequently made for the execution and delivery of tax sale certificates to purchasers at tax sales, which are assignable, and the rights and liabilities of the purchaser and other parties resulting from the issuance of such certificates depend on the terms of the statute authorizing their issuance.

Provision is frequently made for the execution and delivery of tax sale certificates to purchasers at tax sales.¹³ The certificate may not provide for the payment of interest in excess of that authorized by the statute.¹⁴ A tax sale certificate is not a negotiable instrument,¹⁵ although it is assignable,¹⁶ and, while the assignee becomes entitled to all the rights acquired by the purchase,¹⁷ he acquires no rights superior to those of his assignor,¹⁸ and the purchaser of such a certificate who acquires the certificate either by purchase at the sale or by subsequent assignment takes under the operation of

Retention of title

Where lot was sold to city for delinquent taxes but no certificate of sale was ever recorded, the original owner retained title, subject to lien

of city as purchaser for unpaid taxes and interest thereon and of right to redeem from lien on terms specified in statute and charter.—City of Richmond v. Monument Ave. Development Corp., 34 S.E.2d 223, 184 Va. 152.

Damnum absque injuria

Where purchaser at tax foreclosure sale bought property subject to injunction order which restrained sale until certain date, and city's attorneys conducted sale under honest belief in effect of service of notice of appeal from injunction order, the purchaser's loss at best was damnum absque injuria, which does not give rise to a right against anyone.—City of Buffalo v. Kissinger, 40 N.Y.S.2d 188.

Improper issuance

City's certificate setting forth that in consideration of payment of 1929 taxes payer was entitled to deed to premises for leasehold of ninety-nine years, unless redeemed within proper time, was improperly issued, where charter required purchasers of tax titles to pay all prior city bids, and payer failed to bid or pay city's bid for 1928 taxes.—Detroit Trust Co. v. Lieberwitz, 266 N.W. 406, 275 Mich. 429.

Owner of remainder

the rule of caveat emptor.¹⁹ A municipal corporation, for the purpose of performance of the contracts contained in the certificate, may treat the purchaser as the party entitled to the benefit of the certificate until the municipality receives notice of an assignment of the certificate by the purchaser, as required by a statute providing that no assignment of a tax certificate shall have any effect until notice of the assignment shall be filed in the office of the collector of taxes.²⁰

The rights and liabilities of the purchaser and other persons resulting from the issuance of such certificates depend on the terms of the statute authorizing their issuance;²¹ and the relations between the holder of a tax certificate and the municipality, although contractual, extend only within the law which permits them, and the municipality cannot create any liability different from that which the law provides.²² Such a certificate ordinarily does not of itself pass title to the land,²³ or afford a right of entry,²⁴ but constitutes only a lien on the property sold,²⁵ which must be recorded as required by law in order to be given effect as against other liens on the property.²⁶ However, the holder of such a certificate may bring a suit of foreclosure thereon, as discussed infra § 2100, and he may be entitled, as a purchaser, or as a successor to the rights of the purchaser, to a deed passing the title after the owner's right of redemption has been foreclosed or has expired by passage of time, as discussed infra § 2111. Under an arrangement whereby a person purchased land at city tax sales taking tax certificates therefor and giving interest-bearing notes to the city, making some cash payments on the notes and being credited for the amount of redemption moneys received, the city is not entitled to recover money received by the purchaser in excess of the interest paid the city.²⁷

If the owner is not allowed the full statutory period for redemption under the recitals of the certificate of sale stating the day on which the purchaser will be entitled to a deed, such certificate is void²⁸ even though it also states correctly the period of redemption²⁹ and under the statute such a statement without naming the day would have been sufficient.³⁰ Also, where the holder of a certificate of sale fails to apply for a tax deed or lease before a certain date, as provided by statute, the certificates may become void so that no claim may be based thereon, and in such case cancellation of the certificates is not warranted.³¹ A tax sale certificate issued on a sale for an invalidly assessed tax is void.³²

Payments made by holder of tax certificate, together with interest thereon, constituted a lien, although tax deed was invalid.—Richards v. Sellers, 285 P. 391, 104 Cal.App. 30.

Merger and subrogation

Where defendants purchased tax sale certificate from city and then through limited partnership association purchased title from owner of fee subject to liens resulting from tax sale and mortgage, a merger of tax estate with the fee did not occur so as to extinguish tax liens, and defendants were entitled to be subrogated to rights of city for sums paid for taxes when tax sale certificate was acquired and for subsequent taxes, for which defendants were entitled to a lien prior to that of mortgage, and defendants were entitled to be subrogated to rights of owner in any surplus moneys, and plaintiffs on redeeming tax sale certificate were entitled to credit for rents collected.—*Barry, Inc. v. First mortgage

A tax lien certificate for taxes of borough could not be enforced against a first mortgagee by a second mortgagee who had failed to record the certificate until after he had obtained an extension of the first mortgage without disclosing the existence of the certificate, and on the strength of the statement that all taxes had been paid.—Zabriskie v. Phillips, 15 A.2d 782, 128 N.J.Eq. 155, affirmed Zabriskie v. Devoe, 19 A.2d 626, 129 N.J.Eq. 366.

Theories on which recovery claimed

Recovery could not be had on theory that sales of certificates were void because not paid for in cash, since even if void, city was entitled only to amount required for redemption by landowners, and city received that amount from partnership; nor was city entitled to recover because arrangement was an illegal one, where city suffered no injury from illegal transaction, receiving more than it would have had transaction been completed in lawful manner.—City of Milwaukee v. Knox, supra.

Certificate as evidence. It has been held that a certificate of sale is presumptive evidence of the title of the purchaser to the land, and the regularity and validity of all proceedings had with respect to the sale,³³ and that, after a certain period of time, such presumption becomes conclusive except in the case of fraud in the making or procurement of the certificate.³⁴

c. Priority of Title and Liens

- (1) In general
- (2) Tax and assessment liens

(1) In General

A purchaser at a municipal tax sale may become vested with a new and independent title, freed from all prior liens, encumbrances of the former estate, and of every interest carved out of the old fee; but under some circumstances a statute may preserve a prior mortgage lien from destruction by the sale, and the title of the purchaser is inferior to an interest in the property which is not subject to municipal taxation.

Under some statutes a new and independent title becomes vested in the purchaser, freed from all prior liens, encumbrances on the former estate, and of every interest carved out of the old fee, since the fee of the land passes, and the effect of the tax deed is to destroy all prior interests in the estate.³⁵ So, in the absence of a statute providing otherwise, the title of the tax purchaser after the expiration of the period limited for redemption is superior to prior mortgages and encumbrances.³⁶ Under some circumstances, however, a statute may preserve a prior mortgage lien from destruction by a tax sale.³⁷ Under some statutes the sale and expiration of the period for redemption does not divest the lien of a first mortgage recorded prior to assessment of the tax for which the sale is made,³⁸ even after expiration of the period for redemption,³⁹ but the court may be authorized by statute, on notice to the mortgagee, to order a sale clear of liens, in which case the mortgage is discharged by the sale.⁴⁰ Under a statute providing that no sale of real estate for the payment of taxes shall affect the lien of a mortgage unless the mortgagee is given notice of the sale, a sale for taxes which becomes a lien after the recording of a mortgage does not give the purchaser a superior title to the mortgagee without notice.⁴¹ Ordinarily the title of the purchaser is inferior to an interest in the property which is not subject to municipal taxation;⁴² but the purchaser may take title free of the claim of the owner where the property is assessed against a lessee in possession obligated to pay the taxes and having the right, and under some circumstances the duty, to purchase the property.⁴³ A purchaser or his assignee who is under a duty to pay taxes cannot add to or strengthen his title as against other persons interested in the property by the purchase of the land at a tax sale.⁴⁴

(2) Tax and Assessment Liens

Under some statutes the tax purchaser's title is subject to other existing liens for unpaid taxes and local improvement assessments; but under other statutes the purchaser takes title discharged of all liens for taxes and assessments in arrears.

Under some statutes the tax purchaser's title is subject to other existing liens for unpaid taxes,⁴⁵

Payment prior to delivery of deed

Where land which had been offered on two previous sales was sold for delinquent taxes for years 1930 to 1937, inclusive, collector of revenue of city properly refused to deliver tax deeds to holders of certificates of purchase until they paid all prior unpaid general taxes which were not included in the sale, as against contention that taxes constituted superior liens in reverse order of their accrual and that therefore under statute sale for taxes foreclosed the lien of all years prior to the years for which sale was made.—State ex rel. McGhee v. Baumann, 160 S.W. 2d 697, 349 Mo. 232.

and this is the rule at least where a statute in effect provides that a sale on one tax lien shall not discharge a prior lien unless the money arising from such sale shall be sufficient to satisfy both.⁴⁶ Likewise, it has been held that the title taken at the sale is subject to existing liens for assessments for local improvements,⁴⁷ even though the assessment is for the benefit of a contractor, where the statute so provides;⁴⁸ but, if the holders of improvement assessment liens which are inferior to the general tax lien for which the property was sold fail to redeem or attempt to foreclose their liens against the property until long after the deed is issued to the purchaser at the tax sale, such liens are extinguished.⁴⁹ The sale may be subject in some cases to delinquent state and county tax assessment liens,⁵⁰ as where the holders of state and county tax sale certificates are not made parties in the suit to foreclose the municipal tax lien so that the state, county, and municipal liens may be adjudicated,⁵¹ but, where the state and county are parties to a proceeding to foreclose municipal tax liens, the liens of the state and county for taxes have been held to be discharged by the sale.⁵²

is paramount to all previous tax liens acquired by municipalities or individuals⁵³ or the purchaser takes title discharged of all liens for taxes and assessments in arrears other than those for which the sale was made.⁵⁴ Where real property was deeded to the state for delinquent county taxes, a purchaser of tax title from the city for subsequent delinquent city taxes has a superior title to the purchaser at the state tax sale under a statutory provision making a state tax deed subject to subsequent taxes levied by a municipality.⁵⁵

d. Actions Concerning Tax Title

- (1) Actions by tax title claimant
- (2) Actions against tax title claimant

(1) Actions by Tax Title Claimant

A tax title claimant ordinarily may bring an action to confirm or establish his title to the property sold or to secure the possession of the premises, and the owner of property bound by a judgment of foreclosure and sale may be precluded from contesting the execution of a writ of assistance on the application of the tax sale purchaser.

A person claiming title to property by reason of a sale for delinquent municipal taxes ordinarily may bring an action to confirm or establish his title⁵⁶ or to secure possession of the premises.⁵⁷

Status of holder

Priority of tax sale certificates properly issued by a municipality is not determined by the status of the holder as a municipality or an individual.—Village of Babylon v. South Shore Thrift Corporation, 22 N.Y.S.2d 668, 174 Misc. 738.

46. Pa.—Townsend v. Prowattain, 81½ Pa. 139.

Coequal liens

Under a statute making the lien of a special improvement assessment coequal with the lien of general municipal taxes, the sale of the land to satisfy the general taxes does not extinguish the lien of the special assessment.—Steele v. City of Waycross, 10 S.E.2d 867, 190 Ga. 816.

Statutory policy is that all legally assessed state, county, and municipal taxes which are liens, whether taxes were assessed for the same or different years, shall be paid or otherwise legally discharged before an indefeasible tax title to the property shall issue.—Allison Realty Co. v. Graves Inv. Co., 155 So. 745, 115 Fla. 48, followed in Moore v. Allen, 155 So. 752, 115 Fla. 187.

55. Cal.—Billings v. Delgado, 135 P.2d 95, 51 Cal.App.2d 489.

Statute held inapplicable

Where plaintiff in action to quiet title acquired title to real property under sale by city for delinquent taxes for 1933-34, and defendant claimed title under tax sale in 1937 after property had been deeded to state in 1929 for delinquent county taxes for 1928, the 1935 amendment to statute governing tax sales, and providing that deed by tax collector shall convey title to purchaser free of taxes due at time of such sale, did not apply, and plaintiff taking under last tax sale had superior title.—Billings v. Delgado, supra.

56. Miss.—Evans v. City of Jackson, 30 So.2d 315, 202 Miss. 9.

Jurisdiction to foreclose liens

In city's action to establish its tax title, wherein city asked, if it did not have title, that state and county tax liens be enforced, and county tax collector also prayed enforcement of county tax liens, but there was no claim that city or that county collector did not have usual charter and statutory remedy to enforce tax liens, court was without jurisdiction in equity to foreclose tax liens and properly left enforcement thereof to remedy at law.—Kansas City v. Tiernan, 202 S.W.2d 20, 356 Mo. 138.

Matters reviewable

On petition for registration and confirmation of title to land, trial court, in absence of commissioner as a party, could not review commissioner's decision that lands were of insufficient value to meet taxes, and charges together with expenses of foreclosure, so as to entitle the treasurer to sell the lands under statute dealing with sale of lands of low value held by city or town under tax titles.—D'Olimpio v. Jancoterino, 23 N.E.2d 162, 304 Mass. 200.

57. Tex.—Alderete v. City of El Paso, Civ.App., 77 S.W.2d 719.

The court which entered the judgment of foreclosure is not deprived of jurisdiction to issue a writ of assistance merely because of the lapse of time after entry of the judgment where the judgment did not provide for a writ of assistance.⁵⁸ If the time for redemption has expired, the purchaser, in order to maintain summary proceedings against an occupant for possession, must generally first obtain a deed in the manner provided by the charter.⁵⁹ A suit to quiet title based on a statutory peremption precluding the contest of a tax title a specified time after the date of the sale is not defeated where defendant owner fails to establish his possession of the premises within the period fixed for peremption.⁶⁰

Where the owner of property was bound by a judgment of foreclosure and sale, he has no right to contest the execution of a writ of assistance on the application of the city which purchased the property at the sale.⁶¹ So, on an application for a writ of assistance by a city which purchased at a tax sale, defendant may not question the due service of citation in the tax suit wherein the foreclosure judgment was obtained where the judgment recited that due service was had, since the recital imported verity;⁶² nor may defendant question the validity of the judgment on the ground that the judgment did not conform to the petition and did not set forth the nature of the city's demand as required by statute.⁶³ However, a property owner who continued in possession of land notwithstanding an alleged tax sale to the city is not

estopped by reason of supposed laches to defend against the city's suit to oust him from possession by setting up irregularities in the tax sale.⁶⁴ In a suit to confirm a tax title against the city and others, the city is not estopped to claim title under a prior adjudication of the property to it for taxes notwithstanding it later sold the property for taxes under an erroneous assessment.⁶⁵

Summary proceedings for possession instituted by the purchaser must be in strict compliance with the statute applicable to such proceedings.⁶⁶ A suit by the tax title claimant to recover possession of the property must be brought within the time limited by law,⁶⁷ but summary proceedings for possession will not be governed, in the matter of time within which the proceedings must be commenced, by the statute of limitations applicable to actions brought against the purchaser to avoid the sale of the property for taxes.⁶⁸ The pleadings in a suit to confirm a tax title must be sufficient to state a cause of action.⁶⁹ Defendant attacking the tax title may by appropriate answer deny the allegations of the bill,⁷⁰ but, where defendant failed to examine the records involving the tax title until after his answer was stricken in the suit, he will not be allowed to interpose an amended answer alleging that complainant's title was defective in that the purported tax sale was not made after public advertisement and to the highest bidder as required by statute.⁷¹ In such a suit general rules apply as to issues, proof, and variance,⁷² and, likewise, gen-

Description in deeds

In action to remove a cloud on title to realty to which defendant had once had title but which had been sold under a tax foreclosure suit and conveyed to city which conveyed to plaintiff, plaintiff was not required to show by evidence dehors the deeds that description in the deeds fitted the realty plaintiff claimed, where defendant did not allege or offer evidence of any

eral rules apply as to evidence.⁷³ Where judgment was rendered foreclosing a tax lien on defendant's property, it would be presumed, on application by the city which purchased at the sale for a writ of assistance, that the property owner rendered the lots as one parcel of land, and the property owner may not show by evidence outside the record that the lots were not so rendered.⁷⁴

(2) Actions against Tax Title Claimant

The owner of land sold for taxes, or those who have succeeded to his rights, may, in a proper case, sue to impeach and overturn the tax title, but no recovery may be had where the proceedings leading to the tax deed are not shown to be invalid and there is no merit in the grounds urged as to the invalidity of the tax deed.

The owner of land sold for taxes, or those who have succeeded to his rights, may, in a proper case, impeach and overturn the tax title, as by an action to cancel the deed, or by a bill to quiet title or to remove the cloud from his title, or by any other remedy which may be appropriate to the particular case.⁷⁵ However, a tax title may not be overthrown by suit where the proceedings leading to the tax deed are not shown to be invalid and there is no merit in the grounds urged as to the invalidity of the tax deed.⁷⁶ So it has been held that the former owner of property may not challenge the validity of a tax sale of land or recover the land

sold in the absence of averment that the land was not liable to sale for taxes or that the taxes for which the land was sold had been paid before the sale.⁷⁷ A tax deed may not be canceled on the ground that the tax purchaser did not give notice of his purchase to the tax debtor,⁷⁸ or that the purchaser did not exercise the right of ownership and had never been in physical possession of the property,⁷⁹ or that the purchaser failed to pay taxes due on the property to the state and the parish.⁸⁰

A person seeking to establish the invalidity of a tax title ordinarily must do equity by paying or offering to pay the amount of the delinquent taxes properly chargeable against the property,⁸¹ and in such case it is immaterial that such person was a defendant in the action involving the title to the property where he filed a cross action seeking affirmative relief of cancellation of tax deeds.⁸² Moreover, a party seeking to set aside a voidable tax deed may be required as a condition precedent to recovery to pay all taxes paid by the holder of the deed after the sale of the property.⁸³ The person seeking to remove as a cloud on his title the record of a void municipal tax sale proceeding and the tax deed resulting therefrom need not always be in possession in order to maintain the bill.⁸⁴

to interest of original owner of realty would not be heard in equity, when seeking to cancel deeds of purchasers at sales for city taxes, to attack sales on ground that levies were excessive, without paying or offering to pay all unpaid taxes due on the realty during time ownership thereof was in the person from whom the realty was inherited.—*Lowe v. Interest on taxes

In action to set aside a tax deed from city, the statute relating to actions for recovery of land sold for taxes and recovery of all taxes with interest paid by holder of treasurer's deed was applicable in computing the interest on taxes paid by holder of deed, and not the statute relating to redemption prior to execution of treasurer's deed.—Phillips v. City and County of Denver, supra.

brought to cancel a recorded tax lease of realty on mere notice of motion to the municipality, since the tax lessee is entitled to due notice in an appropriate action.⁸⁵ In a suit attacking a tax title, the city or its officers are not necessary parties where the city has no interest to be affected and no relief would run against it.⁸⁶ A suit by the owner of property attacking a tax title must be brought within the time limited by law.⁸⁷ Where a tax sale is void because of jurisdictional defects in the proceedings, the title acquired by the purchaser at such sale is subject to attack, notwithstanding the complaint was not brought within the time allowed by statute for redemption from tax sales.⁸⁸

Pleading. The bill or complaint in a suit attacking a tax title must be sufficient to state a cause of action,⁸⁹ and defendant must affirmatively plead his claim for reimbursement for taxes paid by him.⁹⁰ General rules as to issues, proof, and variance apply.⁹¹ So, in a proceeding challenging the validity of a tax title derived from a tax sale, a question not raised by the reasons offered for reversal, as to whether a tax sale certificate is invalid because it does not contain a true certificate of acknowledgment or state the liens to which it is subject, need not be considered.⁹²

Evidence. Questions as to the admissibility⁹³ and weight and sufficiency⁹⁴ of evidence have been adjudicated. In such a proceeding the burden is on the complaining party to prove allegations of his pleading that the lands were improperly sold at private sale and not at an advertised public auction.⁹⁵

Trial and judgment. General rules of trial apply in an action attacking a tax title,⁹⁶ as with respect to matters properly subject to the trial court's determination.⁹⁷ Where a proceeding to quiet title to a lot which defendant claimed through a quitclaim deed from a municipal corporation was a collateral attack on the decree through which the municipality acquired title to the lot, the court will not consider extrinsic evidence to impeach such decree.⁹⁸ In case of such collateral attack on the decree, the record alone may be considered, but such record may not be amplified with the personal testimony of the person claiming the lot under the quitclaim deed from the municipality.⁹⁹ Where the tax title is not shown to be invalid, the court may refuse to enjoin the purchaser at the sale from taking possession.¹ The judgment for plaintiff in an action attacking the title of the purchaser at the tax sale is properly conditioned on refund by plaintiff to the purchaser of the taxes and other expenses paid by the purchaser,² and ordinarily the purchaser

§ 2092. — Reimbursement of Purchaser of Invalid Title

- a. In general
- b. Recovery against municipal corporation

a. In General

Sales of land for municipal taxes are generally governed by the rule caveat emptor, and defects in the proceeding, even though they may be such as to invalidate the sale, do not give the purchaser any right to recover back the purchase money, but a statute may confer such right of recovery and establish a lien which may be enforced by foreclosure action.

Sales of land for municipal taxes are generally governed by the rule caveat emptor,⁴ and defects in the proceeding, even though they may be such as to invalidate the sale,⁵ do not give to the purchaser any right to recover back the purchase money in the absence of a statute conferring such right,⁶ and in the absence of evidence of fraud, accident, or mistake.⁷ Likewise, the purchaser may not obtain reimbursement for state, county, and other taxes paid by him as a prerequisite to obtaining a tax deed, where such payment was a voluntary one.⁸ Where a statute or charter so provides, however, a tax purchaser is entitled to be reimbursed for his expenditure,⁹ even though the statutory period prescribed for the duration of the tax lien has expired,¹⁰ except where the action brought by the purchaser is one to foreclose the tax lien, in which case it will be defeated by showing the non-existence of the lien.¹¹

A recovery may be had under such statutes only in cases within their terms and only on the conditions and limitations stipulated therein.¹² Some

In absence of evidence of payment of taxes, holder of void tax deed cannot complain of failure to make decree quieting title in owner conditional on reimbursing holder for taxes paid.—Scott v. Warden, 296 P. 95, 111 Cal.App. 587.

Right to reimbursement:

In action to set aside tax sale see infra § 2094 b.

In action concerning tax title see supra § 2091 a.

Invalid tax deed

The holder of an invalid tax deed is not entitled to be reimbursed for the amount paid in acquiring the tax title, whether such holder is a city or an individual.—People v. Ogden, 195 Ill.App. 563.

No subrogation

A purchaser at a void tax sale, who is a mere volunteer, and who pays his money on the bid, and receives a certificate, does not thereby become entitled to be subrogated to the right to receive the taxes from the owner of the premises.—Finegan v. New York, 38 N.Y.S. 358, 4 App. Div. 15.

Action by assignee of tax purchaser

Where one buys land from a purchaser thereof at city tax sale and sues to recover it from a third person in possession, if he fails to recover he is not entitled to a lien for the amount which he paid to the original holder of the tax title, although the tax execution may have been a lien on the land.—Maddox v. A mortgagee of land, whether in possession before foreclosure or out of possession, who purchases the land at a tax sale, is entitled to have the purchase money repaid to him if the sale should be invalid; but not so a mortgagee who, after the assessment of the tax, became the absolute owner of the premises by purchasing at a sale under a power in his mortgage.—Home Sav. Defense of title Possessor of void tax deed bringing suit to quiet title was not entitled to reimbursement for taxes, penalties, and costs as against owner merely defending title, where the statute authorizes reimbursement only in action to quiet title brought by owner against possessor of void tax title.—Scott v. Warden, 296 P. 95, 111 Cal.App. 587.

Fraudulent sales

Charter provision authorizing the setting aside of tax deeds on the ground that the taxes had been paid, or that the property was not subject to taxation, or that the property had been redeemed at the date of the deed, and providing that, on setting aside the deed, the purchaser shall have a lien for all money paid by him, does not include fraudulent sales, and does not give any relief to a purchaser entering into a fraudulent combination of bidders and thereby perpetrating a fraud on the owner, and the owner on obtaining a decree setting aside the tax sale on the ground of fraud is not chargeable with the money paid by the purchaser.—Nichols v. Russell, 123 S.W. 1032, 141 Mo.App. 140.

Extent of property affected

A strip of land only a fraction of an inch wide, sold to a purchaser at a tax sale in consideration of his paying the taxes on certain lots, is too small to enforce his lien on the failure of his title.—Phelps v. Brumback, 80 S.W. 678, 107 Mo.App. 16.

statutes allowing recovery have been held not applicable where the purchaser is the municipality itself,¹³ but other such statutes have been held applicable.¹⁴ The extent and amount of the recovery are usually fixed by the statute.¹⁵ Ordinarily the purchaser is entitled to be reimbursed for the amount for which the property sold at the tax sale,¹⁶ exclusive of costs,¹⁷ even though the purchase price exceeds the amount of the taxes covered by the tax lien;¹⁸ but under some provisions, costs may be recovered.¹⁹ The purchaser may, under some provisions, recover the value of improvements placed on the property by him.²⁰ Under a statute providing that the tax purchaser may also recover the amount of taxes accruing after his purchase and paid by him, recovery is conditioned on the actual payment of such taxes by the purchaser.²¹

Lien; enforcement. Under some statutes, where a tax sale is invalid, the purchaser at the sale has a lien on the property for the amount for which he is entitled to reimbursement,²² which may be enforced by foreclosure action,²³ and, in some instances, a personal judgment may be recovered against the successful claimant of the property.²⁴ Such lien may be enforced at any time after the invalid sale, but prior to the expiration of the lien by reason of limitation, whether the purchaser is the city²⁵ or an individual.²⁶ The limitation barring recovery in suits to recover the purchase money is not the one applicable to suits to recover land,²⁷ but the shorter period under a statute applicable to suits to satisfy charges on land by selling the premises.²⁸

b. Recovery against Municipal Corporation

A purchaser at a tax sale may be entitled to secure reimbursement from the municipal corporation conducting the sale where an ordinance or statute provides for repayment in cases of illegal sale or failure on other grounds to secure title, and in some instances a recovery may be had independent of any statute providing therefor.

Where an ordinance or statute provides for repayment in cases of illegal sale,²⁹ or failure on other grounds to secure title,³⁰ a recovery may be had against the municipal corporation conducting the sale under a complaint stating facts constituting the illegality, and it is no defense that the indebtedness of the municipality exceeds the constitutional limit.³¹ It has also been held, without reference to statute, that, where the sale is wholly unauthorized and void, plaintiff may recover the amount of his payment,³² but, according to other decisions, no

It is not necessary to enable a purchaser, who has no claim to the property by reason of some irregularity in the tax sale, to surrender his title and recover from the city the amount paid, that he be ousted or his possession disturbed by the holder of a paramount title.—Spring v. Cambridge, 85 N.E. 160, 199 Mass. 1.

Deed invalid but not sale

Where the tax sale and all proceedings preliminary thereto were regular and valid, the fact of an irregularity or error in the certificate or deed does not impair the sale, and, therefore, does not give the purchaser a right to recover his money.—Clarke v. New York, 19 N.E. 436, 111 N.Y. 6.

Proof of illegality

Under statute, providing that certificate given purchaser at tax sale should contain covenant to refund amount paid if title should "prove" invalid, the word "prove" meant "to turn out to be; to be in fact," and duty of repaying, where tax was illegal, was not postponed until proof of illegality was made in court.—Traktman v. City of New York, 149 N.E. 838, 241 N.Y. 221.

right of action exists in the absence of a statutory provision for reimbursement of the purchaser,³³ and a sale which is ineffectual for a cause other than one enumerated in the statute authorizing reimbursement does not entitle the purchaser to recover against the municipality.³⁴ In any case, in order to recover against the municipality, plaintiff must show a compliance with statutory provisions as to the making of a demand for the refund prior to suit,³⁵ and as to filing with the city collector of a statement setting forth the defects in the title and the purchaser's desire to surrender such title.³⁶ Where recovery against the city is sought on the ground of fraud, misrepresentations by the collector and receipt of the purchase money by the city will not justify recovery in the absence of further proof of the city's responsibility for the acts of its collector.³⁷ The failure to give notice of assignment of a certificate of sale is no defense in an action by the assignee against the city to recover because of defects in the proceedings prior to the sale.³⁸ Suit may and should be brought within the time limited by law,³⁹ but the statute of limitations barring recovery in such a suit does not begin to run until the purchaser has knowledge of the illegality.⁴⁰

§ 2094. — Restraining or Setting Aside Sale

a. Restraining sale

b. Setting aside sale

a. Restraining Sale

A sale for municipal taxes may be enjoined where it is unauthorized or otherwise illegal; but an injunction will not lie where the wronged taxpayer has an adequate remedy at law; nor will it be granted on grounds reviewable in the tax proceedings by methods available to the taxpayer but of which he has not availed himself.

A sale for taxes may be enjoined where it is unauthorized⁴¹ or otherwise illegal;⁴² and the court may, in a proper case, issue a temporary restraining order in a suit to determine the legality of a tax assessment and to enjoin the sale of realty thereunder.⁴³ An injunction will not lie, however, where the wronged taxpayer has an adequate remedy at law;⁴⁴ nor will it be granted on grounds reviewable in the tax proceedings by methods available to the taxpayer but of which he has not availed himself;⁴⁵ but a claimant of land levied on, other than defendant in execution, has no such remedy at law as will bar him from seeking to enjoin the sale.⁴⁶ Also, a sale will not be enjoined on the ground that another action with respect to the same matter is pending where it appears that such action has been abandoned,⁴⁷ although, if the proceedings by action are not abandoned, the jurisdiction of the court therein will be protected by issuing a temporary injunction against proceeding summarily.⁴⁸ It has been held that a court of equity should not enjoin tax sales on the application of one or more individual complainants as to the property of noncomplaining owners not parties to the suit.⁴⁹

Where plaintiff concededly owned the property sought to be sold and objected only to the fact that taxes were irregularly assessed and levied, he must pay or tender that sum which is legal and fair before equitable relief will be granted to him.⁵⁰ The Absence of notice

If judgments taken against property owner in tax foreclosure proceedings were without notice to the owners, application for relief should have been by motions in the cause and not by independent action against the commissioner appointed by the court to restrain sale of land under judgment of foreclosure.—Rosser v. bill or complaint should state facts sufficient to warrant the relief sought.⁵¹ Defendant's answer setting up facts establishing the validity of the sale may be sufficient to sustain the dissolution of a temporary restraining order,⁵² but, where defendant does not show ground for dismissal on general demurrer, it has been held that the matter should be brought to trial, and, if the court finds that the proceedings were irregular, it should ascertain the tax legally due, after proper hearing.⁵³ Where authority to make a sale is granted by a charter provision, an action to enjoin the sale on the ground that it is unauthorized may be maintained only by establishing the invalidity of the charter provision.⁵⁴ General rules apply as to the weight and sufficiency of evidence.⁵⁵

Restraint by administrative board. A state board of tax appeals has been held to have no authority directly to restrain a municipal corporation from conducting a tax sale.⁵⁶

b. Setting Aside Sale

In a proper case, an illegal sale of realty for delinquent municipal taxes may be set aside at the instance of a person having the requisite interest.

In a proper case, an illegal sale of realty for delinquent municipal taxes may be set aside at the instance of a person having the requisite interest,⁵¹ and, where tax sales certificates have been issued, a bill may be brought in equity for their cancellation.⁵⁸ So, a suit against the city to set aside a tax sale and to enjoin the city authorities from conveying title to the property and from taking any steps toward consummating the sale may be maintained by the property owner where the lien for the taxes had expired.⁵⁹ Also, a purchaser at a tax sale may be entitled to have the sale set aside and to be adjudged a statutory lien for taxes paid on behalf of the former owner where such former owner had personal property subject to distraint sufficient to pay the taxes and the value of the realty sold exceeded the amount necessary to satisfy tax claims.⁶⁰ However, a motion to vacate a sale pursuant to judgment in an action to foreclose a tax lien is addressed to the discretion vested in the court,⁶¹ and a sale will not be set aside in a suit for such relief where proper cause for judicial interference with the sale is not shown.⁶² A statute

Particular defects

Bill to enjoin tax sale is insufficient against general demurrer where it fails to show that tax was illegal, that alleged unlawful discrimination was not otherwise remediable by proceedings at law, and that defendants had exhausted statutory remedies, and contains no offer to do equity.—City of De Land v. Construction

A petition which prayed for injunction against sale of land by city for taxes without court order and which trial court treated as one for a final or perpetual injunction could not on defendant's appeal from a perpetual injunction be construed as giving plaintiff the right to a temporary injunction.—City of Fort Worth v. Action against officers

An action to have a tax sale declared void, to determine the validity of certain taxes and penalties, and to restrain officers from issuing title to the city, was not barred as an "action against the city" but was maintainable as an action to prevent the officers of the city from doing an unlawful act.—Home Building & Loan Ass'n v. City of Spartanburg, 194 S.E. 143, 185 S.C. 353.

A mortgagee's right to have a city tax sale set aside for alleged invalidity of penalty on taxes for a certain year was controlled by same principles applicable to action by same individual as owner in fee simple of other parcels of land, the sale of which for taxes was challenged on same ground.—Home Building & Loan Ass'n v. City of Spartanburg, 194 S.E. 137, 185 S.C. 355.

Effect of decision

A supreme court decision that taxes need not be paid under protest to permit an action to enjoin city authorities from taking any steps toward consummating tax sale did not deprive city of rights accruing under amendment to statute relating to payment of taxes under protest, in so far as taxes accruing since passage of amendment were concerned.—De Pass v. Lack of diligence

A landowner's erroneous belief that he had made arrangements with permitting the vacation of a tax sale after its confirmation where the taxes were paid or the property was exempt does not authorize the setting aside of such a sale for the balance due because of an erroneous receipt given by the city treasurer.⁶³

The payment of undisputed taxes is not a condition precedent to an action to set aside a tax sale, since the municipality is not thereby restricted from collecting the undisputed taxes;⁶⁴ and this is the rule at least where the tax sale is properly declared invalid on the ground that the lien for certain years had expired before the sale, that certain charges for other years were illegal, and that the sale was made without having made a lawful levy on the land and without having taken possession thereof.⁶⁵ It has also been held that a person seeking to set aside a sale based on an illegal assessment will not be required to pay the assessment where its lien has expired by lapse of time,⁶⁶ and that a charter provision that no sale which shall have been finally confirmed by the council shall be disallowed except where taxes shall have been paid prior to the sale or where the property is exempt from taxation is inapplicable to sales made in contravention of law.⁶⁷ It has been held, however, that certiorari should not be allowed to review a tax sale, except on payment of taxes conceded to be due.⁶⁸ It has also been held that a person seeking to set aside a sale may be required to pay to the purchaser at the sale the amount paid by the purchaser in satisfaction of the tax for which the property was sold, less the expenses of the sale, together with the amount of tax accruing after the purchase which was paid by the purchaser.⁶⁹

attorney to represent him in city's suit for delinquent taxes on his land or plaintiff's failure to notify him of setting of case for trial did not excuse his lack of diligence in failing to protect his interest until he joined his wife in filing suit to vacate tax sale of land nearly two years after rendition of judgment, in absence of allegation of fraud, accident, mistake, or any wrong which prevented him from making defense. —Puls v Clark, 199 S.W.2d 811, error refused, no reversible error.

A mortgage assignee who was the registered owner of premises may not have a sheriff's tax sale made in compliance with statute set aside after the expiration of the period allowed for redemption by the owner, notwithstanding the property was worth more than the amount of the bid, where the proceedings were properly advertised and no extrinsic fraud was averred. —City of Philadelphia v. Brill, 195 A. 884, 228 Pa. 471.

The municipal council and their agents who made the assessments and attempted to collect the taxes may properly be joined as parties.⁷⁰ In such an action, the passing of final judgment on the ultimate facts without any proof or evidence to sustain such ultimate facts being offered is not error, where defendant elected to stand on a demurrer predicated alone on issues of law and defendants could present any meritorious defense they might have by motion to vacate the judgment.⁷¹ Where no question as to the procedure leading up to and including the sale of land for taxes is raised in a suit by the former owner to set aside the sale, the sale will be presumed to have been conducted in due course and in a legal manner.⁷² Where defendant, in an action to set aside a tax sale, asserts the validity of the sale, he may not claim on appeal that plaintiff is not entitled to equitable relief because the tax sale proceedings have not progressed far enough to be entitled to a presumption of regularity, and, therefore, to constitute a cloud on plaintiff's title.⁷³

§ 2095. Sale of Lien on Land

A municipal corporation may be authorized by statute or charter provision to collect its tax claims by selling, at public auction, its right to receive such taxes and the lien therefor, but, in the absence of an express grant of power, a municipal corporation has no power to make a sale of tax liens.

Sometimes a municipal corporation, instead of itself selling the property, may, under charter or other statutory authorization, sell, at public auction, its right to receive such taxes and the lien therefor,⁷⁴ after due and proper notice of the sale has been given by publication.⁷⁵ The provision applies to back, as well as to current, taxes.⁷⁶ However, in the absence of an express grant of power, a municipal corporation has no power to make a sale of tax liens,⁷⁷ and a local law authorizing the collection of delinquent taxes by sale of tax liens, instead of by the sale of the property as provided by the general tax law and the original city charter, has been held invalid.⁷⁸

A sale of city's legal lien for real estate taxes without disturbance of the debtor's property ownership does

Where the sale of tax liens is authorized, the sale should include installments of special assessments accrued prior to the year in which the tax lien on the property is sold, as well as other taxes, and the purchaser should include such taxes in the bid for the lien,⁷⁹ but, where such assessments are inadvertently omitted from the sale, the certificate of the purchaser is construable as including only those annual taxes specifically advertised and sold and for which the aggregate amount is advanced and which are specifically enumerated in the certificate.⁸⁰ Ordinarily the sale does not include items due for the current year.⁸¹ The city itself may purchase the lien where no bid from anyone else is received.⁸² Where a transfer of tax lien is canceled by the city, the purchaser is entitled to interest thereon from the date of purchase,⁸³ and, where in a suit to enforce a transfer of tax lien it is adjudicated that the lien is invalid or defective, plaintiff may seek reimbursement from the city for costs taxed against him in the suit.⁸⁴ Under some statutes plaintiff seeking to maintain an action against the municipality for refund of assessments comprising tax liens transferred to him, on the ground that the assessments were void, must commence action to foreclose the liens within a specified time from the date of the sale of the liens.⁸⁵ This condition precedent to suit applies irrespective of the nature of the defects or invalidity relied on.⁸⁶

The statute of limitations applicable to such a suit is effective irrespective of transfers of the tax liens after the sale.⁸⁷

§ 2096. Sale of Taxpayer's Property Generally

A municipal corporation has no right summarily to sell property for unpaid taxes except where power to do so is delegated by the legislature; and, under some statutes, although not under others, personal property of the taxpayer, if it can be found within the jurisdiction, must be sold for the taxes before the real estate is taken.

A municipal corporation has no right summarily to sell property for unpaid taxes except where power to do so is delegated by the legislature either expressly or by necessary implication,⁸⁸ especially where, in the case of property belonging to public service corporations, a taking of the property by summary process might result in an interruption of the public service.⁸⁹ Under a statute so providing, however, a tax debtor's personal property is subject to sale for the amount of a delinquent tax assessment,⁹⁰ and statutes which authorize summary proceedings for the sale of the taxpayer's property generally for unpaid taxes have been held applicable to taxes delinquent before the statute was passed as well as to those becoming delinquent thereafter.⁹¹ Where a levy on personalty under a warrant for the collection of past-due taxes created no lien for unassessed taxes for the current year, such taxes are improperly included in the sale for the delinquent taxes at least where the sale occurred prior to issuance of the warrant for collection of taxes for the current year.⁹² However, the inclusion of the unmatured taxes in the sale does not invalidate the sale as a whole where bids on separate items of personalty were not obtainable and the property would have been sold as a whole, even though the unmatured taxes had not been included.⁹³ The inadequacy of the sale price

of personalty sold for delinquent taxes has been held insufficient to invalidate the sale where the value of the personalty was not ascertained by the court and the sale was otherwise legal.⁹⁴ The purchaser of a bankrupt's movables may not complain of an irregularity in a subsequent tax sale of the movables of which one to whom he resold them did not complain.⁹⁵

On a sale of personalty for delinquent taxes, the municipality may not retain the amount in excess of the delinquent taxes, notwithstanding the collector received a warrant a short time after the sale authorizing the collection of taxes unmatured at the time of the sale,⁹⁶ at least where the complaining party was not the owner of the personalty on the assessment date and was not personally liable for the taxes on either the delinquent or unmatured list.⁹⁷ A suit by a creditor of the taxpayer to impress a lien on the surplus from the tax sale is in personam rather than in rem, where no relief can be granted without a determination of the taxpayer's indebtedness to claimant and the exact amount thereof,⁹⁸ and the court will not determine such indebtedness without having obtained jurisdiction of the taxpayer either by service of process within the jurisdiction or by voluntary appearance.⁹⁹

Primary resort as between real and personal property. Under some statutes, personal property of the taxpayer, if it can be found within the jurisdiction, must be sold for the taxes before the real estate is taken,¹ and a tax sale of real property is void where personalty is not first subjected to the tax claim;² but a failure to distrain the personalty does not defeat the liens against the realty for taxes duly levied and assessed against it,³ and the municipality may subsequently proceed against the realty on a showing that the personalty has been dissipated notwithstanding the mortgagee had purchased the realty at a mortgage foreclosure sale without actual knowledge of the tax lien.⁴ Under other statutes, distraint of the personalty is a concurrent remedy,⁵ but not a condition precedent to sale of the land,⁶ and the city has an election whether to proceed against realty or personalty for unpaid taxes.⁷ So, where the taxes on personalty and realty are a general lien on all the real property of the taxpayer, such real estate may, under some statutes, be sold for taxes on personal property before resorting to such personal property,⁸ but, unless the statute requires it, there is no necessity for proceeding in this way.⁹ A city is under no obligation to exhaust defendant's personalty before selling the real estate, where the sale is made subsequent to the enactment of a law repealing an earlier statute making such procedure necessary.¹⁰

§ 2097. Garnishment and Distress

Collection of municipal taxes may sometimes be enforced by garnishing anyone indebted to the delinquent taxpayer, or by a seizure and sale of personal property under distress for taxes.

In some municipal corporations, collection may be enforced by garnishing anyone indebted to the delinquent taxpayer.¹¹

In some jurisdictions, personal property may be seized by municipal officers under distress for taxes.¹² Where, however, the municipality had not distrained property for the collection of a tax prior to the sale of such property to an innocent purchaser, it may not thereafter distrain the property in the hands of such purchaser.¹³ It is generally provided that, before personal property can be seized and sold for the payment of municipal taxes, there must be a delivery of the tax duplicate and warrant,¹⁴ and, under some charter provisions, it is necessary that delinquent lists shall be sent to the collector at least once a year in order to preserve the right of distress.¹⁵ Under some statutes, the collector may levy on personal property of a tenant on the premises taxed, regardless of the time when the taxes were assessed and notwithstanding the tenant did not occupy the premises at the time of the assessment; but personal property of the tenant cannot be levied on unless it is on the premises for which the taxes are due.¹⁶

§ 2098. Summary Execution or Motion

The collection of taxes may sometimes be enforced by the issuance in the first instance of an execution against the property in general of the taxpayer, and in some jurisdictions a recovery by motion is authorized.

In some jurisdictions an execution against the property in general of the taxpayer may be issued in the first instance,¹⁷ although, under the provisions of the statute, if the owner of the land is known to the city collector and the ownership of the land is not doubtful, an execution in rem against the land cannot legally issue.¹⁸ An execution may be issued under the statute for back taxes as well as for taxes for the current year.¹⁹ A right of a municipality under its charter to proceed by summary execution in collecting its taxes is not lost through the repealing clause of a general law which by its terms does not apply to the provisions of charters inconsistent therewith.²⁰

scribe particular property;²¹ and it cannot issue against an entire tract of land comprising several lots easily separable, where the value of any one of the lots is in excess of the amount of the tax.²² A statute providing that the sheriff should first levy on and sell that part of the property which defendant in fieri facias desires sold has been held not to be applicable to a levy and sale under an execution for city taxes.²³ A levy for taxes on small parcels before a levy on property which is indivisible and of greater value is not required where it does not appear that any small tracts were assessed by the city against the taxpayer, from which the tax could be collected.²⁴ Ordinarily property may not be sold under a tax execution in personam as the property of defendant therein, when defendant has neither title nor possession, nor any right to represent the person who has it, and a sale under these circumstances is void as to the true owner.²⁵ An execution is not invalid as a whole where defendant owes at least a part of the amount claimed therein.²⁶ So, an execution is not invalidated by the fact that it embraces claims not collectable by execution with claims which may be lawfully collected in that way.²⁷ Statutory directions as to the form of the execution should be followed,²⁸ but a failure to do so is not necessarily fatal.²⁹ The failure of the officer levying on land under a tax execution to give the required statutory notice has not been held not to invalidate the levy where the statute is merely directory.³⁰

In some states a tax list delivered to the collector has the force of a judgment⁸¹ and execution.⁸² In some jurisdictions a recovery by motion has been authorized;⁸³ and, where the tax is against the estate of a decedent, it is sometimes provided that collection may be enforced by presenting to the court a brief statement showing the fact and amount of the delinquency⁸⁴ and the issuance of an order to show cause.⁸⁵ It has been held that the powers conferred on a city treasurer relative to the issuance of warrants for unpaid taxes, filing them as judgments, and issuing execution on them, pertain more to the nature of judicial rather than mere administrative functions, and that the exercise of such power is reviewable by a court.⁸⁶

§ 2099. Arrest or Fine

Arrest for nonpayment of a tax is not authorized in the absence of an express grant of power by the legislature, but power may be conferred on a municipal corporation to provide for fining a person delinquent in the payment of a street tax.

Arrest for nonpayment of a tax is not authorized except where power so to do is expressly conferred by the legislature.⁸⁷ Power may be conferred on a municipal corporation to enact an ordinance providing for fining a person delinquent in the payment of a street tax.⁸⁸

c. Redemption from Sale

§ 2100. In General

- a. General principles
- b. Notice to redeem and of application for deed
- c. Foreclosure of right of redemption
- d. Foreclosure of tax sale certificates

a. General Principles

Redemption may be made from a municipal tax sale

when authorized by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions or by ordinances.

The right to redeem from a municipal tax sale has been conferred by various constitutional, statutory, and charter provisions and by ordinances.³⁹ The right exists only as permitted by such provisions,⁴⁰ although it may be conferred by implication as well as expressly.⁴¹ A special statute authorizing redemption from tax sales by a certain city rather than a general statute authorizing redemption controls in the case of tax sales by such city.⁴² Some statutes and charter provisions giving the right of redemption relate, or are confined, to redemption from particular tax sales.⁴³

Redemption by operation of law. Redemption may result by operation of law after the lapse of the redemption period.⁴⁴

Injunction to restrain termination of redemption. An injunction to restrain the termination of an owner's right to redeem from a municipal tax sale may be granted in a proper case.⁴⁵

b. Notice to Redeem and of Application for Deed

Various constitutions, statutes, charter provisions, and ordinances permit or require the purchaser at a municipal tax sale, or a municipal officer, to give notice of the right of redemption or of an application for a tax deed.

Under some constitutions, statutes, charter provisions, and ordinances the purchaser at a municipal tax sale, or a municipal official, is permitted or required to give notice, usually within a prescribed time, of the right of qualified persons to redeem from the sale or notice of an application for a deed or notice to the effect that, unless the property is redeemed within a certain period of time, a tax deed will be issued.⁴⁶ Until the required notice has been given, the owner of the property retains his right to redeem.⁴⁷ General statutes providing for notice of the expiration of the time for redemption or of application for a deed have been held applicable to cities;⁴⁸ but, where complete provision is made in the charter of a city by special act of the legislature with respect to the notice to redeem, the charter governs rather than a general statute providing for notice to redeem.⁴⁹

Persons entitled to notice; unknown owners. Notice must be given to such persons as are designated by the statutory or charter provisions,⁵⁰ such as the owner⁵¹ or the owner and mortgagee.⁵² Under some statutes notice to redeem must be served on the person in possession and al-

"Purpose of the law is to apprise the owner or his representative of the fact that his land has been sold for taxes, and to give him an opportunity to redeem it before he shall be barred of all claim thereto."—Crawford v. Liddle, 70 N.W. 97, 99, 101 Iowa 148.

Validity of provision

City ordinance providing for termination of right to redeem land deeded to city for nonpayment of taxes on four months' notice is not invalid, although it permits termination of such right sooner and by a different method than under ordinance in force when land was sold to city, since it provides for adequate notice to taxpayer and fair opportunity to redeem property.—Assets Reconstruction Corp. v. Munson, 184 P.2d 11, 81 Cal.App.2d 363.

Ordinance as superseding prior law

City ordinance providing a new method for terminating right to redeem land deeded to city for nonpayment of taxes, entirely inconsistent with state law prohibiting before designated date, termination of such right as to land deeded to state, repealed by implication provisions of previous ordinance adopting state plan for termination of right to redeem tax-deeded property.—Assets Reconstruction Corp. v. Munson, supra.

so on the person in whose name the land is taxed.⁵³ Under such statutes, where the land is taxed to unknown owners and no person is in possession, no notice is required.⁵⁴ Where a statute requiring service of the notice to redeem on the person in possession and also on the person in whose name the land is taxed is applicable to cities, a notice must be served on the person listed by the county on its books as owner, although the land is assessed as unknown on the books of the city.⁵⁵

Under some statutes provision is made for the publication of a notice to unknown persons requiring them to redeem the lands or to show cause why a deed therefor should not be delivered to the purchaser thereof or his assigns within the time specified in the order.⁵⁶ The proceeding must be in strict compliance with all the requirements of the statute.⁵⁷ Thus, when required by the statute, the petition must describe the property by metes and bounds as well as by lots and block numbers.⁵⁸ Where the owner redeems within the time fixed in the order and published notice, he is not required to show cause why a deed should not be executed and in such case the court is without power to make an order for a deed.⁵⁹ The proceedings may be reviewed by certiorari.⁶⁰

If any person interested, who is entitled to notice to redeem, has not been served with notice and a deed has been given the purchaser, the unnotified person may still be served and, failing to redeem, a supplemental deed may be given the purchaser.⁶¹

Service of notice. The notice is to be served in such manner as the statutes or charter provisions direct,⁶² such as by publication.⁶³ Where notice by publication is prescribed, personal service of the notice is not necessary.⁶⁴ Proof of service is to be made as directed by statutory or charter regulations.⁶⁵

c. Foreclosure of Right of Redemption

When authorized by statute, an action or suit may be brought to foreclose the right of redemption from a municipal tax sale.

Under some statutory provisions, an action or suit may be brought to foreclose the right of redemption from a municipal tax sale.⁶⁶ It has been held that the proceeding under such provisions is one in rem, unless defendants are personally served or appear;⁶⁷ and it has also been held that the proceeding is, in effect, a suit in strict foreclosure.⁶⁸ Under some statutes the remedy to foreclose the right of redemption exists in addition to the remedy of barring the right by serving a notice to redeem;⁶⁹ under other statutes or charter regulations the city may not maintain an action for foreclosure unless the owner has been actually served with a notice to redeem.⁷⁰

Persons entitled to sue; parties. The proceeding to foreclose must be brought by such person or persons as are authorized by the statute,⁷¹ such as the holder of the tax title⁷² or the assignee of the

72. Person holding tax title

One paying city tax collector

tax purchaser.⁷³ Where the municipality becomes a purchaser at the tax sale, it may, when authorized by statute, foreclose the right of redemption.⁷⁴

In such proceeding any person claiming an interest may, as authorized by statute, file an answer and offer to make redemption.⁷⁵ Where defendant merely holds the legal title as trustee, the court may order that the beneficiaries be made parties defendant.⁷⁶ A person who has no right to redeem may not be admitted as a party defendant.⁷⁷

Time to sue. A petition or bill to foreclose may be filed at such time as is permitted by statute.⁷⁸

Notice. Notice of the filing of the petition for foreclosure should be given as directed by the statute.⁷⁹ The failure to notify the owner of the land of the pendency of the petition for foreclosure does not affect the validity of the decree in its application to the mortgagees who were notified and who appeared.⁸⁰

Pleading. General rules of pleading ordinarily are applicable in suits to foreclose the right of redemption.⁸¹ In a proper case an answer may be stricken on motion where such procedure is made available to test the sufficiency of the answer or some part thereof.⁸² It has been held that a counterclaim to foreclose defendant's mortgage may not be filed in a suit in equity to foreclose the right of redemption.⁸³

Stay of proceeding. Where by answer defendant avers the invalidity of the tax or impugns the legality of the proceedings to sell or the legality of the sale, the court may, when authorized by statute, stay the foreclosure proceedings to enable defendant to obtain a writ of certiorari to review the alleged invalidity or illegality.⁸⁴

Trial or hearing. The trial or hearing is to be conducted in such manner as is prescribed by statute and the rules of practice.⁸⁵

Judgment or decree; costs. Such judgment or decree is to be entered on foreclosure as is authorized by statute and the rules of practice.⁸⁶ A decree may be entered against such defendants who appear and answer, but no personal decree for costs or other money may be entered against a defendant who has not appeared or answered.⁸⁷ The court may permit redemption on payment of such amounts as are required by the statute.⁸⁸

Where the statute so provides, the decree of foreclosure bars the right of redemption and forecloses all prior and subsequent alienations of the lands and encumbrances thereon, except municipal liens,⁸⁹ and the title conveyed by a tax collector's deed or by a taking of the land for taxes is

amount sufficient to redeem land, to which another held tax title as matter of record, and receiving redemption certificate, which was recorded on margin of record of tax deed, could not maintain petition to foreclose rights of redemption on such land, since petitioner failed to show that she was holder of tax title.—*Polep v. Sale of property. In a suit to foreclose a right of redemption, in the absence of statutory authority the court may not order the property sold at public auction.⁹² An unauthorized order for the sale of the property may be vacated by the court at any time.⁹³

Review. A judgment or decree in an action to foreclose the right of redemption may be reviewed to the extent that a review is authorized by constitutional or statutory provisions.⁹⁴ An appeal may be taken when authorized by such provisions.⁹⁵ Under some statutes an appeal brings up only questions of law apparent on the record,⁹⁶ and findings of fact cannot be revised and must be accepted as true;⁹⁷ if, on all the facts thus displayed and the reasonable inferences of which they are susceptible, the ultimate finding is justified as matter of law, it must stand.⁹⁸

Authority of counsel for municipality

Implied authority of counsel for municipality to consent extends only to matters of procedure and cannot be extended to matters in which the municipality itself had no power expressly to authorize a sale which would destroy its lien for an amount less than that of the tax.—City of Garfield v. Decisions reviewable

In proceeding to foreclose right of redemption under tax title, acquired by city for tax assessed on realty for certain year, matters of validity of such title and of redemption were so far separable as to authorize appeal from land court's decision as to validity of title, although court ordered case to stand for further hearing on matter of redemption.—City of Boston v. Quincy Market Cold Storage & Warehouse Co., supra.

d. Foreclosure of Tax Sale Certificates

An action to foreclose a municipal tax sale certificate may be brought when such action is authorized by statute or is maintainable in equity under the general jurisdiction of the court.

Under some statutory provisions an action or suit may be brought to foreclose the lien of a municipal tax sale certificate,⁹⁹ and foreclosure may also be decreed under the general equity powers of a court.¹

Where authorized by statute, municipal tax sale certificates may be foreclosed in the same suit in which foreclosure of state and county tax sale certificates is sought.² A holder of a municipal tax certificate may sue to foreclose the certificate without redeeming or paying outstanding state, county, and drainage tax certificates and omitted and subsequent taxes.³ In order to avoid multiple litigation the holder of a tax sale certificate may bring a foreclosure suit to have all unsatisfied tax liens adjudicated and the title cleared of all matured tax liens, but such procedure is not mandatory.⁴ The Question whether method of assessment is reasonable is in each case largely a matter of fact for the judge.—City of Boston v. Boston Port Development Co., 30 N.E.2d 896, 308 Mass. 72, 133 A.L.R. 515.

Motion on appeal to add to record

On appeal in proceeding to foreclose rights of redemption in land taken by city for nonpayment of taxes, motion to add to record a transcript of evidence on theory that proceeding was in equity was denied pro forma, where transcript of record was sufficient to enable reviewing court to decide case.—City of Lowell v. Marden & Murphy, 74 N.E.2d 666, 321 Mass. 597, certiorari denied 68 S.Ct. 354, 332 U.S. 850, 92 L.Ed. 420.

Purpose of statutes allowing foreclosure of a tax sale certificate is to enable the holder of the certificate to procure a good title to the property.—Lee v. Walter-Keogh, Inc., 141 So. 131, 105 Fla. 199.

Applicability of general statute

General statute authorizing foreclosure of tax sale certificates applies to municipal tax sale certificates.—Coral Gables Properties v. Stopler, 155 So. 799, 115 Fla. 231—Southwest Enterprises v. Frasse, 152 So. 175, 113 Fla. 770—Lee v. Walter-Keogh, Inc., 141 So. 131, 105 Fla. 199.

Misnomer of corporate holder of certificate

Under a general statute providing that a misnomer of a corporation in any deed or instrument shall not vitiate it if the corporation shall be therein sufficiently described to ascertain the intent of the parties, the fact that purchaser corporation was, through inadvertence, misnamed in city's tax certificate, did not bar foreclosure by lawful holder of certificate, especially where certificate was made part of record.—Laws v. proceeding must be brought within such time as may be fixed by statute.⁵

Persons entitled to sue; parties. The assignee of a municipal tax sale certificate may sue to foreclose.⁶ The husband of the owner of the land is a proper party defendant.⁷ A person who has no interest in the land at the time of the foreclosure proceedings is not a necessary party;⁸ and, in the absence of a statutory requirement, other tax lien holders need not be made parties defendant.⁹

Some special statutes enable a municipality to foreclose their own municipally held tax certificates by an action in rem against the tax encumbered land without naming any parties defendant and without serving any persons interested in the land as coequal or superior lienors with formal process of any kind.¹⁰

pleadings as they are framed at the time of the filing of the petition for intervention and, where he seeks to bring into the cause tax certificates for years not covered by the pleadings, the petition for intervention may be denied.¹¹

Notice. Such notice or process must be served on defendant as is required by statute.¹²

Pleading. General rules of pleading ordinarily apply in suits to foreclose a municipal tax sale certificate.¹³ The portion of an answer setting up inapplicable statutes may be stricken.¹⁴ A mortgagee who is made a party defendant in a suit to foreclose a tax sale certificate on the mortgaged property has a right in his answer to pray for the adjudication of priorities of liens.¹⁵ failure to make state or owner of state and county tax liens party defendant.—City of Bradenton v. Northern Inv. Corporation, 164 So. 136, 121 Fla. 470.

10. Scope of foreclosure

(1) Statute is limited in scope to foreclosure of owner of lands only and those whose claims are derived from, or subordinate to, delinquent owner, and does not apply to those holding tax certificates of equal dignity with claims of municipality.—City of Miami v. Certain Lands upon which City of Miami Taxes and Liens are Delinquent, 171 So. 798, 126 Fla. 781.

(2) Municipality was not entitled to extinguish outstanding municipal tax certificates on same land which had been issued to holder for prior unpaid taxes, where state by contract with holder reserved power to encumber taxed property with equal but not superior liens for unpaid subsequently assessed taxes.—City of Miami v. Certain Lands upon which City of Miami Taxes and Liens are Delinquent, supra.

ty Inv. Corporation, 155 So. 752, 115 Fla. 536.

Allegations in answer

Allegation in answer that part of assessed lot had been converted to highway purposes was no defense to suit to foreclose municipal tax sale certificates where all of lot which was subject to taxation had been assessed.—Palbicke v. Hanover Nat. Corporation, 162 So. 694, 120 Fla. 299.

15. Fla.—Lang v. Quaker Realty Corporation, 179 So. 144, 131 Fla. 179.

Answer as counterclaim

In a suit to foreclose municipal tax certificates, the claim of a mortgagee, who answers and prays an adjudication of priority of liens, is not a counterclaim within the chancery rule requiring service of a copy of a counterclaim on the opponent.—Lang v. Quaker Realty Corporation, supra.

16. Double taxation

Warehouse company which was located on realty owned by railroad, and which had been erroneously assessed by state for tax and had in good faith paid amount into state treasury was not relieved from foreclosure of tax certificates for tax rightfully assessed and levied by city, on ground that property was unlawfully subject to double taxfense that the city assigned the certificate for an insufficient consideration.¹⁷ The property owner may be precluded by laches¹⁸ or estoppel¹⁹ from asserting that the tax was invalid.

Judgment or decree. Such judgment or decree is to be entered on foreclosure as is authorized by statute and the rules of practice.²⁰ Where a purchaser acquires the tax sale certificate from the municipality for less than its face value and rests foreclosure of the certificate on the inherent jurisdiction of equity to foreclose liens, he is entitled to recover no more than the sum paid for the certificates, with interest.²¹ A judgment foreclosing a tax sale certificate in an action in which the owner of the land was made a party is binding not only on such owner, but also on the owner's successor in title.²² However, the judgment or decree is not binding on a party who was not properly served with process or notice.²³

Sale of property. Under statutory authorization the court may order the sale of the property on foreclosure of a municipal tax sale certificate.²⁴ The court in its decree may, and is under the duty to, fix the terms and conditions of the sale.²⁵ The court will confirm the sale where it has been properly conducted.²⁶ If there are sufficient funds produced at the sale to pay off the lien evidenced by the tax sale certificate and leave a balance, a mortgagee party defendant is entitled to have such balance applied on the payment of the indebtedness on the mortgage.²⁷ A foreclosure sale of property predicated only on the lien of a municipal tax sale

Priority of city tax liens

Bill for discovery of consideration paid

Where bill for discovery of consideration paid for municipal tax certificates by holder for purpose of determining whether property owner would desire to redeem them if they should be held valid tax liens did not affirmatively disclose full character of the certificates, bill was insufficient to enable court to pass on owner's right to redeem at less than face of certificates with interest and penalties.—General Properties Co. v. Rellim Inv. Co., supra.

had acquired interest of all heirs, town by purchasing premises at tax sale acquired no such clear right to possession of premises as entitled town to writ of assistance to obtain possession, and person in possession was entitled to injunction to restrain execution of writ.—Gower v. Consistency of provisions in decree

Where one paragraph of final decree foreclosing municipal tax sale certificates provided only that land be sold at auction for cash, and another paragraph provided that purchaser must pay amount in cash upon confirmation of sale, decree was not erroneous as comprising inconsistent provisions, since second paragraph was merely explanatory of when cash payment was to be made.—Coombes v. Wheeler, supra.

Confirmation before bid paid

Where final decree foreclosing municipal tax sale certificates provided that property should be sold for cash to be paid on confirmation of sale, and notice of sale stated that property would be sold for cash but did not state when cash must be paid, confirmation of sale before amount of bid had been paid was not error.—Coombes v. Wheeler, supra.

27. Fla.—Lang v. Quaker Realty Corporation, 179 So. 144, 131 Fla. 179.

Rights of first mortgagee

(1) A provision in first mortgage of numerous lots that mortgagee would release any lot from lien on payment of five hundred dollars, but need not if mortgage was in default at time of request for release, left mortgagee under no obligation to accept one thousand dollars out of surplus proceeds of sale of two lots under tax sale certificates and to re-

certificate is subject to all unsatisfied liens for state, county, and municipal taxes, without regard to the year for which the taxes are due.²⁸ Where the city forecloses its tax certificates and takes title to the realty after final judgment and sale, the city tax lien is thereby extinguished and is no bar to foreclosure proceedings by the owner of county and state tax certificates on the same realty who had not been made a party to the foreclosure action by the city.²⁹

Costs and attorney's fees. Such costs may be allowed as are authorized by statute.³⁰ Attorney's fees may not be allowed³¹ unless authorized by statute.³²

§ 2101. Persons Entitled to Redeem

Redemption from a municipal tax sale may be made by such persons as are designated by statute.

Such persons as are designated by statute may redeem from a municipal tax sale.³³ As a general rule, under the statutes, the right to redeem belongs to the owner of the land,³⁴ or, after his death, to his heir at law,³⁵ or to anyone having an interest in the land, whose right to redeem has not been foreclosed.³⁶ A statute restricting the right of redemption to owners has been construed to include tax purchasers when considered with respect to prior tax sales, and any tax purchaser is entitled to redeem from prior tax sales.³⁷

Occupant. An occupant of the land within a statute allowing redemption by such occupant must be a lawful occupant who has a lawful right or interest in the land.³⁸

§ 2102. Amount Required to Redeem

Such amount must be paid to redeem from a municipal tax sale as is required by statutory or charter provisions or by ordinance.

The amount required to be paid to redeem from a municipal tax sale is generally prescribed by statute or charter provision, or by ordinance,³⁹ and such amount must be paid as is required by such provisions.⁴⁰ Under such provisions, the amount lease such lots from mortgage lien, and mortgagee could claim the entire surplus.—Coombes v. Wheeler, 179 So. 785, 131 Fla. 593.

(2) In proceeding for distribution of surplus moneys arising from sale under foreclosure of municipal tax sale certificates, the doctrine of marshaling assets was inapplicable and entire surplus was properly paid to first mortgagee, especially where both first and second mortgagees had other property to which to look to payment of their respective liens.—*Coombes v. Cost of improvements and title insurance

Under statute requiring on redemption the payment of "the insurance upon the property, and other charges and necessary expenses of the property, actually paid, less rents or other income therefrom, and a sum equal to interest at the rate of ten per centum thereon, from the time of each of such payments," purchaser was not entitled to expense of title insurance or to improvements made in order that premises might be rented profitably, and, since the premises were unrentable without such improvements, no credit would be allowed to redeemer therefor, but purchaser was entitled to sum expended to comply with order of the fire marshal.—City of Philadelphia v. Rutherford, 62 A.2d 122, 163 Pa.Super. 476.

Amount of bid

Redemption from statutory tax lien foreclosure by city cannot be made by paying amount of bid, but may be made only by paying full amount of taxes due with interest.—City of Plattsmouth v. Hazzard, 271 N.W. 801, 132 Neb. 284.

Failure of purchaser to obtain certificate of sale

(1) Where lot was sold to city for delinquent taxes but no certificate of sale was ever recorded, the original owner retained title, subject to lien of city as purchaser for unpaid taxes and interest thereon and of right to redeem from lien on terms specified in statute and charter; hence original owner was personally liable to city for taxes against property assessed in such original owner's name subsequent to the tax sale.—City of Richmond v. Monument Ave. Development Corp., 34 S.E.2d 223, 184 Va. 152.

(2) Statute authorizing commonwealth to sell realty purchased by it for delinquent taxes, and providing that on resale the lien of all former taxes shall be canceled, although amount realized from resale is insufficient to pay amount required to redeem, was inapplicable in city's action to recover personal judgment for taxes from previous owner of lots purchased by city at tax sale, where no certificate of sale to city was ever recorded, so that city had never obtained title.—City of Richmond v. Monument Ave. Development Corp., supra.

Certification of subsequent taxes

(1) Under some statutes where the city has purchased or taken the property, redemption may be made by payment only of the amount of the tax for which the estate was purchased or taken "and of such subsequent taxes as shall have been so certified, together with costs and interest."—Boston Five Cents Sav. Bank v. City of Boston, 61 N.E.2d 124, 318 Mass. 183.

(2) Purpose of requiring certification of taxes for subsequent years on or before a particular day under statute is to fix time when responsibility of collector ends and that of treasurer begins.—Boston Five Cents Sav. Bank v. City of Boston, supra—City of Boston v. Barry, 53 N.E.2d 686, 315 Mass. 572.

(3) Statutory provision fixing time for certification of subsequent taxes is merely directory and compliance with it is not essential to validity of certification.—Boston Five Cents Sav. Bank v. City of Boston, supra—City of Boston v. Barry, supra.

(4) Certifications held timely.—City of Chelsea v. Richard T. Green Co., 60 N.E.2d 351, 318 Mass. 85.

(5) Statutory direction for form of certification of subsequent taxes is merely directory.—City of Boston v. Barry, supra.

Lands adjudicated to state or subdivision

(1) In some jurisdictions statutes have provided that the owners or persons interested may redeem property adjudicated to the state or any of its subdivisions by payment of the amount of actual taxes for which the land was adjudicated to the state or any of its political subdivisions.—State ex rel. Hodge v. Grace, 184 So. 527, 191 La. 15—State ex rel. Tulane Homestead Ass'n v. Montgomery, 171 So. 28, 185 La. 777—State ex rel. Salomon v. City of New Orleans, La.App., 174 So. 492.

(2) Such statutes have been held valid.—State ex rel. Tulane Homestead Ass'n v. Montgomery, supra—

State ex rel. McGregor v. Diamond, La.App., 167 So. 760.

(3) Purpose of legislation was to relieve property owners distressed because of economic conditions.—State ex rel. Tulane Homestead Ass'n v. Montgomery, supra.

(4) On redemption of property under redemption statutes, taxes accruing while property stood under adjudication to city, but not taxes accruing prior to adjudication, were eliminated as debts against the property.—State ex rel. Salomon v. City of New Orleans, supra.

(5) Fisc of municipality should not be interfered with lightly, and court will not do so in interpreting acts governing redemption of properties adjudicated to city for nonpayment of taxes, in absence of clear unambiguous expression of legislative will to such effect, particularly where it would involve acts in serious constitutional question.—State ex rel. Tulane Homestead Ass'n v. Montgomery, supra.

(6) Purchaser who redeemed realty by paying tax levy for nonpayment of which realty had been adjudicated to city was not entitled to cancellation of tax liens existing at time of adjudication which were not prescribed, as against contention that such taxes were extinguished by confusion when city became adjudicatee at tax sale.—State ex rel. Phoenix Homestead Ass'n v. City of New Orleans, 169 So. 825.

Applicability of statute to mortgagee

(1) Where holder of mortgage lien was merely asserting his mortgage lien and was not seeking to redeem property involved from municipal tax sale, the statute relating to penalties and penal interest in case of redemption from tax sale did not apply.—Interstate Bond Co. v. Home Owners Loan Corporation, 139 S.W.2d 69, 282 Ky. 569.

(2) Where purchaser at municipal tax sale was required to and did pay penalties of ten per cent on taxes subsequently falling due before receiving tax deed, mortgagee asserting his mortgage had no greater rights than the owner and purchaser was entitled to lien for such penalties.—Interstate Bond Co. v. Home Owners Loan Corporation, supra.

purchaser in proceedings to perfect title,⁴⁶ but not including the costs of the tax suit⁴⁷ or the costs of the sale.⁴⁸ To this should be added interest,⁴⁹ computed on the total amount of the various items from the date of the sale to the tax purchaser to the time when the owner made the tender and offered to redeem.⁵⁰ A former owner seeking to redeem from a tax purchaser rightfully in possession under the statute is not entitled to deduct from the total amount of these items a charge for rental during the time that the tax purchaser was in possession.⁵¹

A joint owner may, in some municipalities, redeem his undivided interest by payment of his proportionate share of the whole amount necessary to redeem.⁵²

Compromise. A municipality has the power to make a compromise by which it receives a lump sum from the delinquent taxpayer to effect a redemption,⁵³ and the council may not subsequently forbid the execution of a conveyance to the person redeeming.⁵⁴

Recovery of overpayment. An alleged overpay-ment made in redeeming land sold at a municipal tax sale may not be recovered where the payment was voluntary.⁵⁵

§ 2103. Time for Redemption

Redemption from a municipal tax sale must be made within such time as is prescribed by statutes, charter provisions, or ordinances.

The right of redemption from a municipal tax sale ordinarily must be exercised within the time prescribed by the constitution, statute, charter, or ordinance.⁵⁶ A special statute authorizing redemption from a tax sale by a certain city within a prescribed time rather than a general statute authorizing redemption controls in the case of a tax sale by such city.⁵⁷ A charter provision is void which allows a longer period of time for redemption than is permitted by the express terms of the state constitution.⁵⁸

Under particular statutory or charter provisions or ordinances redemption may be made before the date of the sale;⁵⁹ before the issuance or execution of a deed;⁶⁰ before foreclosure of the right of redemption by suit;⁶¹ within a certain period of

55. Payment under duress

The fact that owner of land sold for delinquent municipal taxes neglected to make redemption by paying the correct amount required therefor to tax collector as provided by statute and then, in order to effect redemption so that he could comply with contract to sell land, had to pay amount exacted by holder of tax sale certificate, did not constitute such payment a payment under duress so as to entitle landowner to recover back an alleged overpayment, notwithstanding payment was made under protest.—Margolis v. Interboro Holding Corporation, 18 A.2d 28, 125 N.J.Law 614.

Payment under protest

Where owner of land sold for delinquent municipal taxes paid under protest amount demanded by holder of tax sale certificate, without seeking appropriate remedy to test validity of demand because immediate redemption was necessary in order to fulfill owner's contract to sell the land, such payment was a voluntary payment for which there could be no recovery.—Margolis v. Interboro Holding Corporation, supra.

time from the day of sale⁶² or after the sale and the deposit of the deed with a designated city official, such as the mayor;⁶³ or, where the mortgagee of the property has a right to redeem, within a certain time after he has received actual notice of the sale.⁶⁴ Statutory and charter regulations sometimes expressly prescribe the time within which redemption may be made by persons under disability⁶⁵ or by remaindermen.⁶⁶ Under some statutes the owner of realty sold to the town or city at a tax sale is entitled to redeem within a certain number of days after notification in writing that the town or city has had an offer approved by the town or the city council and mayor of the city for the purchase of the realty.⁶⁷

Redemption after expiration of time. After the time for redemption has expired, the right to redeem ordinarily is gone,⁶⁸ and it has been held that there is no power even in a court of equity thereafter to authorize a redemption of the property.⁶⁹

against a subsequent extension of the period of redemption by statute,⁷⁰ and for this reason a charter amendment extending the time of redemption will not be given retroactive effect as against the contract rights of purchasers at tax sales held before the amendment went into effect.⁷¹

§ 2104. Procedure

Redemption from a municipal tax sale must be made in the mode prescribed by statute, although in a proper case a bill in equity to redeem will lie.

Where the law does not require any particular form of procedure in order to assert the right to redeem from a municipal tax sale, any transaction by which the purchaser under the tax sale and the owner of the property accomplish this purpose will be sufficient.⁷² Where the procedure is prescribed by statutory regulations, redemption must be made in the mode prescribed.⁷³ Payment must be made to the person designated by the statute,⁷⁴ although it has been held that, where the statute designates a public officer as the person to receive the money, a tender or payment to the purchaser himself will

(1) Former owner's offer to redeem realty more than a year after town's purchase thereof at tax sale by paying all taxes, interest and charges due the town was not governed by statute providing for redemption within a designated number of days after notice to person to whom property was last assessed of receipt of an offer approved by town council to purchase such realty, where no such offer to purchase had been made by any third person, and hence tax collector's failure to conform to provisions of such statute would not cast a cloud on the title acquired through such redemption.—Swanson v. Fielder, 27 A.2d 184, 68 R.I. 214.

(2) Where former owner's offer to redeem realty more than a year after town's purchase thereof at tax sale by paying all taxes, interest and charges due the town was accepted and town treasurer executed and delivered to former owner quitclaim deed of town's rights, title, and interest in the realty, a cloud upon the title thus acquired might reasonably result from the absence of any action by town council approving, authorizing or ratifying execution and delivery of such deed.—*Swanson v. Certificate of redemption

Under statute permitting redemption of property which has been adjudicated to the state or any of its political subdivisions as long as title thereto is in the state or any of its political subdivisions, and requiring the register of the state land office or the governing authority of such political subdivision to execute and deliver a certificate of redemption, if lands have been adjudicated to a political subdivision and the transaction is with the political subdivision and all requisites and formalities of the act have been complied with, the proper authority of the political subdivision must execute and deliver the certificate of redemption.—*State ex rel. be a sufficient compliance with the law, at least in equity.⁷⁵

Where a lawful tender is made by the owner within the redemption period and is rejected, title to the property is nevertheless revested in the owner.⁷⁶

Action to redeem. Where the statutes do not furnish a complete and adequate remedy for the redemption of land from a municipal tax sale, a bill in equity to redeem will lie.⁷⁷ In a suit in equity to redeem land from a void municipal tax sale, complainant must do equity by payment to the purchaser or those standing in the purchaser's rights of all just claims for taxes which in equity and good conscience should be paid;⁷⁸ but in such a suit possession of the land at the time of its commencement is immaterial.⁷⁹ A statute limiting the period of redemption from municipal tax sales does not bar a bill in equity seeking redemption after the period prescribed where the tax sale was void.⁸⁰

The petition, bill, or complaint must allege all the facts necessary to warrant the granting of the relief prayed.⁸¹ Where a tender of payment is alleged, the complaint should show a tender of the amount due,⁸² including all items which are fixed and certain⁸³ and an offer to pay such sums as may be found due in respect of such items as are uncertain and subject to dispute.⁸⁴ Where the redemptioner admits that stated amounts had been paid for the property at the sale, but fails to allege in the petition or bill payment or tender of such amounts

75. Void tax deed

Where lot was sold for taxes, and defective certificate of purchase and void tax deed, which purchasers and city treasurer at first considered valid, were issued, owners could redeem by tendering amount of taxes directly to tax sale purchasers and by depositing such amount with clerk of court for benefit of purchasers refusing the tender, and were not required to pay such amount to city treasurer as required by ordinances relating to redemption prior to issuance of tax deed, and subsequent issuance of new certificate and deed did not destroy validity of such redemption.—Krahenbuhl v. Clay, 139 S.W.2d 970, 346 Mo. 111, 129 A.L.R. 1344.

Refusal of purchaser to accept tender

Redemption by mortgagee

Suits by mortgagees to redeem mortgaged property from foreclosed tax liens lie almost wholly within realm of sound judicial discretion.—Haynsworth v. Polk County Building & Loan Ass'n, 149 So. 615, 111 Fla. 451.

Effect of statute declaring sales not void

Code section, the caption of which was "tax sales not void because of irregularities," did not affect right of redemption from a municipal tax sale, where the section's implicit language contradicted the caption by recognizing that such tax sale or assessment might be invalidated in case of an ineffective court proceeding instituted under the statute to effectuate a tax sale.—Timms v. Scott, 27 So.2d 487, 248 Ala. 286.

fect of impeaching tax lien foreclosure decree entered over six months previously.—Haynsworth v. Polk County Building & Loan Ass'n, 149 So. 615, 111 Fla. 451.

82. Ala.—Kimble v. Fowler, 131 So. 440, 222 Ala. 178—Bains Bros. Inv. Co. v. Purdie, 60 So. 920, 180 Ala. 333.

Excuse for failure

When complainant alleges a demand on defendant purchaser for a statement of the amount necessary to redeem and a failure to comply with it, that fact does not excuse a failure to tender the amount of fixed charges known to complainant or ascertainable from the city records; neither does that fact excuse a tender of the lawful charges, in the absence of allegations that they were unknown to complainant and that he could not by due diligence ascertain them without a disclosure by the purchaser.—Kimble v. Fowler, 131 So. 440, 222 Ala. 178.

Failure to make deposit

In action to quiet title and for injunctive relief by purchaser at foreclosure sale and holder of subsequently executed trust deed against city tax deed purchaser, where purchaser alleged that he offered to redeem and reimburse and pay all sums disbursed on behalf of tax deed purchaser in the payment of taxes, interest, and penalties, and renewed offer in petition, failure to make deposit, if any, did not render petition demurrable.—Robinson v. Burton, Mo., 139 S.W.2d 942.

before filing the suit, the petition or bill is demurrable.⁸⁵

In a suit to redeem in which the city filed a cross bill claiming title by virtue of tax sales to it, the city on introducing the list of lands sold to it makes out, under permissive statute, a prima facie case that the sales to the city were valid,⁸⁶ and the party claiming that the city violated a statute regarding the fixing of the place for tax sales has the burden of proving such contention.⁸⁷

§ 2105. Right of Tax Purchaser to Redemption Money

Where property is redeemed from a municipal tax sale, the tax purchaser is entitled to the redemption money.

Where property is redeemed from a municipal tax

sale, the tax purchaser is entitled to the redemption money,⁸⁸ and may maintain an action for its recovery,⁸⁹ provided he brings it against the person who is under statutory obligation to pay it over to him.⁹⁰

Where, under the statute, the duty to pay rests on the city collector, an action for recovery of the money cannot be maintained against the city;⁹¹ but if the duty, by the terms of the statute, rests on the municipality, action may be maintained against the city;⁹² and where the statute provides that the city shall make payment to the tax purchaser or his assigns, a payment made to the tax purchaser after he has assigned the certificate to another is no defense to an action brought by the assignee against the city.⁹³

In the absence of constitutional or statutory prohibitions, courts may enjoin the collection of municipal taxes in proper cases;⁹⁴ and some statutes authorize suits to enjoin the collection of municipal taxes in certain cases.⁹⁵ A municipal corporation cannot by ordinance deprive the courts of this pow-er⁹⁶ or in any way limit or affect it by a contract with a taxpayer which the municipality had no statutory power to make.⁹⁷

(1) In General

An injunction will lie to restrain the collection of a municipal tax where the tax is illegal or the levy is excessive, fraudulently imposed, or otherwise invalid.

Where the legal remedy is shown to be inadequate, as considered infra subdivision b (2) of this section, or where the municipal corporation has refused the taxpayer an opportunity to avail himself of it,¹ in the absence of a statutory prohibition an injunction will issue to enjoin the collection of a municipal tax on the ground of its illegality,² as where the property is exempt,³ or otherwise not liable,⁴ or belongs to another person,⁵ or where the levy is excessive,⁶ fraudulently imposed,⁷ unjustly discriminatory,⁸ or otherwise invalid.⁹ An injunction has been granted where the officer was proceeding to collect the tax under an ordinance before it became operative by due promulgation.¹⁰

On the other hand, the collection of a tax properly levied will not be enjoined;¹¹ nor will an injunction ordinarily be granted at the suit of a taxpayer merely because of irregularity in the proceedings of the taxing officers,¹² especially where such irregularities may be corrected under order of the court in the same¹³ or other¹⁴ proceedings. An injunction will not be granted because of the failure to enforce the tax against other persons¹⁵ or because the land was so situated as not to receive the benefit of the taxes.¹⁶ A creditor of a municipality is not entitled to an injunction against the collection of his municipal taxes on the ground that the municipality is indebted to him, and has in its treasury a fund which could not be applied otherwise than by paying his debt, and which it refuses to pay until after the creditor discharges the claim against him for taxes.¹⁷ The enforcement of the collection of a tax by the officers of a municipality who are only de facto officers will not be enjoined;¹⁸ and the collection of city taxes by the officers duly authorized to enforce collection will not be restrained be-

Agreement to pay taxes on another's property

Where plaintiff had paid all taxes assessed by city against his property, he could enjoin the levy, on his property, of tax execution representing taxes on property conveyed to his wife, notwithstanding an agreement made with his wife and upheld by the court in a prior suit that he would pay the taxes thereon, as the wife alone could sue for breach of such agreement, and she was not a party to the action.—*Folds v. Arbitrariness

The fact that taxpayer was left in the dark as to how actual assessment by assessing officers of city was arrived at did not show arbitrariness on the part of the officers, so as to authorize intervention by a court of equity, since the determination of the weight to be given each factor is not arbitrariness except in the sense in which many honest and sensible judgments are so.—22 *Charlotte, Inc., v. What constitutes fraud

Fact that local assessing and tax collecting officers of city refused to accept recommended values made by state geologist as to valuations on property of mining corporation, and placed a valuation thereof above that recommended by geologist, did not show fraud which would entitle mining corporation to maintain suit to enjoin collection of taxes.—*Sunday Lake Iron Co. v. cause there exists no city treasurer to receive the taxes collected.¹⁹

Statutory grounds. Some statutes authorize actions to restrain the collection of municipal taxes on certain grounds²⁰ and have the effect of limiting actions for injunctive relief to the grounds prescribed.²¹

Property outside, or illegally annexed to, city. The collection of city taxes on property outside the boundaries or jurisdiction of the city may be restrained by injunction.²² In some jurisdictions it has been held that an owner of lands annexed to a city by charter or statute may enjoin the collection of city taxes on the lands on the ground of the unconstitutionality of the act.²³ Where land is wholly unsuited for municipal purposes and so conditioned and situated that it can receive no benefit by being incorporated into the municipality, so as to make taxation of such lands violate organic property rights, the collection of taxes on the land for municipal purposes may be enjoined where there is no adequate remedy at law and the land owner has not lost by waiver, acquiescence, or otherwise his right to resist the unlawful taxation of his land.²⁴ In other jurisdictions, however, it has been held that an owner of land cannot enjoin the collection of taxes levied by a city on the ground that the property taxed has been illegally annexed to the city,²⁵ especially where the taxpayer has for a long time acquiesced in the validity of the annexation proceedings.²⁶

Pendency of other suits. Where the validity of the tax is being contested in a pending suit, its collection will be enjoined until a decision is had;²⁷ and the pendency of another suit to restrain collection, brought against the same defendant and relating to the same tax, but instituted by another taxpayer in his individual capacity, is not ground for abating the present suit even though plaintiff in the present suit contributed toward the expense of conducting the other suit.²⁸

Partial invalidity. The collection of that portion of a municipal tax which is illegal may be enjoined;²⁹ and executions issued for a bulk sum covering taxes partly legal and partly illegal will be enjoined where no separation of the legal taxes from the illegal has been made.³⁰

Railroad aid tax. The collection of a railroad aid tax may be enjoined because of false representations as to the road.³¹ A tax to pay bonds issued for railroad aid may be enjoined where irregularly issued,³² but not where there is no valid legal defense to the payment of the bonds in the hands of the holders.³³ An injunction will not be granted against the collection of a tax to pay bonds ordered issued to one corporation but actually issued to its successor with which the old company had consolidated, where in all other respects the issue was regular;³⁴ and an injunction against collection of a tax in aid of a railroad serving a particular town will not be granted on the ground that since the vote for the tax a narrow gauge road has been constructed, in the absence of evidence that such construction is not fully adequate to meet the town's requirements.³⁵

(2) Existence of Other Remedies

An injunction will not lie to restrain the collection of a municipal tax where the taxpayer has an adequate remedy at law.

An injunction to restrain the collection of a municipal tax will be granted where complainant's right is clear and the injury imminent,³⁶ and the remedy at law inadequate for his protection.³⁷ The failure of a taxpayer to protest or appeal to the assessment board will not deprive him of injunctive relief to restrain the collection of municipal taxes on property outside the boundaries or jurisdiction of the city.³⁸

Conversely, an injunction will not be granted where there is an adequate remedy at law³⁹ or by proceedings before a board to review the assessment.⁴⁰

(3) Conduct of Complainant as Affecting Right

In a suit to restrain the collection of a municipal tax, the complainant must do equity, and in some jurisdictions he is required to pay, or to offer to pay, as much of the tax as is admitted to be legal.

In a suit to restrain the collection of a municipal tax, complainant is required to do equity.⁴¹ The unexplained failure of complainant to comply with his undertaking in a contract for exemption can be set up as a defense to his suit for an injunction based on the exemption.⁴²

Where it is asserted that no part of the alleged assessment is a legal tax, plaintiff is not required to pay, or tender payment of, any sum of money for taxes;⁴³ where plaintiff's claim that the whole tax is illegal is made in good faith and on plausible grounds, relief will not be refused merely because it was ultimately found that a part of the tax was legal.⁴⁴ Payment, or an offer to make payment, of as much of the tax as is admitted to be legal is, however, a condition precedent in some jurisdictions to an action to enjoin the collection of the illegal part;⁴⁵ and failure on the part of the taxpayer to offer payment of as much of the tax as is legally due is a defense in his suit to enjoin the collection of the illegal part of the tax⁴⁶ and the suit may be

Effect of subsequent payment

The failure to have paid, or to have made an offer to pay, is not cured by subsequent payment of the amount admitted to be due.—Clisby v. City of Macon, 13 S.E.2d 772, 191 Ga. 749.

Sufficiency of tender

An offer by a taxpayer to pay all ad valorem taxes due to a municipality after credits are allowed him on a city warrant is not sufficient to constitute a tender.—Kent v. Mayor and Council of Alamo, 18 S.E.2d 769, 193 Ga. 445.

Ascertainment of amount legally due

A petition by mutual building and loan association for injunction to restrain enforcement of tax execution by city, alleging that portion of execution represented taxes on capital of association loaned to members, which was exempt, and that remainder had not been paid, because association could not ascertain, and taxing authorities refused to ascertain, exact amount of taxes legally due, did not authorize injunction, in view of fact that city contended total dismissed.⁴⁷ However, it has also been held that, in a suit to enjoin the collection of an allegedly invalid part of city taxes, the failure to pay that portion of the tax which admittedly is due does not necessitate the dismissal of the suit, but the court may grant the relief which it deems proper, conditioned on payment of such taxes within a stipulated period.⁴⁸

Acquiescence, estoppel, and laches. Complainant may be denied an injunction to restrain the collection of a municipal tax by reason of laches or estoppel.⁴⁹ In the case of an injunction to restrain the collection of a railroad tax on the ground of false representations as to the road, estoppel by acquiescence in the execution of the work cannot be set up as a defense against complainant taxpayers where it appears that they served notice of their intention to contest the tax before any work had been done.⁵⁰

(2) Persons Entitled to Sue and Parties

The persons whose property interests are involved in the collection of a municipal tax are the proper parties plaintiff in an action brought to enjoin the collection.

The action may be brought by the taxpayer in his own name⁵⁷ or on behalf of all others similarly situated,⁵⁸ and it may be proper to allow all interested citizens other than the original plaintiff to be made parties plaintiff;⁵⁹ but taxpayers cannot join as plaintiffs where their interests are separate and distinct.⁶⁰ properly joined as parties defendant;⁶² but it has been held that the municipality itself need not be made a party by name where the mayor and members of the council are made defendants, and appear and answer in their official capacity as well as individuals,⁶³ unless the property rights of the municipality would be affected by the decree.⁶⁴

Persons to whom the taxes are to be ultimately paid are not necessary parties, where they have no vested interest in the tax levied.⁶⁵ If such interest exists, they are necessary parties,⁶⁶ but if they have not been joined the suit should be continued, rather than dismissed.⁶⁷

In an action to enjoin the collection of taxes to pay bonds, the bondholders are necessary parties,⁶⁸ unless the bonds are clearly shown to be void.⁶⁹

(3) Pleading

In a suit to restrain the collection of municipal taxes, the complaint must be definite and certain and must set forth the facts entitling the complainant to relief.

The general rules governing pleading in injunction suits and in suits to restrain the collection of taxes, as considered in the C.J.S. titles Injunctions §§ 181-188, and Taxation § 728, also 61 C.J. p. 1094 note 43 et seq, ordinarily apply in suits to enjoin the collection of municipal taxes.⁷⁰ The allegations of the complaint, petition, or bill must be definite and certain,⁷¹ and must set forth the facts entitling complainant to relief,⁷² and, if the ordinance on which the tax is based is involved, the bill must have a copy of the ordinance annexed thereto.⁷³ Mere informalities do not make the complaint demurrable.⁷⁴ Matters of defense need not be alleged in the bill or complaint.⁷⁵

A general demurrer on the ground that no cause of action is stated has been held not to be sufficient to raise the defense of a bar by a statute of limitations, although the petition shows on its face that the suit is barred by the statute of limitations, but defendant must take advantage of the statute of limitations by demurrer expressly invoking such defense.⁷⁶

Intervention

In corporation's suit to enjoin city officials from enforcing ad valorem taxation of plaintiff's industrial plant for payment of city bonds, issued before adoption of constitutional provision under which plaintiff claimed tax exemption, a holder of such bonds should have been allowed to intervene as defendant, since he had direct interest in performance of bond contract by means in force when contract was made, in absence of law making him secure by other adequate and certain means.—American Can Co. v. Payment of tax

(1) In action to enjoin collection of municipal taxes, it was not sufficient to allege that plaintiffs offered and stood ready to pay amount admitted to be due.—Clisby v. City of Macon, 13 S.E.2d 772, 191 Ga. 749.

(2) In action to enjoin sale of a city lot under municipal tax execution, where petition alleged that the execution had been satisfied by previous sale of other property to the city under same execution and for an amount sufficient to pay execution in full, and that plaintiff purchased lot in question relying on such facts, petition was not subject to demurrer on ground that it failed to allege that taxes had been paid by plaintiff or any one else, or that she had offered to pay them.—Elder v. Chambliss, 23 S.E.2d 176, 195 Ga. 148.

Temporary injunction

An ex parte temporary injunction restraining city from suing for and collecting taxes upon plaintiffs' property at an assessed valuation in excess of specified amount was required to be supported by pleaded affirmative facts as distinguished from mere legal conclusions.—City of Beaumont v. Night, Tex.Civ.App., 145 S.W.2d 222.

Amendment of pleadings. In a proper case the court may permit the filing of amended pleadings.⁷⁷

(4) Evidence

The general rules governing evidence in injunction suits and in suits to enjoin the collection of taxes ordinarily apply in suits to restrain the collection of municipal taxes.

The general rules governing evidence in suits for injunctions and in suits to enjoin the collection of taxes, as considered in the C.J.S. titles Injunctions §§ 189-192, and Taxation § 728, also 61 C.J. p 1097 note 95 et seq, usually are applicable in suits to restrain the collection of municipal taxes.⁷⁸ Accordingly, the burden is on the municipality to prove that a tax in excess of the statutory limit has been duly authorized,⁷⁹ although if the tax is for a purpose which may or may not be within the statutory restriction there is a presumption in favor of its legality.⁸⁰ A presumption that taxes have been paid, arising from laches in collecting them,⁸¹ may be overcome by a finding of commissioners of adjustment, having jurisdiction over the subject, that the taxes had not been paid.⁸²

The general rules are applicable with respect to the admissibility⁸³ and the weight and sufficiency⁸⁴ of the evidence. Suing the municipality in its corporate name on the ground that it had forfeited its charter before the taxes were levied is not an admission of the legal existence of the municipality.⁸⁵

of municipal taxes should not issue, the court may admit the minutes of the meeting of the city council to show that the ordinance levying the tax conformed with statutory requirements, and thereby complainant's right to a preliminary injunction may be disproved.⁸⁶

(5) Hearing, Decree, and Relief

The general rules governing the hearing, decree, and relief granted in injunction suits and in suits to restrain the collection of taxes ordinarily are applicable in suits to enjoin the collection of municipal taxes.

In suits to restrain the collection of municipal taxes the general rules regulating the hearing, decree, and relief given in injunction suits and in suits to enjoin the collection of taxes, as considered in the C.J.S. titles Injunctions §§ 199-223 and Taxation § 728, also 61 C.J. p 100 note 47 et seq, ordinarily are applicable.⁸⁷ The decree should not give complainant any relief further than that to which he is entitled.⁸⁸ A court of equity should not, on a bill for injunction to restrain the collection of taxes on application of one or more individual complainants who are parties to the suit, enjoin the collection of taxes as to noncomplaining property owners who are not parties to the suit.⁸⁹ An injunction restraining the collection of municipal taxes on land incorporated into the municipality which is unsuited for municipal purposes and which receives no benefit from its inclusion in the municipality does not change the boundary lines of the municipality, but it restrains the collection of municipal taxes while

New assessment or reassessment

(1) Decree restraining municipal taxing authorities from fixing any higher valuations than those federal court itself had established as basis for its injunction restraining collection of taxes originally assessed constituted error, since decree should have left taxing authorities free to make new assessment.—City of Detroit v. Detroit & Canada Tunnel Co., C.C.A.Mich., 92 F.2d 833.

(2) In suit to enjoin the collection of municipal taxes because of error of tax assessments as made on the tax rolls, no reassessments or actual corrections of assessments were necessary.—City of Fort Myers v. Heitman, 5 So.2d 410, 149 Fla. 203.

Excessive valuation

Court would not be authorized to set aside assessment made by city merely because the value of the property as found by jury was less than that found by the board of equalization, especially in view of jury's finding that the board did not act arbitrarily in fixing the value.—Exporters & Traders Compress & Warehouse Co. v. City of Marlin, Tex.Civ.App., 130 S.W.2d 860, error dismissed, judgment correct.

the land receives no benefit by reason of its inclusion within the municipality.⁹⁰

Temporary injunction. Where complainant secures an order to show cause, based on an original summons and defective complaint and an affidavit, why an injunction pendente lite restraining defendant municipality from collecting taxes should not be granted, and before the return day of the order to show cause complainant serves an amended complaint abandoning the theory of the original complaint and completely changing his theory of action, the court cannot consider the amended complaint in passing on the motion, but is required to deny the motion without prejudice to a new or further application.⁹¹ Relief obtainable only by final judgment may not be secured by a temporary injunction.⁹²

§ 2107. Action to Cancel Tax Levy

An action to cancel the tax levy may be brought in some jurisdictions to prevent the collection of a municipal tax.

In some jurisdictions an action to cancel the tax levy may be brought to prevent the collection of a municipal tax.⁹³ In such action it is not necessary to join the collector of taxes⁹⁴ or the person or corporation who, under the terms of the levy ordinance, is to receive the tax money when collected.⁹⁵ Where such action is brought under a statute providing for the determination of claims to real property and requiring that there shall be an apparent lien against the property to give the court jurisdiction, it cannot be maintained where it is established by the record that the tax lien has been discharged by lapse of time.⁹⁶

§ 2108. Affidavit of Illegality

Under some statutes and charter provisions, an affidavit of illegality may be filed to prevent the collection of an illegal municipal tax.

Some statutes and charter provisions afford a remedy for preventing the collection of illegal municipal taxes, by filing an affidavit of illegality with the officer to whom is intrusted the enforcement of an execution, and the duty is on such officer to return the execution with the affidavit of illegality to the proper court for trial.⁹⁷ If the officer fails or refuses to return the execution and affidavit to Relief against execution by way of affidavit of illegality generally see Executions §§ 147-150.

Summary execution see supra § 2098.

Construction of provisions

A town charter permitting an affidavit of illegality to be filed with respect to an execution issued by the town, and tried under the rules governing illegalities to justice court feri facias, is remedial in nature as affording taxpayers a simpler and less expensive remedy than a suit for injunction, and hence will be liberally and reasonably construed so as not to render provision meaningless or futile, or so as to defeat the purpose thereof.—Scott v. Mayor and Council of Mount Airy, 198 S.E. 693, 186 Ga. 652.

Persons entitled to remedy

Contest of municipal tax execution by affidavit of illegality is not available to claimant of land levied on, but only to defendant in execution.—Wilson v. City of Eatonton, 180 S.E. 227, 180 Ga. 598.

Court to which papers returned

(1) There being no general statute as to the filing and return of affidavits of illegality to tax executions, and no authority for the officer issuing such an execution to hear and determine the controversy, where a municipal charter authorizes an affidavit of illegality, the levying officer must return the papers to the proper court specified in the charter provision.—Scott v. Mayor and Council of Mount Airy, 198 S.E. 693, 186 Ga. 652.

(2) A town charter permitting an affidavit of illegality to be filed with respect to an execution issued by the town, and tried under the rules governing illegalities to justice court feri facias, does not require that the papers be returned for trial before the mayor and council, but requires that the justice court with territorial jurisdiction over the town shall be deemed to have jurisdiction of such affidavits of illegality at least to the maximum sum of justice-court jurisdiction under the constitution.—Scott v. Mayor and Council of Mount Airy, supra.

court for trial, the taxpayer is entitled to a writ of mandamus compelling him to do so;⁹⁸ but in such case, if the affidavit of illegality attacks only a part of the tax, and fails to allege facts from which it may be inferred what part of the tax is illegal, the officer's refusal to file the execution and affidavit in court is justified.⁹⁹ The remedy by affidavit of illegality is purely statutory,¹ and, where the statute granting it applies only to the arrest of executions based on judgments of courts, the remedy is not available in the case of an execution issued ex parte by a city clerk.²

§ 2109. Actions for Recovery of Property

Property seized for municipal taxes levied without authority may be replevied.

Where there is want of authority to levy municipal taxes, property seized for such taxes may be replevied,³ and previous payment of a similar tax will not defeat the action.⁴

§ 2110. Action for Damages

An action to recover damages for malicious prosecution may be maintained against municipal officers who are guilty of malicious acts in the collection of municipal taxes.

An action to recover damages for malicious prosecution may be maintained against municipal officers who are guilty of malicious acts in the collection of municipal taxes,⁵ but not in the absence of proof of malice.⁶ An action cannot be maintained against a municipality to recover damages for malicious prosecution of a suit to recover taxes in the absence of allegations of facts showing want of probable cause.⁷

7. TAX DEEDS AND LEASES

§ 2111. In General

The purchaser at a municipal tax sale is entitled to a tax deed at such time and under such conditions as are prescribed by statutory or charter provisions or by ordinance.

Provision is usually made by statute, charter, or ordinance for the execution and delivery of a tax deed to the purchaser at a municipal tax sale.⁸

When a tax deed is thus authorized, the purchaser at the tax sale is entitled to a deed at the proper time and after he has fulfilled the necessary conditions precedent.⁹

Sale to municipality

In view of fact that charter of the city expressly grants the city the power to make tax sales to itself, without prescribing any method by which it should authenticate such sales, city could use the same method by tax deed as in the case of individual purchasers.—Hawkins v. Where the purchaser at a tax sale is entitled to a tax deed, the city may be compelled through its offi-

Where the statute so provides, a tax lease for a term exceeding three years is equivalent to a conveyance.¹⁰

Necessity for deed. A municipal tax sale does not, of itself, ordinarily operate to transfer title to the purchaser, as considered supra § 2091, but usually the execution and delivery of a tax deed are necessary to vest title in the purchaser.¹¹ It has been held, however, under some provisions, that a statutory tax list made by the city clerk and filed in his office showing a purchase of the property by the city is sufficient to convey title to the city without a formal deed of conveyance to the city.¹²

Authority to execute and deliver. A municipal tax deed must be executed and delivered by the particular officer having authority under the statute or charter to do so,¹³ such as the city comptroller.¹⁴ In performing such duty the municipal officer acts in a governmental capacity.¹⁵

Conditions precedent. The purchaser at a municipal tax sale must comply with the statute, charter, or ordinance imposing conditions precedent to the issuance of a tax deed.¹⁶ Where the purchaser fails to comply with the conditions on which the title would vest, the deed is ineffectual and invalid.¹⁷ Thus under particular provisions as a condition precedent the purchaser must serve a notice to redeem or of an application for a deed,¹⁸ pay the city taxes due on the property for previous years,¹⁹ or pay the taxes assessed against the property after the assessment of the tax for which the property was sold,²⁰ or pay the taxes on the land accruing after the sale and prior to the delivery of the deed.²¹

Time of issuance; laches. A municipal tax deed may be issued at such time as is fixed by the statutes or charter provisions or ordinances²² and a deed issued prior to the expiration of the time prescribed is premature.²³ Thus under particular provisions the deed may not be issued until after the expiration of the period of redemption²⁴ or following the expiration of a certain number of days after service of a notice to redeem or of an application for a deed.²⁵ The charter provision governing the time of issuance of a tax deed in existence at the time of the tax sale controls rather than a charter provision enacted after the tax sale has been held and before application for the deed has been made.²⁶

A statute providing for a postponement of the purchaser's right to a deed for a stated term of years, if during the redemption period he allows the land to be again sold for taxes, applies to municipal, as well as to state and county, taxes.²⁷ The purchaser at the tax sale may lose his right to a deed by lapse of time during which other persons continue in open, adverse, and hostile possession.²⁸

28. Twenty years

Tax purchaser must apply for deed within twenty years to prevent Injunction against issuance of deed. In a proper case an injunction may be granted to restrain the execution or delivery of a municipal tax deed.²⁹ Thus an injunction may be granted where the tax sale is invalid.³⁰ In order to sustain such a suit it is not necessary that plaintiff be the owner of the fee, but ownership of any such interest in the property as would entitle a person to redeem from a valid tax sale is sufficient.³¹

The maxim that a person who seeks equity must do, or be prepared to do, equity applies in suits to restrain the issuance of a tax deed.³² Plaintiff in such a suit must tender to the tax purchaser or his transferee the amount paid to the city by the purchaser.³³ The failure to pay to the city undisputed taxes prior to bringing the suit does not bar the suit where the court may grant relief conditioned on payment of such taxes.³⁴

deed does not restrict the city in any manner in the collection of taxes justly owing.³⁵

Recording of deed. Some statutes require the recording of municipal tax deeds.³⁶ Such statutory provisions are mandatory³⁷ and in the absence of recording no title passes to the purchaser.³⁸ Under some statutes where the collector fails to record or file a tax deed he has a right to disclaim and release the title by an instrument under his hand and seal, duly recorded in the registry of deeds.³⁹

Prior proceedings as affecting deed. A municipal tax deed may be invalid because of defects in the proceedings preliminary to its execution and delivery.⁴⁰ A tax deed may be invalid where the tax assessment on which the deed is predicated is wholly unauthorized by any law, even though the invalidity does not appear on the face of the deed.⁴¹ A tax deed is invalid where the land sold is not the operation against him, if he offers no explanation for the delay, of a conclusive presumption that the owner has paid the tax and redeemed the land—Fields v. Kelly, 115 A. 580, 93 N.J.Eq. 380.

Status of owner as mortgagee

(1) Property owner was not barred from maintaining action to enjoin city officials from issuing deed pursuant to an illegal tax sale because his status at time of sale was that of mortgagee.—Home Building & Loan Ass'n v. City of Spartanburg, supra.

(2) Property owner was not barred from maintaining action to enjoin city officials from issuing tax deed pursuant to an illegal tax sale, because mortgagor from whom owner acquired title subsequent to tax sale made no complaint as to validity of taxes or expiration of tax lien prior to tax sale, since mortgagor could take no position to detriment of owner as real party affected thereby.—*Home Building & Loan Ass'n v. Time for recording

Statutory provision that amount of tax for which city collector purchases, and charges and expenses of levy and sale, and cost of recording deed of purchase, shall be allowed collector in settlement, provided he has caused deed to be duly recorded within a designated number of days after purchase and to be delivered to city treasurer, prescribes only time within which deed shall be recorded, rather than time for delivery of deed to treasurer.—City of Lowell v. Lowell Bldg. Corporation, 34 N.E.2d 618, 309 Mass. 165.

37. Mass.—Powers v. Radding, 113 N.E. 782, 225 Mass. 110.

38. Mass.—Powers v. Radding, supra.

Effect of recording disclaimer or release

Where registered land was sold by city collector for nonpayment of taxes and collector purchased the land for city for amount of the tax, the proper recording or filing of disclaimer and release of tax title would give effect to discharge of tax title which itself has become a sort of lien.—City of Quincy v. Wilson, 25 N.E.2d 369, 305 Mass. 229.

40. Colo.—Reagan v. Dick, 393 P. 333, 88 Colo. 122.

Delinquent list

A deed not based on a delinquent list made out, reported, approved, transmitted, and recorded in the office of the clerk of the county court pursuant to the laws and ordinances governing such proceedings is void.—Cooper v. Coleman, 116 S.E. 158, 92 W.Va. 300—44 C.J. p 1360 note 15.

Validity as determined by charter or general law

(1) Provisions of city charter regarding duty of tax assessor with reference to preparation and equalization of assessment roll took precedence over general law of state requiring original and two copies of assessment roll to be made, and hence tax deed which was issued by city for nonpayment of municipal taxes after assessment which did not conform to general law, but which was made according to requirements of charter, was valid.—Broward v. Garrison Inv. Corporation, 163 So. 212, 121 Fla. 45.

(2) Where the procedure in the sale of lands for taxes is specifically provided for by charter provisions which, although enacted subsequently to the sale, are a continuation of similar charter provisions enacted prior to the sale, the validity of the deed will depend on its conformity to charter requirements and not on the general statute, where the two are inconsistent.—Sheffels v. Tabert, 1 N.W. 156, 46 Wis. 439.

41. Fla.—Klich v. Miami Land & Development Co., 191 So. 41, 139 Fla. 794.

Irregularity

A tax deed, issued by town in full compliance with requirements of valid special charter act, will not be held invalid merely because of tax

subject to the tax,⁴² as where the land is situated outside the territorial limits of the municipality⁴³ or is exempt.⁴⁴ A tax deed is invalid where the return made by the municipal officer of the tax sale is fatally defective⁴⁵ or where the required notice to redeem or notice of application for the deed was not given.⁴⁶ Where a purchaser of tax leases from a city obtained a lease or leases covering all of the years for which the land had been bid in by the city, all of the leases bearing the same date, it is no objection to the validity thereof that, inasmuch as the city had bid in the land, it was not authorized to tax it thereafter.⁴⁷

In some jurisdictions defects or irregularities in the prior proceedings are rendered innocuous by curative statutes so as to validate municipal tax deeds.⁴⁸ General curative statutes sustaining tax deeds have been held to be applicable to municipal tax deeds as well as to deeds based on sales for state taxes.⁴⁹ However, a statute providing that no tax conveyance shall be held invalid except on proof that the property was not subject to taxation, or that the taxes had been paid before the sale, or that the property had been redeemed prior to the execution and delivery of the deed, has been held to be inapplicable to a municipal tax conveyance.⁵⁰

§ 2112. Form and Contents

A municipal tax deed must be in such form and contain such recitals as are required by statutory or charter provisions.

A municipal tax deed must comply, in so far as form and contents are concerned, with statutory or charter requirements,⁵¹ as, for example, with respect to the recitals therein concerning the exposure of the land for sale at a sale "publicly held,"⁵² a demand for payment of the tax,⁵³ the sale of lots separately and not as a single tract,⁵⁴ and the offering of all the delinquent property for sale before the sale of any of it to the city for taxes.⁵⁵

The deed should run in the name of the municipality, and not in the name of the state.⁵⁶

§ 2113. Operation and Effect

Where the contents of a municipal tax deed are prescribed by statute, the recitals of the deed are not covenants of warranty.

The general rules governing the construction, operation, and effect of tax deeds ordinarily are applicable to municipal tax deeds.⁵⁷ Where the statute provides what a municipal tax deed shall contain, the recitals therein are not covenants of warranty and do not estop the municipality issuing the conveyance.⁵⁸ A tax deed conveys no title where the tax is illegal and void⁵⁹ or where the proceedings do not conform to mandatory provisions of the commission's unintentional error in listing another than owner of lands conveyed as owner thereof on assessment roll, such error constituting merely immaterial irregularity, which will not vitiate subsequent proceedings.—Sovereign Finance Co. v. Beach, Fla., 38 So.2d 831.

statute;⁶⁰ but, where the attack on the title is delayed for a long period of years by those having actual knowledge or who are chargeable with knowledge of the facts serving as a basis for the attack, such persons are estopped to assert the invalidity of the title.⁶¹

Tax leases. There is no implied warranty of the validity of a tax lease on an agreement to assign it.⁶² Where tax leases are purchased from a city, the title of the purchaser thereunder vests from the date of the lease.⁶³

§ 2114. Tax Deeds as Evidence

Under various statutory or charter provisions or ordinances, municipal tax deeds have been made prima facie or conclusive evidence of the existence of certain facts.

In the absence of statutory or charter provisions to the contrary, a municipal tax deed is not sufficient evidence of the validity of the sale,⁶⁴ and the party relying thereon must show that there was a compliance with all the necessary prerequisites to a legal sale.⁶⁵

Prima facie evidence. By statute, charter provisions, or ordinances,⁶⁶ the tax deeds of some municipalities are prima facie evidence of the regularity of the proceedings,⁶⁷ or of the regularity of the proceedings before the sale,⁶⁸ or of the regularity of the proceedings and of all notices required by law for redemption,⁶⁹ and, under some statutes, are even presumptive evidence of possession in the grantee.⁷⁰ However, under some statutes declaring that tax deeds shall be prima facie evidence of the regularity of the assessment, equalization, and levy, it has been held that a deed is not prima facie evidence of the existence of the ordinance authorizing the tax;⁷¹ and a tax deed is not prima facie evidence of the levy of the tax under a statute making the deed prima facie evidence of several particular matters without including the levy.⁷² Statutes making state tax deeds prima facie evidence have been held not to apply to municipal tax deeds,⁷³ even though other statutes provide that municipal tax deeds "shall be received in like manner, and shall have the same force and effect, when recorded, as State tax deeds."⁷⁴

Statutes making municipal tax deeds prima facie evidence do not preclude proof of their invalidity.⁷⁵ The party claiming that a tax deed regular on its face is invalid has the burden of overcoming its prima facie validity by proof of matters showing or tending to show such fatal defects in the statutes or proceedings on which the tax deed was based as would vitiate the instrument.⁷⁶ The prima facie

Sufficient evidence

Where a purchaser at a sale for municipal taxes interposed a claim to the levy of another ieri facias on the same property, after showing the ordinances of the city authorizing the assessment, levy, and collection of taxes and the issuing of executions against defaulting taxpayers, the tax ieri facias and deed made thereunder could be introduced without laying further foundation therefor.—Verdery v. Dotterer, 69 Ga. 194.

66. Power of municipality

(1) A city in adopting a freeholders' charter may provide that a tax deed shall be prima facie evidence of the regularity of the tax proceedings.—Howe v. Barto, 41 P. 908, 12 Wash. 627.

Proceedings prior to sale

Under charter providing that the conveyance shall be conclusive evidence that the sale and subsequent proceedings were regular and presumptive evidence that all prior proceedings were regular and according to law, a party contesting the validity of a deed has the burden to establish the invalidity of proceedings prior to the sale.—Rhynus v. Shaffer, 39 N.Y.S.2d 599, 180 Misc. 116, affirmed 39 N.Y.S.2d 621, 265 App.Div. 961.

validity of the deed is not overcome by the fact that the land was unintentionally assessed in the name of a person other than the owner.⁷⁷

Where the deed on its face shows noncompliance with statutory or charter provisions in its execution, a statutory or charter provision making tax deeds prima facie evidence does not apply;⁷⁸ and in such case, where the tax deed shows on its face that the tax sale was not made on the day regularly fixed, the person claiming under the deed has the burden of proving that the sale

was postponed.⁷⁹

Conclusive evidence. Statutes and charter provisions sometimes make the tax deed conclusive evidence of the existence of some facts,⁸⁰ such as the fact that the tax sale and proceedings subsequent thereto were regular.⁸¹ However, a charter provision that a tax deed shall be conclusive evidence that the sale was conducted in the manner required by law does not relieve the purchaser from the necessity of proving the existence of a law regulating the sale.⁸²

8. PENALTIES AND FORFEITURES

§ 2115. Penalties

- a. In general
- b. Statutory provisions
- c. Remission or abatement
- d. Liability, collection, and recovery back
- e. Amount recoverable

a. In General

The imposition of a penalty for delinquency in the payment of municipal taxes is employed to enforce their collection and to induce promptness in payment. It has been held that a municipal corporation cannot prescribe a penalty unless express authority is conferred by statutory or charter provision.

The imposition of a penalty for delinquency in the payment of municipal taxes is a measure employed to enforce their collection⁸³ as well as to induce prompt payment and to discourage delay.⁸⁴

The penalty pertains to the remedy and is no part of the tax when it is levied,⁸⁵ although, as considered infra subdivision d of this section and infra § 2118, when incurred it may become a part of the tax as to collection and disposition.

A penalty is to be distinguished from other matters,⁸⁶ such as a commission for collecting the tax⁸⁷ and interest.⁸⁸

Power to impose penalty. In the absence of express statutory or charter authority, it has been held that a municipal corporation cannot prescribe a penalty for neglect to pay taxes promptly,⁸⁹ especially where a statute granting the power is superseded by another statute omitting all reference to it,⁹⁰ and that, even where the charter of another city has been applied to it by the legislature, "so far as applicable," the court will not look to such adopted charter to see whether a penalty can be imposed.⁹¹ On the other hand, it has also been held that the power may be implied,⁹² as where the city is granted power to prescribe by ordinance the method of enforcement.⁹³

Under various statutes, charters, and ordinances a penalty is imposed for the nonpayment of an overdue municipal tax.

By statute, charter, or ordinance a penalty may be imposed for the nonpayment of an overdue municipal tax,⁹⁴ and the recovery will follow the law applicable to state and county taxes where the statute so stipulates.⁹⁵ The enactment of an ordinance fixing a penalty is an enactment legislative in character and governmental in function.⁹⁶ A statute authorizing a city council to impose a tax by ordinance published a certain number of days and authorizing the council to provide for the payment of a penalty permits the council to impose a penalty by whatever method it desires without any publication.⁹⁷ Where a municipal charter provides for a penalty on taxes not paid within a designated time, its terms are mandatory and self-operative and a similar provision in an annual tax ordinance is unnecessary.⁹⁸ Where the statute empowers the municipality to impose a penalty for nonpayment of taxes, an ordinance providing that any person failing to make payment of taxes shall be subject to a penalty as provided by law does not prescribe a penalty.⁹⁹

Effect of receivership

City was entitled to penalties which had accrued on realty which was sold in execution in foreclosure proceeding after federal court which had appointed receiver for real owner had relinquished its control, as against contention that under the federal rule penalties for nonpayment of taxes were not allowable on claims against funds in hands of receivers and that such rule was applicable.—Pennsylvania Co. for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities v. Construction, operation, and effect. Provisions authorizing the imposition of penalties are not retroactive and should not be given a retroactive construction.¹ An ordinance is not invalid as retroactive where it does not attempt to impose a penalty for the nonpayment of taxes which were delinquent prior to its passage.² An ordinance fixing a penalty cannot affect the legality of a tax sale which has already taken place.³

Repeal. The right to collect a penalty ceases when the statute authorizing the penalty is repealed.⁴ The repeal of a statute authorizing penalties will not affect penalties already incurred where a general statute so provides.⁵

Penalties imposed for the failure to pay municipal taxes may be remitted by the authority having the power to affix them, and some statutes provide for the abatement of penalties under certain circumstances.

The power to remit penalties for failure to pay municipal taxes is implied from the power to affix them,⁶ and a municipal council having power to affix may remit as against the objection of the collector of taxes.⁷ A board of commissioners having power to remit penalties is not liable for the wrongful use of the power by one of its members in the absence of evidence of authorization or ratification.⁸ Some statutes have provided that penalties imposed on delinquent city taxpayers for designated years shall be abated by the council of the city, or abated without further action by the local authorities, if certain conditions are complied with, such as, the payment of the delinquent taxes in installments and the payment of current taxes before they become delinquent.⁹ In order to be entitled to an abatement under the statute there must be a proper payment of the taxes required to be paid.¹⁰ If the conditions imposed by the statute are not fulfilled, the abated penalties are revived.¹¹

d. Liability, Collection, and Recovery Back

Liability for penalties on a municipal tax accrues when the tax becomes delinquent and the penalties ordinarily may be collected as a part of the tax.

Under some provisions a penalty for failure to pay a municipal tax may be collected only from the person owing the tax,¹² and not from a purchaser from the person who owned the land at the time the taxes were assessed.¹³ The taxpayer is not liable for penalties before the tax becomes delinquent.¹⁴ A delay in filing the assessment roll, resulting in a postponement of the due date, for payment of taxes, operates as a postponement of the time when penalties can be imposed.¹⁵ Refusal to pay a tax levied under an invalid ordinance does not subject the taxpayer to liability for penalties,¹⁶ but if the city later corrects and vitalizes the levying ordinance, and then makes a demand for a payment of the tax and is refused, the taxpayer becomes liable for the penalty.¹⁷

Purpose of statute

(1) Primary purpose of statute is to encourage prompt payment not only of back taxes but also of current taxes, the advantage or benefit to taxpayer being only incidental to main object.—Braun, for Use of Fisher, now to Use of Louik, v. De Rosa, 194 A. 514, 128 Pa.Super. 318.

(2) Primary purpose is to obtain payment of taxes long delinquent, without necessity of sale of property by political subdivision.—Speck v. Phillips, 51 A.2d 399, 160 Pa.Super. 365.

Retrospective operation

Local tax collection law operates retroactively to relieve taxpayer of penalty imposed by general borough act on persons failing to pay taxes charged against them in tax duplicate.—Speck v. Phillips, supra.

Persons entitled to benefit of statute

(1) A mortgagee can take advantage of tax abatement statutes by paying taxes before sheriff's sale and having taxes so paid included in his judgment, and mortgagee is in no sense a volunteer.—Keystone State Building & Loan Ass'n v. Sabo, 14 A.2d 831, 140 Pa.Super. 599.—Braun, for Use of Fisher, now to Use of Louik, v. De Rosa, 194 A. 514, 128 Pa.Super. 318.

(2) Under a tax abatement act so providing, the benefits of the act are extended to a mortgagee, but this means a mortgagee who has an existing mortgage on realty, and not a person whose lien has been discharged by a sheriff's sale and whose claim is transferred to the fund in sheriff's hands.—Keystone State Building & Loan Ass'n v. Sabo, supra.

When taxes are delinquent

(1) The term "delinquent taxes" as used in statute providing for abatement under certain circumstances of penalties imposed on delinquent city taxes in cities of first class means taxes not paid during current year following their assessment and thereafter registered as delinquent, and does not include taxes on which penalties were imposed during current year in order to encourage promptness in their payment.—Pennsylvania Co. for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities v. Zussman, 186 A. 378, 122 Pa.Super. 325.

(2) Under a delinquent tax abatement act, abating penalties and interest on delinquent realty taxes and providing that taxes shall be deemed delinquent "when a penalty attaches to the tax," "delinquent taxes" do not include taxes to which a penalty has been added by a Philadelphia ordinance, or by statute.—Land Title Bank & Trust Co. v. Marshall, 34 A.2d 71, 348 Pa. 105.

Accrual of penalties after transfer of title

Where owner of condemned property failed to make application for payment of city taxes which had become a lien on the property before it was acquired by the United States immediately after vesting of title in United States, penalties on such taxes continued to accrue after title to the property vested in the government until payment of such taxes.—*U. 14. Delinquency during pendency of tax appeal

Under statutes providing for penalties on delinquent municipal tax payments, legislature did not intend that taxpayers were to be considered delinquent during pendency of appeal to court from assessment in which substantial reductions were obtained, especially in view of earlier statute allowing appeals from excessive assessments but lacking any provision for a refund.—Phlipps v. Kirk, 5 A.2d 143, 333 Pa. 478.

Municipal income tax

Under income tax ordinance imposing penalty for any failure of taxpayer to pay tax due by him, penalty would not be exacted from taxpayer who in good faith resisted what he considered to be an unjust assessment.—Dole v. City of Philadelphia, 11 A.2d 163, 337 Pa. 375, opinion supplemented 11 A.2d 767, 337 Pa. 375.

Payment under protest

Where taxpayer paid taxes under protest and thereafter commenced proceedings to review tax valuation of city board of equalization, payment made by taxpayer was not to be regarded as voluntarily made, but as a tender to extent that board's valuation or that of taxpayer might be sustained, thus releasing taxpayer from penalties.—Board of Equalization of City of Fort Worth v. McDonald, 129 S.W.2d 1135, 133 Tex. 521.

Collection. The penalty ordinarily is collectable as part of the tax¹⁸ and in the same manner as the tax.¹⁹ Under the statutes in the particular jurisdictions the penalty may be enforced in an action to collect the delinquent tax and penalty²⁰ or a suit in rem to enforce the lien.²¹

Recovery back. A penalty paid under protest, to prevent a seizure, may be recovered back by the taxpayer.²²

e. Amount Recoverable

A penalty for failure to pay a municipal tax within the time required may be imposed in such amount as is fixed or authorized by statutory or charter provision or by ordinance.

A penalty for failure to pay a municipal tax within the time required may be imposed in such amount as is fixed or authorized by statutory or charter provision or by ordinance.²³ In the absence of constitutional or statutory restrictions, a municipality having power to affix penalties may provide for the payment of penalties in excess of those imposed for failure to pay state taxes.²⁴ Unless expressly so provided, the penal rate of interest does not continue after judgment,²⁵ although there is also authority to the contrary.²⁶

§ 2116. Forfeiture of Property Delinquent

The forfeiture of property for failure to pay taxes is considered in the C.J.S. title Taxation §§ 1037-1053, also 61 C.J. p 1497 note 21 et seq. Forfeitures generally are discussed in Forfeitures § 1 et seq.

Income from parking meters

(1) A city's operation of parking meters was not a public utility within statutes relating to the budgeting of, and segregation of, funds derived from a publicly owned or operated utility, and was not a dedicated revenue within budget law, but was a general revenue of the municipality, notwithstanding such income was applicable to the general function of regulating and controlling traffic and installing and operating the meters.

and ordinances such income may or must be paid into the municipality's general fund in the absence of circumstances warranting a different disposition thereof,⁴² while under others it constitutes a special fund.⁴³ The control of revenues arising from the operation of public service plants owned by the municipality is vested in the board intrusted with the management of the plant without any advisory authority in the city council, where the statute so provides.⁴⁴

Under some statutes the municipality may transfer to its general fund or use for general municipal purposes the revenues or net profits of the utility,⁴⁵ and need not first apply any surplus to the interest and sinking fund for bonds issued for the construction of the utility,⁴⁶ but under other statutes the revenues or net profits derived from the operation of a municipally owned utility may not be used to pay the general expenses of the city, or be transferred to the general fund of the municipality.⁴⁷

—Board of Com'rs of City of Newark v. Local Government Bd. of N. J., 45 A.2d 139, 133 N.J.Law 513.

(2) Parking meter revenues accruing to municipalities are special charges with respect to the operation of motor vehicles and are within the constitutional provision that excess revenue accruing to the state from such special charges must be used for highway purposes; and the constitutional provision would not be violated by the use of parking meter revenues to maintain streets, including streets on which meters are not located, and to acquire, construct, and maintain public parking areas, thereby removing parked vehicles from the highways.—Opinion of the Justices, 51 A.2d 836, 94 N.H. 501.

Purpose of separate financial body

The purpose of legislature in requiring a city utility commission to be appointed to manage and control electric and water plans constructed from funds derived from sale of revenue bonds was to place revenues derived from operation of plants under an authority which was not officially concerned with other financial problems of city and which would not be tempted to divert the revenues to defray expenses of general fund at expense of sinking fund and surpluses required to be maintained by statute.—King v. Payment of bonds for other utilities

(1) A city has power to pledge or apply surplus net revenue from operation of either its waterworks system or sewer system to payment of revenue bonds issued by it for improvements to the other system.—City of Harrison v. Braswell, 194 S.W.2d 12, 209 Ark. 1094.

(2) In an earlier case, it was held that there was nothing in either statute which authorized any part of revenues derived from one system to be devoted and appropriated to pay costs of construction or operation of the other.—Mathers v. Moss, 151 S.W.2d 660, 202 Ark. 554.

Tax equivalents

City of fourth class has right to require its electric board in operation of municipal waterworks, which were acquired from a private utility corporation, to pay to city reasonable tax equivalents and charge such amounts as operating expenses in computation of net earnings of such waterworks.—Electric Plant Bd. of City of Mayfield v. City of Mayfield, 185 S.W.2d 411, 299 Ky. 375.

If operation of municipal plant requires levying of taxes, there can be no surplus earnings within statute authorizing construction of building for use of other city departments from surplus earnings.—Saltzman v. City of Council Bluffs, 243 N.W. 161, 214 Iowa 1033.

Rates sufficient to pay bonds

A legislative intent to create a trust fund out of water rents may not be inferred from statutory provisions directing that the rate of tax shall be fixed with a view to providing sufficient funds for the payment of bonds, and such statute does not preclude the use of water rents for other purposes.—Sinclair v. Brightman, 84 N.E. 453, 198 Mass. 243.

Water rents

(1) City budget act did not im-

A statute forbidding the use of the income from a municipally owned utility for any other purpose until the debt for which it is pledged is paid does not forbid the issuance of bonds to retire that debt and to extend and improve the utility.⁴⁸ It is generally held that the maintenance and operating expenses of a municipally owned utility may be paid from its revenues⁴⁹ and are a first charge thereon.⁵⁰

Taxes in arrears. A statute authorizing the investment of money received from the payment of taxes in arrears in revenue bonds theretofore issued by the city and "in any other bonds of the city" authorizes an investment in bonds thereafter to be issued by the city.⁵¹

Interest, fines, penalties, and forfeitures. In the absence of a statute to the contrary, a penalty when collected forms no separate part of the municipal revenue, but is included with the tax and becomes a part of the special fund into which the tax itself is payable.⁵² However, under some constitutional or statutory provisions, applicable to certain municipalities or classes thereof, fines, penalties, and interest have been held to be payable into the general funds of the city⁵³ or into special funds designated in the constitution or statute.⁵⁴ A statute regulating pliedly repeal the provisions of the city charter of a city that water rents shall be used exclusively for water supply.—People ex rel. Schlager v. Brand, 59 N.E.2d 664, 389 Ill. 298.

(2) Taxpayer could not complain of municipality's application of funds from water department to reduction of its taxes for general administration and other legitimate corporate purposes.—People ex rel. Toman v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 37 N.E.2d 169, 377 Ill. 547.

County excise board

Transfer of estimated profits from operation of municipally owned utility to sinking fund is beyond authority of county excise board.—City of Yale v. Excise Board of Payne County, 10 P.2d 403, 156 Okl. 192.

(2) Statute authorizing taxing authority of any political subdivision to transfer money from one fund to another fund related solely to transfer of funds derived from taxation and did not authorize common pleas court or state tax commission to transfer municipal waterworks funds to general revenue fund of municipality.—City of Lakewood v. Rees, 8 N.E.2d 250, 132 Ohio St. 399.—Union Ice Corporation v. City of Niles, 13 Ohio Supp. 115.

(3) Revenues derived from municipal waterworks could not be transferred to general revenue fund of municipality and used to meet general governmental expenses; notwithstanding city purchased its water and owned and operated only water distributing system.—City of Lakewood v. Rees, supra.

(4) On compliance with conditions precedent required by statute, city had power, under statute authorizing taxing authority of any political subdivision to transfer any public funds under its supervision, to transfer surplus funds from its electric light and power department in view of omission from statutes governing transfer of funds of provision that there should be no such transfer except among funds raised by taxation.—*City of Niles v. Discretion of municipal authorities

When municipality owns and operates public utility, it is within discretion of municipal authorities to charge expenses reasonably attributable to such operation against income or revenue produced thereby.—City of Mobile v. Marx & Co., C.C.A. Ala., 75 F.2d 569.

General fund or special revenues

A municipal water department may pay its operating expenses from appropriations made as a part of the general fund budget of the city, or may pay operating expenses from cash receipts of the department.—City of Tulsa v. Langley, 168 P.2d 116, 196 Okl. 680.

transfer so much money from general fund to electric light fund as might be necessary for maintenance, enlargement, improvement, extension, operation, and management of electric light department of city.—Union Ice Corporation v. City of Niles, 13 Ohio Supp. 115.

Santaquin City*, 28 P.2d 161, 83 Utah 321.

(3) Municipality was held not required to apply any portion of waterworks collections to waterworks bonds, in the absence of statute, municipal obligation, or provision in bonds requiring it.—Travaille v. City of Sioux Falls, 240 N.W. 336, 59 S.D. 391.

§ 2119. Purpose of Tax and Obligations of City Connected Therewith

As a general rule, a tax for a special purpose or a special tax must be paid into a special fund for that purpose and a tax levied for one purpose may not be applied or used for a different purpose.

Subject to constitutional limitations,⁵⁶ municipal revenues raised by taxation, although levied for specific public purposes, are so far subject to the legislative will that by it they may be applied to other uses of the municipality.⁵⁷ As a general rule, however, a tax for a special purpose or a special tax must be paid into a special fund for that purpose,⁵⁸ and a tax levied for one purpose may not be applied to, or used for, another purpose,⁵⁹ nor may it be diverted to the general fund and expended for general purposes.⁶⁰ The power and duty of a municipal corporation to apply taxes to the particular purpose for which they were raised are not affected by the merger into a judgment of a claim properly payable out of such tax,⁶¹ by the Sale of utility

The sale by a city to a utilities company of its light and water systems for part cash and balance on terms was not void on ground that under terms the city was using funds raised by taxation for benefit of private company.—City of Clovis v. Southwestern Public Service Co., 161 P.2d 878, 49 N.M. 270, 161 A.L.R. 504.

Where property is adjudicated to a municipality for nonpayment of a bond tax, the surplus derived from its sale or the income from its rental goes to the general fund and not to the special fund for payment of the bonds.—State ex rel. McGregor v. Diamond, La.App., 167 So. 760.

Pledge of revenue

An express pledge of revenues to be derived by city from particular source creates a lien on the specific revenues designated, precluding lawful appropriation of such revenues to any other governmental function that will be prejudicial to payment of debt for which pledge is given.—State v. City of Lakeland, 16 So.2d 924, 154 Fla. 137.

What constitutes unlawful diversion

(1) City's contract for construction of municipal electric plant incorporating by reference specifications which provided that revenue from town street lights would be available to municipal plant did not provide for unlawful diversion of tax levy for street lighting under contract with electric company.—Northwestern Light & Power Co. v. Town of Milford, Iowa, C.C.A.Iowa, 82 F. 2d 45, 1023.

(2) City's pledge of surplus revenues from either its waterworks or sewer system to pay the other system's revenue bonds is not unlawful diversion of funds.—City of Harrison v. Braswell, 194 S.W.2d 12, 209 Ark. 1094.

(3) Appropriations in city budget from five of bond funds of an amount owed to the water fund and the levy of taxes to meet that obligation did not violate provision of municipal bond act that taxes levied for bond interest and sinking funds should not be used for any other purpose, where appropriation merely provided for repayment of sums advanced from water fund to bond funds and there was nothing to show that advances were for any purpose other than payment of bond principal and interest.—Rancho Santa Anita v. fact that the tax is not sufficient in amount to meet the entire requirements of the purpose for which the levy was made,⁶² or by the fact that the tax was not legally collectable, where it has notwithstanding been paid over to the city by way of compromise and the taxpayer is not entitled to recover it back;⁶³ but where the fund is derived from an illegal levy it may not be used for the purpose for which it was levied.⁶⁴

A municipality may not, by an attempted subdivision and reapportionment of the funds collected, make a part of them unavailable for the purpose for which they were raised.⁶⁵ No obligation attaches to the municipality, however, to make good to a special fund taxes levied therefor which have not been paid over to the city and which are not legally collectable.⁶⁶ Where the city cannot apply the tax to the purpose for which it was raised, and the taxpayer cannot recover it back, it goes to the general fund.⁶⁷

by express statutory provision or by the act of a municipal council or board, duly authorized, to a specific municipal object, may not be diverted by the municipality either directly or indirectly to any other purpose;⁶⁸ whenever diversion is threatened it may be enjoined;⁶⁹ at the instance of those entitled to the fund;⁷⁰ and no misapplication of a special fund can hinder or defeat the right of creditors to be paid therefrom.⁷¹ However, this rule is limited to money lawfully paid into the special fund,⁷² and where a special fund is established merely as a matter of administrative convenience and is not dedicated to a particular object, it may be used for any lawful municipal purpose.⁷³ A municipality having the custody and disposition of a special fund has a discretion in its expenditure only within the requirements and provisions of law.⁷⁴

Disposition of surplus of a tax or fund depends on charter or statutory provisions,⁷⁵ it being variously held proper or necessary, under different provisions, for the surplus to be carried over to the

Dedicated revenue

The dedication of municipal revenues is an affirmative legislative act which will not be presumed but must be plainly indicated in the legislative expression; fact that exactions under municipal police regulations are confined to cost of service involved does not transform such exactions into dedicated revenue within the budget law.—Board of Com'rs of City of Newark v. same fund for the next year, provided it does not result in the fund exceeding its legal limit;⁷⁶ to be transferred to the general fund;⁷⁷ to be applied to the payment of claims payable out of the general fund;⁷⁸ to be used for general city purposes,⁷⁹ or used to supply the deficiency in any other fund.⁸⁰ A transfer of the surplus in one fund to another fund has been held proper,⁸¹ it being expressly authorized by some statutes or charters;⁸² but money may not be transferred from one fund to another in violation of a charter or statutory prohibition⁸³ unless the statute is unconstitutional,⁸⁴ and a deduction cannot be made from one fund for the purpose of reimbursing another fund for money wrongfully and illegally paid from the latter.⁸⁵

Under some statutes a transfer of funds from the general fund may not be made where the general fund does not have a surplus.⁸⁶ A fund created by an ordinance complying with statutory requirements is not necessarily invalid because it is composed of money transferred from another related fund which is merely a collection fund.⁸⁷ If there is a right to transfer money from one fund to another, there is likewise a right to retransfer it, in a proper case, to the fund from which it was taken.⁸⁸ It has been held that an appropriation is necessary for the transfer of money from the general to a special fund.⁸⁹

a special fund for the benefit of the general fund⁹¹ or another special fund.⁹² In some states, cities of a certain class,⁹³ but not those of another class,⁹⁴ are authorized by statute to borrow from one fund for the benefit of another fund in certain cases.

Current expense fund. Some statutes or charters provide that the current expense fund of a municipality shall be made up of all money paid into the treasury which is not assigned or set apart to some other specially created fund.⁹⁵ A current expense fund may be used, under some circumstances, to pay the expenses of a particular department,⁹⁶ but not to pay the cost of constructing a city hall⁹⁷ or, where it is inadequate to pay current expenses, to pay other indebtedness.⁹⁸

A contingent fund may be expended for any legitimate municipal purpose,⁹⁹ such as advertising,¹ reimbursing an official for expenses incurred in securing legislation,² and paying accountants for auditing the city's books.³

Refund. Some statutes provide that, where the funds raised for an improvement exceed the total cost and expense thereof, the excess shall, on demand, be refunded to the property owners who made payments into the fund,⁴ without regard to any previous bar under the statute of limitations.⁵

§ 2120. Control of Funds and Payment to Officer or Department Entitled

Ordinarily municipal taxes and revenues are payable to the city treasurer, but may, by statute, be directed to be paid to others.

Ordinarily municipal taxes and revenues are payable to the city treasurer,⁶ but may, by statute, be directed to be paid over to others.⁷ When any municipal fund is not specially disposed of by law, it is subject, within lawful limits, to the control of the fiscal officers of the municipality.⁸ The comptroller may not justify his refusal to pay over the funds collected to the officer or department entitled to them under the statute on the ground that he feared their misappropriation.⁹

§ 2121. Rights and Remedies of Creditors

A judgment creditor has been held entitled to have the surplus revenues of a municipal corporation over and above its ordinary current expenses applied in payment of his judgment.

A judgment creditor has been held entitled to have the surplus revenues of a municipal corporation over and above its ordinary current expenses applied in payment of his judgment.¹⁰ Where all current expenses for prior years have been paid, the amounts realized from delinquent taxes for that period are surplus and should be applied in payment of judgment debts.¹¹ As against

Where account of power and light company with city was being worked out in accordance with parties' plan, it was not a current account, but one of which payment was postponed, and hence did not affect city's judgment creditor's right to payment on judgment of amount of delinquent taxes exceeding paid current obligations incident to operation of city's government for prior years.—City of McAllen v. 11. Tex.—City of McAllen v. Exchange Nat. Bank of Tulsa, Okl., supra.

Future delinquencies

A city's judgment creditor is not entitled to payment of amount of taxes to become delinquent in future until satisfaction of judgment, as a judgment creditor whose judgment is payable only from the surplus of current revenues above current expenses, a municipal corporation is without right to use its current revenues for the erection of public buildings.¹² A judgment creditor whose claims are payable out of a special tax is entitled to require the municipal corporation to account for the amount of such tax collected by it for such fund, where the proper board declines to make or compel such an accounting.¹³

The fact that a tax is raised for a particular purpose does not operate to change the ordinary debt relation existing between the municipality and its creditors into a trust relation so as to prevent the application of the statute of limitations to the creditor's claim.¹⁴ If the municipality fails to pay the taxes collected to the board entitled thereto, it is chargeable with such amount and interest thereon in a suit by judgment creditors of the board.¹⁵

interest, however, not commencing to run until after the failure of the municipality to pay such sums when required so to do¹⁶ or its failure to account on demand.¹⁷

Where the tax is levied to meet certain contract expenses, the municipality is bound to remit whatever has been collected to the person to whom the money is due under the contract,¹⁸ and, in an action to compel the remittance, the municipality cannot set up in defense an irregularity in the assessment or levy.¹⁹ Where a judgment creditor, relying on the agreement of the municipality to pay its judgment creditors in a certain order out of its judgment fund, failed to secure an execution within the time allowed by the statute for its issue, the municipality is estopped to set up such failure in an action by the creditor to compel the municipality to recognize the validity of his claim.²⁰

E. RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF TAXPAYERS

1. IN GENERAL

§ 2122. In General

Ordinarily, taxpayers' actions based on matters which prejudice the rights of taxpayers generally will lie even in the absence of statute; but in some jurisdictions the right to maintain such an action depends on statutory authorization.

In most jurisdictions the so-called taxpayers' actions, that is, actions by taxpayers as such in their own names based on matters which prejudice the rights of taxpayers generally, will lie²¹ even in the absence of statute;²² but in other jurisdictions the right of taxpayers to maintain a suit in equity in such cases depends on statutory authorization.²³ Taxpayers as such cannot sue in respect of acts of the municipal authorities, although unauthorized or illegal, which do not affect their rights, or injure them, as taxpayers, as discussed infra §§ 2127,

2143, and it has usually been held that taxpayers cannot sue to redress public wrongs by which they are affected only as members of the public generally,²⁴ although expressions are found in some of the cases to the effect that, in order to sue, plaintiff need not sustain, or be threatened with, any injury peculiar to himself as distinguished from the public generally.²⁵ Taxpayers cannot assume to act on behalf of the municipality unless its duly constituted authorities wrongfully refuse to do so, as discussed infra §§ 2138, 2158. A penalty for the violation of a statute cannot be imposed in a taxpayer's action;²⁶ nor can a taxpayer, where money of a municipality has wrongfully been paid out, sue the municipality in assumpsit to recover an amount proportionate to the taxes paid by him.²⁷

In general, statutes conferring or regulating the right of taxpayers to sue in equity give the taxpayer no greater rights than those of the municipal corporation concerned; such statutes are remedial and should be liberally construed, but they cannot be extended to cover acts not within their purview.

In some jurisdictions the right of taxpayers to sue in equity in certain cases has expressly been conferred by constitutional or statutory provisions;²⁸ and in other jurisdictions in which the right to sue does not depend on statute, as discussed supra § 2123, statutes recognizing or regulating the right have been enacted,²⁹ which latter statutes, however, are not to be construed as a limitation on the remedy in cases not within the statutes.³⁰

It has been stated generally that the purpose of the statutes is to protect the rights of the municipality,³¹ but some statutes at least have for their ultimate purpose the protection of the taxpayers.³² Some statutes do not confer on taxpayers the power to bring actions which the municipal authorities have no power to bring,³³ and in general the rights of taxpayers are no greater than those of the municipality concerned.³⁴ These statutes are remedial³⁵ and are given a liberal construction in order to accomplish their purpose,³⁶ but cannot be ex-

§ 2124. Intervening in Proceedings Affecting Municipality or Municipal Officers

While a mere taxpayer has no right to intervene in an action to which a municipal corporation is a party, it has been held that a taxpayer may intervene to protect a right of the municipality.

While it has been held that a person, merely because he is a taxpayer, has no such interest in litigation to which a municipal corporation is a party as will entitle him to intervene in such litigation,³⁸ it has also been held that, under certain circumstances, particularly under a permissive statute, a taxpayer may intervene in a pending proceeding to protect a right of the municipality without instituting a separate action,³⁹ or to preserve rights vested in him as a taxpayer.⁴⁰ A taxpayer may be permitted to intervene where the proper municipal officers fail or refuse to perform their duty⁴¹ or are not proceeding in good faith or with due diligence.⁴² Also, under some statutes, a taxpayer may intervene to defend an action against a municipality even after entry of final judgment,⁴³ or he may intervene to prosecute an appeal,⁴⁴ or he may intervene in an appeal taken by the adverse party.⁴⁵ On the other hand, it has been held that a petition to intervene is properly denied where a judgment⁴⁶ or decree⁴⁷ has been entered in the action or proceeding, especially where the decree has been affirmed and no new matter is presented which was not before the court on final hearing.⁴⁸ It has been held that a taxpayer cannot intervene to protect a fund which is in the hands of municipal officers for the payment of a specific debt;⁴⁹ nor can

The word "taxpayer," as used in the statute providing that, if the solicitor of a municipality fails on written request of any "taxpayer" to bring actions required by statute, the "taxpayer" may bring those actions himself, should not be enlarged so as to include a class of nontaxpayers not within its terms.—Maxwell v. Vigorous prosecution

Taxpayer could not intervene in pending action brought by city director of law in pursuance of demand by taxpayer to prevent misappropriation of municipal funds, on claim that circumstances were such that vigorous prosecution of case was improbable, where director of law included in petition all demands made by taxpayer, so that full adjudication thereof might be made by court.—City of Lakewood v. Validation of refunding bonds

If refunding bonds to be issued without vote of electors indicated that territorial limits of city had been reduced since bonds refunded were issued in certain years, taxpayer would not be entitled to intervene in suit by city to validate refunding bonds, since taxpayer's alleged right to require excluded territory to bear its share of taxes to pay refunding bonds, designed to refund bonds issued when excluded territory was within city, would not then be adversely affected by covenants of refunding bonds.—Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. City of Lakeland, 177 So. 206, 130 Fla. 72.

The court has some discretion in determining whether or not to permit intervention,⁵⁴ and, where intervention is permitted, the taxpayer takes the case as it stands.⁵⁵

§ 2125. Compelling Action by Municipal Authorities

In general, a taxpayer may not maintain a suit to compel action of municipal authorities unless they are acting illegally and the effect of their illegal action will be to occasion the taxpayer some specific injury.

A taxpayer generally may not maintain a suit to compel action of municipal authorities unless they are acting illegally⁵⁶ and the effect of their illegal action will be to occasion him some specific injury.⁵⁷ A suit in equity by a taxpayer will not lie to compel municipal authorities to act in matters which are within their discretion,⁵⁸ or in matters which are unauthorized by law,⁵⁹ and it has been held that a suit in equity which, if successful, would result indirectly in the expenditure of municipal funds may not be maintained.⁶⁰ Certain statutory provisions conferring on taxpayers the right to sue have been so construed as not to permit actions directly or indirectly to compel action by the municipal authorities,⁶¹ on the ground principally that in such case a full measure of relief is obtainable in mandamus proceedings.⁶² However, it has been held that a mere threat of a substantial and imminent injury may make it proper for a taxpayer to institute a suit for the enforcement by officials of their mandatory duties,⁶³ and in some cases the right of a taxpayer to a mandatory injunction against municipal authorities has been recognized or upheld,⁶⁴ but a

Walsh, 37 N.E.2d 397, 67 Ohio App. 479.

Necessity of order

City of Paris, C.C.A. Tenn., 48 F.2d 795, certiorari denied City of Paris, Tenn., v. Kentucky-Tennessee Light & Power Co., 52 S.Ct. 20, 284 U.S. 638, 76 L.Ed. 543.

taxpayer has no right to such injunction when the right or duty affects the state in its sovereign capacity as distinguished from the people at large.⁶⁵

Levy of tax. An action by an individual citizen to compel a levy of taxes will not lie where there is no showing that plaintiff will sustain special injury by a failure to make the levy or that the city at large will be prejudiced by such omission.⁶⁶

Compelling holding of election. No private remedy is available to an individual to compel a municipal officer to cause an election to be held to fill a vacancy.⁶⁷

Compelling compliance with conditions of charitable trust. It has been held that a taxpayer may not maintain an action to compel compliance with conditions impressed on a testamentary gift for charitable purposes to a municipal corporation.⁶⁸

ers to proceed by mandamus against municipal authorities are considered in Mandamus § 47.

§ 2126. Testing or Trying Title to Office

In general, the title to a particular office will not be tried or tested in a taxpayer's suit in equity.

Ordinarily the title to a particular office will not be tried or tested in a taxpayer's suit in equity,⁶⁹ as for example, a suit for an injunction to restrain the payment of salary, where such suit involves a determination as to the title of the person to whom the proposed payment is to be made, as discussed infra § 2150, or a suit to enjoin the incumbent from exercising the functions of the particular office, as discussed infra § 2155; and this rule applies to actions under statutes.⁷⁰ However, under a statute providing for the review of the determination of a municipal body or officer, it has been held that a taxpayer may maintain a suit in equity to determine whether an improperly qualified person has been appointed to a position in the municipal corporation.⁷¹

§ 2127. In General

In general, taxpayers may not contest municipal ordinances or acts merely on the ground that they are unauthorized or invalid; but they may contest the validity of any ordinance, resolution, or official act which prejudicially affects their rights as taxpayers.

Financial or pecuniary interest

(1) The legal interest which qualifies a complainant other than the state to bring suit against municipality charging municipality's enterprise to be ultra vires is a pecuniary interest in preventing municipality from doing an act where injury flows from its quality as a breach of some legal or equitable duty to complainant.—Birmingham Electric Co. v. City of Bessemer, 186 So. 569, 237 Ala. 240.

(2) In order to sustain a taxpayer's suit, taxpayer must show some material injury to him and his interest must be a financial interest.—

the ordinance or act affects him only as a member of the public generally;⁷⁴ nor can plaintiff in his capacity as a taxpayer maintain a suit in which only his private interests other than as a taxpayer are involved.⁷⁵ However, in most jurisdictions taxpayers as such may judicially contest the validity of an ordinance, resolution, or official act which prejudicially affects their rights as taxpayers by increasing the burden of taxation or otherwise,⁷⁶ without showing injury or loss other than that sustained by taxpayers generally,⁷⁷ although in some jurisdictions the right to sue in equity, where the taxpayer has not sustained an injury peculiar to himself, depends on statutory authorization, as discussed infra § 2128. Taxpayers may enforce their rights by a suit for affirmative relief against a wrong already committed,⁷⁸ or, in some jurisdictions, by suit to have an ordinance declared invalid.⁷⁹

Who may sue. One who does not show that he is a taxpayer of the municipal corporation may not complain of any act of the corporation which does not prejudice his rights.⁸⁰

Wrongful act. Plaintiff must show a wrongful act of the municipal authorities,⁸¹ and must make it appear at least that the commission of the act complained of is imminent.⁸²

Elections. It has been held that a taxpayer may contest the result of an election, determining a change in the existing form of municipal government, where the power of the municipal council to hold such an election is involved,⁸³ even though he has no pecuniary interest.⁸⁴ Taxpayers may

Exemption from taxes

(1) Class suit by taxpayer in his own name for the use and benefit of himself and other taxpayers against city to have ordinance exempting from all taxes three thousand dollars of assessed taxable values of all residence homesteads of city declared void was proper under blended system of law and equity.—City of Wichita Falls v. Cooper, Tex.Civ. App., 170 S.W.2d 777.

A taxpayer, suing in his own interest and in behalf of those similarly situated, had sufficient interest to maintain action to set aside order of public service commission authorizing city to install electricity generating plant.—Wisconsin Hydro Electric Co.

contest the result of an election held to determine the question as to incurring an indebtedness or as to issuing bonds,⁸⁵ whether the result is in favor of or against the proposition.⁸⁶ The time within which the taxpayer may contest the legality of the election may be limited by statute.⁸⁷

Taxation. The right of taxpayers to maintain a suit to annul the levy of a tax has been recognized,⁸⁸ but it has been held that a suit will not lie under some statutes to set aside a tax levy because of failure to comply with statutory requirements as to notice and hearing in respect of grievance day,⁸⁹ and that a suit by a taxpayer will not lie to set aside an entire assessment on the property within the limits of a municipal corporation.⁹⁰

Where municipal bonds have been sold and delivered and have been duly certified as required by statute, in some jurisdictions the only ground on which their validity may be attacked is forgery, fraud, or issuance in violation of the state constitution.⁹¹

Remedy by certiorari. In some jurisdictions a taxpayer may maintain certiorari to question the validity of a resolution or ordinance of municipal authorities, as discussed supra § 206 c.

§ 2128. Statutory Provisions in General

In some jurisdictions a taxpayer at large, who has no private interest involved different from that of other taxpayers, cannot maintain a suit in equity based on illegal acts of municipal authorities, except to the extent that statutes have conferred the power to do so.

In some jurisdictions a taxpayer at large, who has no private interest involved different from that of other taxpayers, cannot maintain a suit in equity based on the illegal acts of municipal authorities,⁹² except when and to the extent that statutes have conferred on him power to do so,⁹³ as for example, by a suit to declare official acts void;⁹⁴ but, where such statutes exist, the rule has been laid down that the court cannot inquire into the motives inducing legislative action on the part of a common council,⁹⁵ even though such motives were dishonest and corrupt,⁹⁶ and that such statutes are designed only to frustrate or undo acts of officials, which are either beyond their power or are fraudulent breaches of their official trust.⁹⁷ Such statutes should not be used as a basis for unwarranted attacks on honest offi-

Matters of discretion or policy see infra § 2129.

The rule has its origin in a sound policy which holds that municipal officers should not be subjected to litigation at the suit of every dissatisfied taxpayer. The restriction, however, does not apply where the taxpayer is seeking preventive relief.—Bayley v. Inhabitants of Town of Wells, 174 A. 459, 133 Me. 141.

Transfer of funds

Where revenues of city-owned electric light system were illegally placed in city electric light fund directly, without any appropriation through general fund, taxpayers and rate payers of city bringing representative suit could not require that funds transferred illegally, or otherwise, from the electric light fund, and which did not belong to such fund, should be restored to the fund.—*Union Ice Corporation v. raised through statutory action by taxpayer.—Finigan v. Zuber, 281 N.Y.S. 980, 156 Misc. 479.

Action against third person

Where there was no evidence that vendor of land sold to city paid for by issuance of warrants in excess of authorized appropriation knew that payment was illegal, and none that company for which he was alleged to be an agent had any notice of such illegality, such company was not liable for statutory penalty for such illegal expenditure.—*State ex rel. cial,⁹⁸ or to interfere with a legitimate course of action by governing bodies acting within their jurisdiction,⁹⁹ and, in order to be entitled to sue under such a statute, the taxpayer must bring his case within its terms.¹

§ 2129. Matters of Discretion, Policy, or Judgment in General

Courts will not entertain suits by taxpayers to contest the validity of acts which are within the discretion of municipal officers in the absence of fraud or bad faith.

The courts will not entertain suits to contest the validity of acts which are within the discretion of municipal officers in the absence of fraud or bad faith,² and the court is not concerned with questions as to the wisdom of the act or as to matters of judgment or policy.³ While the discretion of municipal officers is not subject to judicial control, gross abuse of such discretion⁴ and deliberate waste of municipal funds⁵ may be inquired into by courts and appropriate relief granted, if established.

§ 2130. Motive, Intention, or Adverse Interest of Plaintiff in General

In general, the motive of a taxpayer in suing is not material as affecting his right to relief, but the right of a taxpayer to maintain a suit has been denied where he permits the use of his name by others who are seeking to protect private interests.

It has been laid down that the motive of plaintiff in suing is not material as affecting his right to relief,⁶ and that the fact that a third person is to defray expenses, and that such person induced the bringing of the suit, does not affect plaintiff's right to maintain the suit.⁷ On the other hand, the right of a taxpayer to maintain a suit has been denied where he merely permits the use of his name by others who are seeking to protect private interests,⁸ and there is authority for the view that the motive of plaintiff may be considered in determining what relief shall be granted, as considered infra § 2169.

Constitutional provision

The constitutional provision that cities' power of taxation, assessment, borrowing money, contracting debts, and loaning their credit shall be so restricted as to prevent the abuse of such power is an admonition to the legislative branch of the government, and cannot be invoked by taxpayers to induce the court to interfere with discretionary powers of

§ 2132. — Contracts

Taxpayers may not oppose or question a municipal contract merely on the ground that it is unauthorized or invalid, but, subject to some limitations, if their rights as taxpayers are affected, they may do so.

Taxpayers may not oppose or question a municipal contract merely on the ground that it is unauthorized or invalid,⁹ and they have no standing to attack a contract where there is no showing that it is affected by fraud or invalidity,¹⁰ or that injury has resulted.¹¹ It has been held that a taxpayer cannot take advantage of a statutory provision that certain contracts, shall be absolutely void "against the city or any board or department thereof."¹² Subject to these qualifications and exceptions, and subject to the qualifications and exceptions discussed supra §§ 2127-2130, in most jurisdictions, if the rights of taxpayers as such are affected by an unauthorized or invalid contract, they may sue.¹³ In accordance with this rule, ordinarily taxpayers may enforce their rights by suits to declare invalid or to annul or set aside a contract,¹⁴ or, in some jurisdictions, an ordinance authorizing, or otherwise affecting, a contract;¹⁵ or, in still other jurisdictions, by certiorari to review a contract,¹⁶ or an ordinance authorizing a contract.¹⁷

In some jurisdictions a taxpayer, merely as such, cannot maintain a suit in equity to annul or set aside or to invalidate a contract,¹⁸ except where such right has been conferred on him by statute.¹⁹ Such statutes are not applicable in the absence of a showing that the contract is affected by fraud, collusion, or illegality,²⁰ and it has been held that taxpayers can sue only on the grounds on which the municipality might maintain a suit or a defense to accomplish the same purpose,²¹ and that, if the municipal authorities could have waived alleged illegal provisions in a contract, a taxpayer could not sue to set aside the contract because of the insertion of such provisions.²² Such statutes do not authorize the courts to review the action of municipal authorities in entering into a contract where the matters involved are within the discretion of such authorities, in the absence of fraud, corruption, or bad faith.²³

Violation of rights

A freeholder and taxpayer could complain of contract between city and the Works Progress Administration for the construction of a park,

Operating contract

In taxpayer's action to declare invalid an operating contract between city and private corporation, whereby private corporation undertook to operate a foreign trade zone theretofore operated by city under a federal grant obtained from foreign trade zones board, plaintiffs could properly urge that an assignment or transfer of grant by city was a violation of statute authorizing grant, since city might, in consequence, incur obligations and liabilities ultimately compensable from city funds.—American Dock Co. v. City of New York, 21 N.Y.S.2d 943, 174 Misc. 813, affirmed 26 N.Y.S.2d 704, 261 App. Div. 1063, affirmed 36 N.E.2d 696, 286 N.Y. 658.

Modification of contract

The action of a municipality and a private contracting party in modifying their contract is not open to attack by a taxpayer.—Halleran v. New York, 228 N.Y.S. 116, 132 Misc. 73.

§ 2133. — Acquisition or Disposition of Property

Subject to some limitations, taxpayers may oppose or question the validity of the action of municipal authorities in disposing of municipal property or in acquiring property.

Subject to the qualifications and exceptions considered supra §§ 2127-2132, in most jurisdictions taxpayers may oppose or question the validity of the action of municipal authorities in disposing of municipal property,²⁴ or in acquiring property.²⁵ Thus, courts have recognized or upheld the right of a taxpayer to sue to annul an ordinance providing for the wrongful disposition,²⁶ or acquisition,²⁷ of property, or to cancel, rescind, or set aside an unauthorized sale or other disposition of such property,²⁸ or the unauthorized acquisition of property by municipal authorities.²⁹ However, according to one view, plaintiff taxpayers are not entitled to relief which would be denied to the municipality,³⁰ and the right of a taxpayer to sue to rescind a purchase by the municipal authorities has been denied,³¹ at least where the parties to the transaction could not be placed in statu quo.³² Also, it has been held that a taxpayer may not require a municipal corporation to sell property it had purchased and pay back the proceeds in reduction of the prospective tax rate,³³ where the acquisition of the property was within the power of the municipality.³⁴ The right of a taxpayer to complain of a proposed mineral lease of a municipal park has been denied³⁵ where only a very small portion of the park was required for mineral development³⁶ and the land could be safely developed without danger to the public or substantial interference with its use for park purposes.³⁷ Moreover, under the rule in other jurisdictions, which refuses relief in equity to a taxpayer who has only such interest as taxpayers in general have, as discussed supra § 2128, in the absence of statute, a taxpayer cannot sue to set aside an unauthorized conveyance of municipal property,³⁸ but statutes have been enacted conferring the right to maintain an action to cancel, rescind, or set aside an unauthorized conveyance or sale of such property.³⁹ Where municipal authorities are authorized to sell property, under a statute leaving the sale of the property to their judgment, a taxpayer may not attack such sale in the absence of illegality, fraud, or clear abuse of discretion,⁴⁰ at least where the situation has changed since the sale and justice between the parties cannot be had.⁴¹

In a proper case taxpayers may contest the validity of a grant of municipal aid to a corporation or association.

Subject to qualifications and exceptions discussed supra §§ 2127-2130, taxpayers may contest the validity of a grant of municipal aid to a voluntary association,⁴² or to a corporation, such as a railroad company,⁴³ by suit to contest the result of an election held to submit the question to the voters,⁴⁴

§ 2135. — Grant or Exercise of Rights, Privileges, or Franchises

In general, taxpayers may not oppose or question the validity of grants of rights or franchises which can in no way affect their rights as such, but they may do so where their interests as taxpayers are affected.

Taxpayers may not oppose or question the validity of grants of rights or franchises which can in no way affect their rights as such,⁴⁹ nor may the taxpayer move until there is actual danger of injury;⁵⁰ but, according to some decisions, sometimes by virtue of statutory provisions, they may do so where their interests as taxpayers are affected,⁵¹ by certiorari to review the validity of the ordinance or resolution,⁵² or by a suit for an injunction, as discussed infra § 2153. The right of a citizen and taxpayer to maintain a suit to avoid the effect of an election at which an ordinance granting a franchise was repealed has been upheld,⁵³ but the right of a taxpayer to maintain a suit to annul an ordinance which grants a franchise has been denied.⁵⁴

Matters of discretion. Taxpayers may not ordinarily contest the validity of the grant of a franchise or privilege where the matters involved are within the discretion of the municipal officers.⁵⁵

§ 2136. — Audit, Allowance, Settlement, or Payment of Claims

In general, a taxpayer may oppose the allowance or payment of any unauthorized claim against the municipal corporation, or any illegal release of anyone indebted to the municipality; but ordinarily a taxpayer may not question the settlement of a disputed claim.

A taxpayer may oppose the payment of any unauthorized or illegal claim against the municipal corporation,⁵⁶ or the allowance of a claim not properly verified,⁵⁷ or any illegal release of anyone indebted to the municipality.⁵⁸ In some jurisdictions, while a taxpayer cannot maintain a suit in equity in the absence of statute,⁵⁹ by virtue of statute he may sue to vacate the audit of a claim which the board of audit had no authority to audit or where such audit was fraudulent or collusive.⁶⁰ It has been held that the allowance of a claim arising under a contract will not be interfered with where, although the power to contract was irregularly exercised, the municipality retained the property received and there was no fraud.⁶¹

Compromise. Since, in the absence of any restriction, a municipality may compromise a disputed claim against it, as discussed infra §§ 2181, 2197, such settlement may not be questioned by a taxpayer in the absence of fraud or collusion;⁶² but the right of a taxpayer to sue to annul an ordinance providing for a compromise with a delin-

§ 2137. Investigation of Municipal Finances or Expenditures; Receivership

The right of taxpayers to make investigations, sometimes by virtue of statutes providing a summary proceeding, in respect of municipal finances has been recognized; and, under some statutes, provision is made for suits by taxpayers for the appointment of receivers for public utilities owned by a municipal corporation.

The right of a taxpayer to make investigations in respect of municipal finances has been recognized,⁶⁴ and in some jurisdictions there are statutes providing for a summary proceeding to investigate municipal finances or expenditures⁶⁵ on the application of a specified number of freeholders who have paid taxes within a specified time.⁶⁶ The freeholders who make the application are virtually plaintiffs in the proceeding,⁶⁷ and the proceedings are against the officers whose acts are in question and not against the municipality.⁶⁸ The application, if properly made, vests the court with jurisdiction in its discretion⁶⁹ to make a summary investigation of the affairs, including unlawful or corrupt expenditures, of the municipal corporation.⁷⁰ The statute does not restrict the scope of inquiry into financial matters⁷¹ but is principally aimed at corruption in public office,⁷² whether or not it takes the form of illegal expenditure.⁷³ Summary investigation under such a statute is solely an investigation.⁷⁴ It is not an accusation of wrongdoing;⁷⁵ nor is it limited to matters to be prosecuted under the criminal law.⁷⁶

The statutes in question are remedial⁷⁷ and should be liberally construed to effectuate their purpose.⁷⁸ Such statutes, however, are not to be construed as

Quasi-judicial method

The statute authorizing summary investigation into financial affairs of a municipality by a supreme court justice on application of freeholders sets up a quasi-judicial method, not of charging an offense or causing trial thereof, but of ascertaining and of publishing the facts of a particular phase of governmental activity, and the investigation may be regarded as an effort to ascertain the truth of a charge involving swindling the government out of its money.—Application of Wellhofer, 60 A.2d 247, 137 N.J. restricting the right of interested taxpayers to inspect public records.⁷⁹

In proceedings under such statutes the court does not consider political questions or matters of policy,⁸⁰ or pass on the wisdom or expediency of the acts complained of,⁸¹ and is empowered to investigate or to correct only such acts as are unlawful or corrupt.⁸² The court should not determine the truth or falsity of the allegations made,⁸³ but only whether or not there exist grounds giving cause to believe that expenditures have been unlawfully or corruptly made.⁸⁴ Some statutes give the court the right to appoint an expert to make the investigation⁸⁵ and also to cause the publication of the result.⁸⁶ The court may in such proceedings make an order restraining the improper expenditure of municipal funds,⁸⁷ but it seems that an order restraining the payment of certain claims or debts is not justified merely because there were technical defects affecting the transactions out of which such claims or debts arose.⁸⁸

Applicants may be required to furnish a bond to secure payment of costs and expenses of the investigation,⁸⁹ but the amount of the bond should not be so large in amount that applicants are unable to furnish it,⁹⁰ and it is not necessary that all of the applicants be signatories on the bond.⁹¹

provision is made for suits by taxpayers for the appointment of receivers for public utilities owned by the municipality, under certain circumstances, and such statutes have been construed as not depriving the municipality of its property without due process of law.⁹² By virtue of its general equity jurisdiction the court has power to terminate the proceedings and to restore the public utility to the municipal authorities.⁹³

- b. Recovery of, or restitution in respect of, municipal property

a. In General

Where a cause of action exists in favor of a municipal corporation, ordinarily a taxpayer may not sue on its behalf except to prevent a failure of justice, as where the municipal authorities wrongfully refuse to act.

Since, as discussed infra § 2204, the municipal corporation is the proper party to sue to enforce a cause of action existing in its favor, a taxpayer may not bring the action on behalf of the municipality where the municipal authorities have not wrongfully refused or neglected to act,⁹⁴ after a proper request to do so, unless, as discussed infra § 2158, the circumstances are such as to indicate

Action in own name

A taxpayer cannot maintain an action in his own name for the personal recovery of taxes due a municipality, although the city solicitor refuses to do so.—Alcorn v. Cincinnati Traction Co., 25 Ohio N.P.N. S., 523.

In cases of quasi-municipal corporations where interest of taxpayers is negligible, proceedings in equity to obtain redress for wrongs to corporation should not be entertained when brought by taxpayers alone.—Burkett v. Blaisdell, 17 A.2d 460, 137 Me. 200.

Where refusal of city officials to collect water rentals does not entitle taxpayer or water consumer of municipality to invoke equity jurisdiction to enforce collection on behalf of municipality.—Kasch v. Peoples Hospital Co., 5 N.E.2d 1020, 54 Ohio App. 80, appeal dismissed Kasch on Behalf of City of Akron v. Peoples Hospital Co., 2 N.E.2d 778, 131 Ohio St. 286.

affirmatively that such a demand would be unavailing. Moreover, a taxpayer cannot sue a third person where no duty is imposed on the municipal authorities to bring the action in question,⁹⁵ or where there is no right in the municipal corporation to prosecute such an action.⁹⁶ So, also, a taxpayer may not sue on behalf of a municipal corporation when maintenance of the suit by the corporation would be an act of bad faith,⁹⁷ notwithstanding the legal right to maintain the action is clear.⁹⁸ A taxpayer may not bring an action in affirmance of a contract of a municipality which contains no provision in favor of such taxpayer.⁹⁹ It has been held that a taxpayer cannot maintain a suit for damages on behalf of a municipal corporation under charter provisions authorizing a taxpayer to maintain actions to restrain the execution of illegal contracts on behalf of the municipality and to restrain municipal officers from paying illegal claims.¹

In most jurisdictions, however, where the municipal authorities improperly refuse or fail to act, a taxpayer may sue on behalf of the municipality,² although in some jurisdictions an action will not lie in the absence of statutory authorization.³ Although taxpayers have an interest which entitles them to protect the interest of the municipal corporation,⁴ the cause of action remains in the corporation,⁵ and final relief is for its benefit.⁶ Certain statutory provisions have been construed as authorizing suits by taxpayers against the municipal authorities and as not authorizing suits by taxpayers on behalf of the municipal corporation against third persons.⁷

Taxpayers suing on behalf of the municipality have no greater rights than the municipality itself,⁸ and taxpayers may not assert a better claim for the municipality than it could assert in its own behalf,⁹ and any defense which might be interposed in an action by the municipal corporation is available in a taxpayer's suit.¹⁰

b. Recovery of, or Restitution in Respect of, Municipal Property

In general, sometimes by virtue of statutory provisions, where municipal authorities neglect or refuse to act, a taxpayer may maintain an action for the benefit of a municipal corporation to recover property or funds of the corporation which have been wrongfully expended or misapplied.

While the right of a taxpayer to sue for the recovery of moneys or other property of the corporation has been denied in the absence of statutory authorization,¹¹ in most jurisdictions, where an unlawful expenditure of money has been made by the officers of a municipal corporation and the proper municipal authorities neglect or refuse to act,¹² a taxpayer may maintain an action to recover the amount illegally disbursed for the benefit of the municipal corporation.¹³ In accordance with this rule, municipal officers may be compelled to restore municipal funds which they have wrongfully expended or misapplied¹⁴ or received from the corporation,¹⁵ or for which they have failed to account;¹⁶ and an action will also lie to recover from a third person municipal moneys or other property to which he is not entitled.¹⁷ Moreover, the right of the court to charge certain municipal officers with the cost of reproducing municipal books which were destroyed by such officers to conceal embezzlements has been recognized where reproduction is necessary to ascertain the extent of the embezzlement and the financial condition of the municipality.¹⁸

In order to entitle a taxpayer to a judgment against municipal officers, it must appear that the municipality could have maintained the action in the first instance.¹⁹ So, where orders for payment of money were in proper form, a city treasurer cannot, in a taxpayer's action, be held liable for money paid out thereon.²⁰ It has been held that taxpayers cannot demand an accounting of a contractor for moneys received by him in excess of the work actually done under the contract,²¹ and municipal officers cannot be held personally liable in damages because municipal indebtedness in excess of the constitutional limit has been contracted or permitted.²² Moreover, an action does not lie where it would be grossly inequitable to enforce the claim,²³ where the expenditure has been ratified by the taxpayers,²⁴ or, it has been held, where the taxpayer has failed to make use of another available remedy.²⁵

Void agreement

Where contract required removal of foreign substances from water tanks and standpipes which were part of city water system by sand-blasting operations, and such operations uncovered deteriorations of rivets and metal body of tanks, a subsequent oral agreement whereby city water commissioner undertook to oblige the city to pay to contractor for extra work in repairing deteriorations at certain price for labor and machinery used was void, and a taxpayer on behalf of city could recover back the money paid under such agreement, on ground that no bids were asked for and that no contracts had been let for such extra work to the lowest bidder as required by statutes.—Sioux Falls Taxpayers Ass'n v. A taxpayer was entitled to sue as an individual and as a taxpayer on behalf of city to vacate assignments of municipal tax certificates exchanged by city for others which city had previously assigned for an inadequate consideration but which city received back at their face value, notwithstanding the certificates had passed to the hands of a third person who it was alleged should not be required to defend against the city's ultra vires acts.—R. Motive of plaintiff. It has been held that the motive of plaintiff taxpayer in bringing the action is immaterial.²⁷

Statutory provisions. In some jurisdictions provision has been made by statute for actions for the recovery or restoration of municipal funds or property wrongfully paid out or transferred²⁸ against municipal officers²⁹ and persons receiving the funds or other property.³⁰ While in favor of the remedy a somewhat liberal construction should be given to the statute,³¹ the remedy under some statutes is confined to cases in which fraud or corruption or illegal official acts are shown,³² and a mere technical illegality is not a ground for the maintenance of an action.³³

Under some statutes a taxpayer can maintain an action only for double the value of the property or money wrongfully and fraudulently disposed of or paid out.³⁴ Such a statute, generally speaking, is penal in nature and subject to a strict construction in its penal aspect,³⁵ but actual fraud need not be shown.³⁶

Matters of discretion or policy. A municipal officer³⁷ or the person to whom payment is made³⁸ is not liable where expenditures are made in the honest exercise of discretionary powers,³⁹ even though such exercise constitutes a mistake of judgment.⁴⁰

Injury, loss, or damage; benefit to municipality or to taxpayers. According to some authority the mere fact that the municipal corporation has received some benefit in the transaction does not prevent a recovery,⁴¹ but a recovery has been denied where the municipality has received the benefit of the expenditure and the taxpayers have not sustained injury,⁴² at least where the general matter

Public policy

A statute providing that any claim for compensation for work done or supplies or materials furnished city under a contract in which officer of the city was interested should be void provided merely a cumulative remedy and did not prohibit recovery of compensation already paid, since such recovery was based on express language making such transactions void and on the broad principle of public policy which recognized no equities or estoppels.—*Miller v. 3. RESTRAINING MUNICIPAL ACTS AND ACTS OF PERSONS DEALING WITH MUNICIPAL AUTHORITIES

a. In General

In a large number of jurisdictions a taxpayer, independently of express statutory authorization, may resort to a court of equity for an injunction to restrain unlawful action by municipal authorities.

In a large number of jurisdictions a taxpayer, independently of express statutory authorization, may resort to a court of equity for an injunction to restrain unlawful action by municipal authorities,⁴⁷ and the existence of corruption or moral turpitude on the part of municipal officers is not essential in order to permit the maintenance of the suit.⁴⁸ The right of the taxpayer to sue has been held to be based on the theory that he is attempting to prevent the violation of a trust,⁴⁹ and it has also been regarded as analogous to the right of stockholders in a private corporation to sue the officers of such corporation.⁵⁰ An injunction will not be granted where it is not shown that the act or transaction sought to be enjoined is in fact unauthorized, illegal, or otherwise wrongful,⁵¹ and the illegality or want of authority should be made clearly to appear;⁵² nor as a rule will the mere fact that an act or ordinance is unauthorized or illegal entitle a taxpayer, regardless of its nature and effect, to sue.⁵³ The remedy is not one lightly to be applied,⁵⁴ and it must appear that the commission of the wrongful act is imminent in order that a taxpayer may sue.⁵⁵

rules applicable to the issuance of injunctions generally, an injunction to restrain an illegal act by a municipality will not lie where there is an adequate remedy at law;⁵⁶ but the existence of a legal remedy will not preclude the granting of an injunction if it is not as adequate and efficient as the remedy in equity.⁵⁷ In jurisdictions in which the remedy of a taxpayer is by certiorari, he is not entitled to an injunction.⁵⁸

Legislative or governmental acts; ordinances. The courts will not restrain the valid exercise of its legislative functions by a municipal council or other governing body at the suit of a citizen and taxpayer,⁵⁹ as, for example, the enactment of municipal ordinances in the exercise of a legislative power,⁶⁰ but it has been held that an injunction, if otherwise proper, may be granted to prevent the enactment of an ordinance authorizing an illegal or otherwise wrongful act in connection with matters in which the municipality acts in a private or proprietary character.⁶¹ A taxpayer may sue in equity to enjoin the enforcement of a void ordinance where its enforcement would increase municipal taxes.⁶²

payer to maintain a suit against a person dealing with the corporation in respect of matters in which taxpayers are interested has been recognized.⁶³

§ 2140. Statutory Provisions in General

In accordance with express statutory provisions, a taxpayer may sue to restrain unlawful action by municipal authorities. In some jurisdictions the statutes merely affirm an existing right in equity but in other jurisdictions the statutes create the right.

In accordance with express statutory provisions, a taxpayer may sue to restrain unlawful action by municipal authorities⁶⁴ where the action is of such a character that it could be restrained on the application of the attorney general or some body or officer acting on behalf of the public.⁶⁵ In some jurisdictions the statutes merely affirm an existing right in equity⁶⁶ and are not to be construed as a limitation on the remedy in cases not within the statutes;⁶⁷ in other jurisdictions, it has been held that a taxpayer, merely as a member of the general body of taxpayers, has no such right in the absence of statute,⁶⁸ and that he can maintain an action or suit for an injunction to restrain illegal or unauthorized acts only to the extent authorized by statute.⁶⁹ The act complained of must be within the provisions of the statute which, it is claimed, is applicable,⁷⁰ but, where the statute recognizes several grounds for suit, the existence of one of such grounds is sufficient to support the suit.⁷¹

The statutes in question are remedial⁷² and are given a liberal construction in order to accomplish their purpose.⁷³ While some provisions are designed to give taxpayers a remedy under conditions where none was available to them before,⁷⁴ they do not confer on courts of equity jurisdiction over subjects which have always been excluded from their cognizance, as stated infra § 2161, and do not authorize taxpayers to bring actions which the municipal authorities have no power to bring,⁷⁵ and in general the rights of taxpayers are no greater than those of the municipal corporation concerned.⁷⁶ It has been stated generally that the statutes are designed to protect the rights of the municipal corporation,⁷⁷ but some statutes, at least, have for an ultimate purpose the protection of taxpayers.⁷⁸ The right of taxpayers to sue under statute has been regarded as analogous to the right of stockholders in a private corporation to sue officers of such corporation.⁷⁹

General principles which govern the exercise of equitable jurisdiction are applied in determining whether the remedy under the foregoing statutes is to be granted or withheld,⁸⁰ and an injunction will not be granted under such statutes where an injunction under the circumstances would be inequitable rather than equitable.⁸¹ Moreover, the rule that an action by injunction will not lie where there is an adequate remedy at law, as considered in Injunctions § 25, applies in the case of suits under statutes,⁸² as where a full measure of relief is obtainable in mandamus proceedings.⁸³ Where the question involved is moot, an injunction will not issue.⁸⁴

Illegal acts. The mere illegality of an official act in and of itself does not justify injunctive relief in a taxpayer's action under a statute aimed at "illegal official acts,"⁸⁵ nor does a mere informality in procedure render an act illegal within the meaning of the statute.⁸⁶ In order to justify the granting of an injunction under the statutory provision in question it must clearly appear that the official act complained of was illegal.⁸⁷ There can be no illegal act where the municipal authorities follow the commands of a constitutional enactment.⁸⁸ The act may be illegal within the meaning of the statute notwithstanding the particular officer whose conduct is complained of is acting innocently and in good faith.⁸⁹ The statute does not permit a taxpayer to test the legality of the municipal corporation.⁹⁰

Abuse of corporate powers. Under some statutes a taxpayer may sue to prevent the abuse of corporate powers.⁹¹ The abuse of corporate powers referred to in the statute includes an unauthorized or unlawful exercise of the powers possessed by the corporation,⁹² as well as the assumption of powers not conferred.⁹³ In order to constitute an abuse of corporate powers it is not necessary that there should be an intentional or willful disregard of duties; an omission properly to perform them may be sufficient.⁹⁴ The statute has no application to the abuse of powers by a public body other than the municipal corporation involved.⁹⁵

Against whom suit lies. Some statutes apply only to those officers acting or who have acted for, or on behalf of, the municipal corporation,⁹⁶ but it has been held that certain officers who, although they perform a state function, are engaged in the disbursement of municipal funds in connection with the performance of their duties are subject to suit.⁹⁷ A suit to restrain an illegal act may be brought against the offending officer only,⁹⁸ and not against another officer who merely has knowledge of the wrongful act.⁹⁹ Some statutory provisions have been construed as not permitting suits against persons dealing with the municipal authorities,¹ at least where the alleged illegal act of the municipal authorities has already been performed.²

§ 2141. Particular Taxpayers Entitled to Sue

A person is a taxpayer and entitled to sue to restrain illegal acts by officers of the municipal corporation if he is the owner of property listed for taxation, although he has not resided in the community long enough to have actually paid any taxes.

A person is a taxpayer and entitled to sue to restrain illegal acts by officers of the municipal corporation if he is the owner of property listed for taxation, although he has not resided within the municipality long enough to have actually paid any taxes,³ but a person who owns only personal property and who has not resided within the municipality a sufficient period of time to be assessed for taxes on the property has been held not entitled to sue as a taxpayer.⁴ A corporation,⁵ including a public utility,⁶ which is a taxpayer may sue.

Expiration of franchise

A power company which was the largest taxpayer in city was not barred from joining other taxpayers in suit to restrain city from proceeding to construct municipal power plant on ground that election authorizing construction was invalid,

A nonresident taxpayer may sue,⁷ and this rule has been applied in suits under statutes;⁸ but it has also been held that the taxpayer must be a citizen of the municipality in order to be entitled to sue to restrain illegal acts of the municipality,⁹ and that a public utility which is not an inhabitant of the city, although it pays taxes therein, is not entitled to sue.¹⁰ The fact that plaintiff prosecutes the action on behalf of a citizens' organization does not affect his right to sue where he is otherwise duly qualified.¹¹ Under some statutes plaintiff must show that his assessment for taxation is at least a specified amount.¹²

The fact that a taxpayer, after commencing a suit for an injunction against the municipality, has become a municipal officer does not preclude him from maintaining the suit.¹³

§ 2142. Matters of Discretion, Judgment, or Policy in General

The discretionary powers of municipal authorities will not be interfered with in a suit by a taxpayer for an injunction in the absence of fraud or palpable abuse.

The discretionary powers of municipal authorities will not be interfered with in a suit by a taxpayer for an injunction in the absence of fraud or palpable abuse,¹⁴ and matters in which questions as to judgment, wisdom, or policy alone are involved are not subject to control by injunction.¹⁵ The courts will interfere where an abuse of discretion¹⁶ or fraud¹⁷ on the part of municipal authorities has occurred or is threatened.

§ 2143. Necessity, Nature and Extent of Interest, Injury, or Loss in General

As a general rule, either in suits brought under statutes or in suits brought independently of statute, a taxpayer is not entitled to an injunction restraining an act by municipal authorities where the threatened act is not prejudicial to his rights or to the rights of the taxpayers, or will not result in loss to the municipality.

Under some statutes a taxpayer may sue to enjoin the municipality from executing an invalid ordinance without showing damage,¹⁸ but, as a general rule, either in suits brought under statutes or in suits brought independently of statute, a taxpayer is not entitled to an injunction restraining an act by municipal authorities where the threatened act is not prejudicial to his rights or to the rights of the taxpayers,¹⁹ or will not result in loss to the municipality.²⁰ Furthermore, as a general rule, a taxpayer cannot sue where he has not sustained or is not threatened with any injury peculiar to himself or to the taxpayers as a class, as distinguished from the public generally,²¹ since in such case the suit must be brought by the proper public officer.²²

A distinction is generally made between a case where the act in question affects plaintiff merely as a citizen of the municipality or as one of the general public and one where the act directly affects his rights as a taxpayer;²³ and, where an illegal or unauthorized act is prejudicial to the rights of taxpayers as such,²⁴ as where it tends to increase the burden of taxation,²⁵ a taxpayer may sue to restrain it without showing any special injury different from that sustained by other taxpayers. Plaintiff in his capacity as a taxpayer cannot maintain a suit in which only his private interests are involved;²⁶ he must seek such relief as will be beneficial to all the class represented.²⁷ Under some statutes, in order that an "illegal official act" may be enjoined where waste of public property or funds is not threatened, it must appear that such act is one which imperils the public interests or is calculated to work public injury or to produce some public mischief,²⁸ but it is not necessary that the act complained of result in a pecuniary loss to the municipal corporation.²⁹

The injury which plaintiff seeks to prevent by the injunction must be immediate and imminent,³⁰ although it has been held that plaintiff need not show threat of an immediate pecuniary loss with definiteness and certainty.³¹ The fact that the pecuniary interest of plaintiff is small,³² or that the amount of his tax will be increased only a slight amount as a result of the act complained of,³³ does not affect his right to an injunction, but, where the total damage to all the taxpayers is trifling, an injunction will not be granted.³⁴

A nontaxpayer cannot sue on the ground that the act complained of is prejudicial to the rights of taxpayers.³⁵

§ 2144. Motive, Intention, or Adverse Interest of Plaintiff

As a general rule, if the plaintiff is a taxpayer and his rights as such are affected, his motives in bringing suit to restrain illegal acts by a municipal corporation are not material.

As a general rule, if plaintiff is a taxpayer and his rights as such are affected, his motives in bringing suit to restrain illegal acts by a municipal corporation are not material,³⁶ and his right to sue is not affected by the fact that he may have some purely private right or interest which will be affected by the action which he seeks to prevent;³⁷ but there is authority for the view that the motive of plaintiff may be considered in determining what relief shall be granted, as discussed infra § 2169. The taxpayer must act in good faith and not lend his name and standing as a taxpayer to further the interests of a stranger to the record,³⁸ and the view is taken in some cases that the fact that plaintiff is proceeding in the interest of third persons who themselves would not be entitled to relief is ground for refusing an injunction;³⁹ but it has also been held that the facts that a third person is to defray the expenses and that such person induced the bringing of the suit do not affect plaintiff's right to relief.⁴⁰

§ 2145. Levy and Collection of Tax or Assessment

As a general rule in most jurisdictions, a taxpayer may, independently of express statutory authorization, sue to enjoin a municipal corporation from levying or collecting an illegal tax, but in some jurisdictions the right is dependent on statute.

As a general rule in most jurisdictions, a taxpayer may, independently of express statutory authorization, sue to enjoin a municipal corporation from levying an illegal tax, or one for an illegal or unauthorized purpose,⁴¹ and the right of a taxpayer to an injunction against the collection of such a tax,⁴² or the right of a taxpayer to maintain a suit to enjoin the making of a threatened illegal assessment,⁴³ has been recognized or upheld. In some jurisdictions a representative suit by taxpayers to restrain the levy, collection, or assessment of a tax does not lie in the absence of statutory authorization where they have no interest apart from that of the general body of taxpayers,⁴⁴ and, although the right may be exercised when conferred by statute,⁴⁵ the taxpayer must bring himself within the provisions of the statute,⁴⁶ and, under some

The statute, authorizing a taxpayers' petition to restrain municipal officers from raising money or incurring liability for any purpose or in any manner other than as prescribed by law, was enacted to prohibit the raising of money by taxation in any manner not authorized by law.—Amory v. Assessors of Boston, 37 N.E.2d 459, 310 Mass. 199.

Words "to raise money," within the meaning of a statute authorizing taxpayers to petition for an injunction when officers of the city are about to raise money for unwarranted purposes, mean to raise money by taxation.—Dowling v. Board of Assessors of City of Boston, 168 N.E. 73, 268 Mass. 480.

Assessors are officers who may be restrained from raising money by the levy of a tax contrary to law.—Dowling v. Board of Assessors of City of Boston, supra.

46. Mass.—Amory v. Assessors of Boston, 37 N.E.2d 459, 310 Mass. 199.

44 C.J. p 1394 note 89.

Overvaluation of certain property by city assessors, although improperly raising limit of municipal indebtedness, would not subject city to any financial obligations, so as to render such overvaluation by assessors subject to restraint on taxpayers' petition under statute providing for such petition to prevent municipal officers from illegally raising or expending money or incurring obligations, since assessors were without power to appropriate municipal funds, that authority being possessed by legislative branch of municipal government.—Amory v. Assessors of Boston, supra.

Past transactions

The statute authorizing taxpayers' petition to prevent municipal officers from raising or expending money or incurring obligations otherwise than as authorized by law does not reach past transactions unless in exceptional cases, and a proceeding to restrain city assessors from valuing taxable property otherwise than at statutes, where the inclusion of a certain amount in the levy is merely a technical illegality, suit will not lie.⁴⁷

An injunction will not be granted where the tax or the action concerning the tax is not illegal,⁴⁸ where no injury to the taxpayer is shown,⁴⁹ where the remedy at law is adequate,⁵⁰ or where the matter is within the discretion of the municipal authorities.⁵¹ The action of municipal authorities in levying a tax for the payment of certain bonds will not be restrained at the instance of a taxpayer where such action would be ordered at the instance of the holders of such bonds.⁵² A suit will not lie to enjoin the collection of authorized taxes where it is based on the possibility that if collected the municipal authorities will misapply them,⁵³ and it has also been held that a suit to enjoin the collection of taxes cannot be based on the alleged fact that the municipality has failed to keep its streets in good repair and has thereby forfeited its charter.⁵⁴

Suit against beneficiary of tax. The right of taxpayers to maintain an action against the beneficiary of a special tax, to enjoin the collection of such tax, has been recognized.⁵⁵

Exemption of properties from taxation. Taxpayers who would be affected by exemption of properties from paying taxes may sue for an injunction.⁵⁶

a. In general

b. Bonds or other evidence of indebtedness

a. In General

As a general rule, a taxpayer may sue to enjoin municipal authorities from incurring an illegal or unauthorized indebtedness.

As a general rule, in most jurisdictions a taxpayer may, independently of express statutory authorization, sue to enjoin municipal authorities from incurring an illegal or unauthorized indebtedness.⁵⁷ In some jurisdictions, the taxpayer has the right

Legislature may not deny to a taxpayer the right to assert invalidity of indebtedness about to be incurred by a city.—Faught v. City of Sapulpa, 292 P. 15, 145 Okl. 164.

Theory of equitable jurisdiction Equitable jurisdiction over an official action is based on the theory that a taxpayer has an equitable interest in public funds which it is to sue under statutes conferring the right,⁵⁸ and the right is held to be dependent on statute,⁵⁹ but some statutes merely recognize and regulate an existing right.⁶⁰

An injunction is properly granted where the indebtedness will exceed the authorized debt limit⁶¹ or the revenues of the current year where expenditures are so limited,⁶² or the authorities are proceeding in an illegal manner.⁶³ The taxpayer must show that, unless injunctive relief is granted, injury will result to the taxpayers,⁶⁴ but he need not show any injury to himself different from that sustained by other taxpayers.⁶⁵ An injunction will not be granted where the incurring of an indebtedness is not threatened.⁶⁶

Matters of discretion, judgment, or policy. In the absence of fraud or bad faith, or palpable abuse, the court will not interfere with the exercise of discretionary powers in regard to the transaction which is attacked;⁶⁷ nor will it consider matters in which are involved only questions as to judg-

Showing illegality or other wrong. An injunction will not be granted where it is not shown that the transaction in question is unauthorized, illegal or otherwise wrongful,⁶⁹ and a mere apprehension that the proposed indebtedness will exceed the authorized debt limit is not ground for interference by the court.⁷⁰

Authority of assessors. It has been held that a suit to prevent a municipal corporation from increasing its indebtedness could not be based on the theory that the board of assessors was not authorized to assess taxes to meet the proposed indebtedness.⁷¹

b. Bonds or Other Evidence of Indebtedness

As a general rule, sometimes by virtue of statutory authorization, a taxpayer, in a proper case, may sue to enjoin municipal authorities from issuing, selling, or delivering municipal bonds or other securities or evidences of indebtedness.

As a general rule, sometimes by virtue of stat-charged will be expended for an illegal purpose, thus incurring a liability on the taxpayer to replenish the treasury.—Ryan v. City of Chicago, 15 N.E.2d 708, 369 Ill. 59.

Obligation to give tax exemptions

Loan and subsidy contract which required city to match state subsidy by tax exemptions but which did not call on city to pay any cash subsidy or incur any debt did not authorize taxpayer's action as an illegal waste of property and funds of city.—Borek v. Golder, supra.

"Incurring of obligation" within statute

(1) Doing act which might involve town in litigation at instance of owner of patent is not "incurring of obligation" within statute authorizing suit to restrain town from expending money or "incurring obligation" for illegal and unconstitutional purpose.—Dealtry v. Selectmen of Town of Watertown, 180 N.E. 621, 279 Mass. 22.

(2) Even if receipt of revenue by city from underground garage constructed under common would deprive city of defenses which it now has in actions brought by persons injured by reason of defective condition of the common, the deprivation of such defense would not be the "incurring of obligation" within statute permitting taxpayers' suit.—*Lowell v. utory authorization, a taxpayer may sue to enjoin municipal authorities from issuing, selling, or delivering municipal bonds or other securities or evidences of indebtedness without authority,⁷² or from indorsing or guaranteeing without authority the bonds of another corporation.⁷³ A taxpayer who has acquiesced in an improvement which benefits his property is not entitled to enjoin the issuance of bonds to cover the cost of the improvement where he fails to offer to pay for the benefits received.⁷⁴

Specific grounds for injunction. Among other grounds for granting injunctions against the issuance, sale, or delivery of bonds or other securities⁷⁵ are that such issuance, sale, or delivery would increase the municipal indebtedness, or the apparent indebtedness, to an amount in excess of the amount permitted by a statutory or constitutional provision,⁷⁶ that the bonds are to be issued for an unauthorized purpose,⁷⁷ that the period of time until maturity of the bonds exceeds the maximum permitted by statute,⁷⁸ that the proceedings preliminary to the issuance of the bonds did not comply with the statute,⁷⁹ that the question of issuance of bonds was not submitted to popular vote⁸⁰ or approved by the requisite majority of qualified voters,⁸¹ or that an election in which the issuance of securities was authorized was illegal or defective.⁸²

A bond issue may not be enjoined on the ground that the money to be realized from the bond issue will be insufficient for the proposed purpose,⁸³ that the public improvement to be constructed from the proceeds is inadequate for the community,⁸⁴ that details of the improvement have been changed after authorization of the bond issue by the electors,⁸⁵ that the estimates for the improvement were improper or fallacious,⁸⁶ that city officers issuing the bonds were not qualified to hold office,⁸⁷ or that the bonds are to be issued for a total amount less than that authorized by an election.⁸⁸

An injunction against the issuance of bonds will not be issued because of the mere possibility that the proceeds will be misapplied,⁸⁹ and the fact that proceeds of a prior bond issue have been misapplied is not ground for restraining the municipal authorities from making an issue of other bonds until they have restored to a sinking fund the amount misapplied.⁹⁰ Where a suit to enjoin the issuance of bonds amounts merely to a contest of the election at which the bonds are voted,⁹¹ that is, where the suit challenges only the conduct of such election,⁹² the right to maintain the suit has been denied. Moreover, plaintiff cannot succeed on the theory that there was an irregularity in the canvass of the votes at the election at which the question as to the establishment of the municipality was decided.⁹³ Under a statute expressly authorizing taxpayers to enjoin the registration of municipal bonds illegally issued, an irregularity in the election has been held not to be a sufficient cause.⁹⁴

The failure of the municipal authorities to obtain the consent of the war department,⁹⁵ or of another municipality⁹⁶ to the construction of a public work for which the proceeds of the bonds are to be used does not, it has been held, furnish a basis for a taxpayer's suit to enjoin the issuance of the bonds, since the question as to consent is a matter between the municipal authorities and the other governmental agencies.

Matters of discretion, policy, or wisdom. Where a municipal corporation is authorized to issue bonds, a court of equity will not, in the absence of fraud or a clear abuse of authority, interfere with its discretionary powers;⁹⁷ it cannot pass on the necessity or propriety of acts within the power of the municipal authorities.⁹⁸

Showing illegality or other wrong. An injunction will not be granted where it is not shown that the transaction in question is unauthorized, illegal, or otherwise wrongful,⁹⁹ and a mere apprehension that the issuance of bonds or other securities will constitute an illegal act has been held insufficient to warrant the granting of an injunction.¹ It has been held that an authorized issue of bonds will not be enjoined because the ordinance providing for the issue does not also provide for levying taxes to pay the interest and provide a sinking fund to pay the principal.²

Necessity of showing injury or loss. An injunction will not be granted where it is not shown that the rights of the taxpayers will be prejudiced by the act or acts complained of,³ or, it has been held, where plaintiffs' rights are not clear and the injury likely to result to them is not shown to be irrevocable or even serious.⁴ It has been held that, where bonds would be void even in the hands of so-called bona fide holders, an action to enjoin municipal officers from putting such bonds in circulation is not maintainable;⁵ but there is authority for the view that, even though bonds would be void and the municipal corporation could defend in an action based on such bonds, a suit to enjoin the issuance and disposal of them would lie where, by their issuance, a constitutional limitation as to the amount of indebtedness would be violated,⁶ and that taxpayers may sue to enjoin a city from guaranteeing bonds, although the guaranty would be void as to bonds in the hands of innocent purchasers.⁷ The right of plaintiff to base his suit on injuries to persons other than himself has been denied.⁸ Where the bonds are not a debt against the city and are not payable out of tax funds, a taxpayer has no litigable interest.⁹

Other available remedies. The right to sue to enjoin the issuance of bonds because of the alleged invalidity of the election at which they were authorized has been recognized notwithstanding a statutory provision authorizing a proceeding to contest such election.¹⁰

Effect of prior validation proceedings. The right of a taxpayer to maintain a suit to enjoin the issuance or sale of bonds has been denied where it is based on matters involved in previous proceedings to validate such bonds, and by statute the judgment of validation is conclusive unless a review of such judgment is had in the manner prescribed

by the statute.¹¹

Actions against third persons. An action to enjoin the negotiation of municipal bonds in the hands of a railroad company in whose aid they were issued has been upheld.¹²

Statement of name in bid

Taxpayer could enjoin city from executing contract for construction of sewer with successful bidder on showing that binding contract existed between bidder and another by which latter was to receive compensation contingent on award, whose name did not appear in full in bid, in violation of a statute requiring the statement of the full names of any one interested in the bid.—Powers v. spect to prior advertisement for bids,¹⁶ and as to letting to lowest or highest bidders.¹⁷

Moreover, a suit may be maintained where the contract, entered into or proposed, does not conform to the terms of the advertisement or invitation for proposals or bids,¹⁸ contains unauthorized provisions, the effect of which is to increase the cost to the municipality,¹⁹ is against public policy,²⁰ or would result in an illegal or unauthorized indebtedness.²¹ The motive of the taxpayer does not affect his right to bring the suit.²² An injunction will not lie where plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law,²³ or where the contract has been fully performed by the city.²⁴ It has been held that performance of a void contract cannot be enjoined since, in effect, it is nonexistent, but that the court may issue an injunction forbidding the city to perform certain acts provided for by the terms of the void contract if such acts would be unlawful.²⁵

Necessity of showing illegality or other wrong. An injunction will not be granted where it is not shown that the contract in question is unauthorized, illegal, or otherwise wrongful.²⁶ Mere partial invalidity not affecting the contract as a whole has been regarded as an insufficient ground for an injunction.²⁷ There is authority for the view that, where one of several bidders has consented to an investigation on the part of municipal authorities, designed to determine which bid should be accepted, a taxpayer in a suit based on the rejection of the bid of such bidder cannot complain of the fact that the municipal authorities made such investigation.²⁸ The court has no power, on the suit of a taxpayer, to enjoin the municipality from performing a contract which it is legally liable to perform.²⁹ Corruption or moral turpitude on the part of municipal authorities is not an essential element of plaintiff's right to sue.³⁰

Injury or loss; extent of interest. An injunction will not be granted where it is not shown that the contract is of such a character as to prejudice the rights of taxpayers,³¹ or that there is imminent danger of the violation of their rights.³³ A general taxpayer may sue to enjoin the making or entering into,³³ or the performance of,³⁴ an illegal or unauthorized contract for an improvement where all or part of the cost is payable out of the general taxes or funds. Where the entire cost is to be paid from revenues from the improvement, there is authority which holds that the taxpayer sustains no special injury which entitles him to sue,³⁵ but there is other authority which holds that a taxpayer may sue to enjoin the execution of a contract for a public improvement, even though it is to be paid for out of revenues from the improvement.³⁶

It has been held that an injunction to prevent the entering into a contract will not be granted where the contract, if made, would not be enforceable against the municipal corporation;³⁷ but there is authority to the contrary.³⁸ The fact that the pe-

cuinary interest of plaintiff is small does not affect his right to an injunction,³⁹ and, according to some authorities, it is not necessary for plaintiff to show that there will be a pecuniary loss to the municipal corporation or to plaintiff.⁴⁰ A taxpayer as such cannot maintain a suit to protect rights other than his rights as a taxpayer.⁴¹

b. Statutory Provisions in General

In accordance with statutes conferring the right, a taxpayer may sue, in a proper case, to enjoin municipal authorities from entering into, or performing, contracts which are illegal, unauthorized or wasteful. In some jurisdictions the right is dependent on statute, but in other jurisdictions the statutes merely recognize and regulate an existing right.

wasteful. In some jurisdictions the right is dependent on statute,⁴⁴ but in other jurisdictions the statutes merely recognize and regulate an existing right.⁴⁵ Plaintiff must bring his case within the statutory provisions,⁴⁶ and the contract must actually be illegal or unauthorized.⁴⁷

Ordinarily, the mere illegality of the transaction is not a sufficient basis for an injunction,⁴⁸ but there must be a showing of possible detriment as a result of the acts in question to the interest of the municipality, the public, or the taxpayers,⁴⁹ such as an increase in the burden of taxation,⁵⁰ or a waste of the city's assets.⁵¹

Fraud in the performance of the contract as distinguished from fraud in the making thereof is not a ground for enjoining the performance of the contract at the suit of a taxpayer against the will of the contracting parties.⁵² Where the contract has been completed, its performance will not be enjoined.⁵³

The taxpayer's motive for seeking to enjoin the execution of contracts by the municipality does not affect his right to the remedy.⁵⁴

City attorney suing for taxpayer

The right of the city attorney to bring an action in name of city on written request of a taxpayer is limited by city charter to an action for injunction to restrain city or its agents or officials from abuse of its corporate powers or execution or performance of any contract made in behalf of city.—City of Columbus suit for an injunction by a taxpayer to restrain performance on the part of both the city and the contractor has been permitted.⁵⁶

c. Matters of Discretion, Policy, or Judgment

A taxpayer is not entitled to an injunction to restrain municipal authorities from entering into or carrying out any contract which the municipal authorities may make on behalf of the municipal corporation in the proper exercise of their discretionary powers.

In a suit brought under express statutes or in a suit brought independently of statute, a taxpayer is not entitled to an injunction to restrain municipal authorities from entering into or carrying out any contract which the municipal authorities may make on behalf of the municipal corporation in the proper exercise of their discretionary powers;⁵⁷ the courts will not interfere in matters in which questions as to policy, judgment, or wisdom are involved.⁵⁸ However, where a manifest abuse of discretion⁵⁹ or fraud⁶⁰ in the matter of letting or awarding a contract has occurred or is threatened, a suit will lie. In accordance with these rules, where the law does not require that the lowest bid be accepted, the court will not enjoin the municipal authorities from entering into a contract with a bidder other than the lowest bidder if the municipal authorities exercise a reasonable discretion,⁶¹ but it may grant an injunction where the municipal authorities act unreasonably.⁶² ex rel. Falter v. Columbus Metropolitan Housing Authority, Ohio Com.Pl., 67 N.E.2d 338, affirmed, App., 68 N.E.2d 108.

Suit against housing authority

An action against metropolitan housing authority to enjoin its abuse of its corporate powers or to restrain it from executing or performing any contract on its behalf with the city can only be brought by the state attorney general, either in his own capacity or on relation of another, and cannot be brought by a taxpayer or private individual, whether under city charter or under general laws of state.—City of Columbus ex rel. Falter v. Columbus Metropolitan Housing Authority, supra.

The object of the city charter is to give authority to the taxpayer to prevent illegal action on the part of the city or its officers and not to assist them in avoiding some contract into which they have been inveigled.—Corpus Christi v. Mireur, Tex.Civ.App., 214 S.W. 528.

In an early case in Ohio it was held that a statute which permits an injunction suit by a taxpayer to restrain the abuse of the city's corporate power or the execution or performance of any unlawful contract should be liberally construed to permit an injunction suit by a taxpayer against the contractor.—*Haskins v. showing of fraud is required where the transaction in question is void.⁷⁰ In the absence of fraud or palpable abuse an injunction will not be granted to restrain acts which fall within the discretionary powers of the municipal authorities⁷¹ or which involve merely questions of policy and the wisdom and good judgment of the municipal authorities.⁷²

Wrongfulness of act and injury or damage. An injunction will not be granted where it is not shown that the act which it is sought to enjoin is in fact illegal, unauthorized, or otherwise wrongful,⁷³ or would prejudice the rights of the municipality or its taxpayers;⁷⁴ but sufficient injury is shown where the illegal act is one which may prevent the mu-

municipal corporation from receiving the best service for the money which is to be expended.⁷⁵ A taxpayer may enjoin the wrongful expenditure or diversion of municipal funds although he has no special interest differing from that of other taxpayers⁷⁶ and although the loss to each individual taxpayer would be very small.⁷⁷ The view has been taken that, where the proposed appropriation is only technically illegal and it would be more inequitable to grant the injunction than to refuse it, it may be refused.⁷⁸ The alleged wrongful expenditure or diversion must be imminent in order to warrant the issuance of an injunction.⁷⁹

Other available remedies. A suit for an injunction to restrain an illegal expenditure of money will not be entertained where the taxpayer has an adequate remedy at law.⁸⁰

In accordance with statutes conferring the right a taxpayer may sue, in a proper case, to restrain municipal authorities from wasting, or from making a wrongful use or expenditure of, municipal funds. In some jurisdictions the statutes merely recognize and regulate an existing right.

Inspection fees

Where city ordinance providing for compulsory inspection of motor vehicles also provided for allocation of inspection fees to the expense of carrying out the provisions of the or-

ture will warrant a suit by a taxpayer,⁸⁶ and, although it is not necessary for plaintiff to show that he will suffer peculiar injury,⁸⁷ plaintiff must show some threatened injury or prejudice to his rights as a taxpayer or to the rights of the municipality.⁸⁸ Thus, where the suit is to prevent payment from a public fund and no waste is shown, it must appear that the act is such as to imperil the public interests or is calculated to work public injury or to produce some other mischief,⁸⁹ but the fact that the act complained of is prohibited by statute and is against public policy indicates that it is likely to produce some public mischief.⁹⁰ Moreover, an injunction may be refused where to grant it would produce inequitable results.⁹¹ The fact that the municipal authorities do not contemplate the making of certain expenditures which are questioned in a suit is sufficient to warrant the refusal of an injunction.⁹²

Adequate remedy at law. Where a taxpayer has an adequate remedy at law he is not entitled to maintain a suit for an injunction.⁹³

Matters of discretion. Under a statutory provision for an action to enjoin waste of public funds, the courts cannot control acts within the discretion of public boards or officials in the absence of fraud, corruption, collusion, or palpable abuse;⁹⁴ nor will the courts interfere with matters which involve merely questions as to policy, wisdom, or judgment.⁹⁵

As a general rule, authorities of a municipal corporation may be enjoined at the suit of taxpayers from paying out money of the municipality on a claim or an alleged indebtedness which is illegal or unauthorized.

As a general rule, sometimes by virtue of statutes, authorities of a municipal corporation may be enjoined at the suit of taxpayers from paying out money of the municipality on a claim² or an alleged indebtedness³ which is illegal or unauthorized. The view has been taken that an injunction will not be granted for every technical irregularity⁴ or where its effect would be inequitable rather than equitable.⁵ A payment which the municipality may lawfully make will not be enjoined,⁶ and according to some authorities, if the claim or indebtedness is just and equitable and based on a benefit to the public so that its payment cannot be said to be prejudicial to the rights of taxpayers, the payment will not be enjoined although there may be some doubt as to the authority of the municipality or some irregularity in the proceedings;⁷ but, where the claim is clearly unauthorized or illegal, the fact that claimant may have rendered services or incurred expenses in good faith in reliance on the authority of the municipality is not necessarily a ground for refusing to enjoin its payment.⁸ An injunction will not be granted at the suit of a taxpayer to prevent a payment where the matters involved are within the discretion of the municipal authorities, in the absence of fraud, collusion, or abuse of discretion.⁹

b. Payments under Contracts

As a general rule, taxpayers may enjoin payments under illegal or unauthorized contracts or payments in excess of the amount due under a contract.

As a general rule, sometimes by reason of statutory authorization, taxpayers may enjoin payments under illegal or unauthorized contracts¹⁰ or payments in excess of the amount due under a contract;¹¹ but the taxpayer asserting such right must bring himself within the established rules.¹² An injunction will not be granted where it is not shown that the contract, or the proposed payment thereunder, is illegal, unauthorized, or otherwise wrongful,¹³ or where the contract provision under which payment is to be made is within the discretion of the municipal authorities and no fraud or abuse of discretion is shown.¹⁴

Contract made before appropriation

A contract whereby home rule city engaged engineering firm to make scientific reappraisal of all the property in the city for tax purposes was valid although no appropriation had been made to pay for the services to be rendered, and where there was no evidence of any intent to pay any sums until an appropriation had been made, injunction would not issue to restrain city from making payments on the contract.—Conroy v. Injury to municipality or taxpayer; benefits. The necessity for showing that the rights of the municipality or of taxpayers will be prejudiced by the proposed payment has been recognized,¹⁵ and payments under a valid contract will not be enjoined merely because of an informality in the bond of the contractor where no showing of injury either to the public or to the taxpayer is made or suggested.¹⁶ The fact that payments under an illegal contract are to be made out of a general fund of the municipality is sufficient to show that plaintiff taxpayer will sustain injury,¹⁷ and a taxpayer is not required to show a direct personal loss.¹⁸

In some jurisdictions the fact that the contractor has fully or partially performed¹⁹ and that the municipality has received benefits under an illegal or unauthorized contract²⁰ is not a ground for refusing an injunction, even though the contractor performed in good faith,²¹ at least where the illegality is in respect of a matter which is not within the general powers of municipalities²² or where a statute expressly prohibits the act complained of.²³

On the other hand, an injunction has been refused as to benefits actually received by the municipality²⁴ where the other party to the contract performed in good faith²⁵ and without notice of the invalidity of the contract,²⁶ and the contract was not ultra vires,²⁷ or even though the contract was ultra vires.²⁸

As a general rule, either under statute or independently of statute, the authorities of a municipal corporation may be enjoined at the suit of taxpayers from paying out money of the municipality on illegal or unauthorized warrants²⁹ or on void municipal bonds³⁰ or notes;³¹ but the evidence of indebtedness or the debt must actually be illegal,³² and threatened injury or loss to the taxpayer must be shown,³³ in order to entitle the taxpayer to an

Funds not allocated to another purpose

A taxpayer of a city was without interest and without right of action to enjoin treasurer of city from performing ministerial duty by payment of voucher for newspaper advertising under valid contract, where amount in city treasury not allocated to any other fund or purpose was more than sufficient to pay voucher, since payment of voucher could not cost taxpayer any amount in additional taxes and taxpayer could not recover taxes already paid, and hence would not be injured by action of treasurer in paying voucher.—Wilkinson v. Poag, La.App., 181 So. 27.

injunction. According to some cases, where the municipality has received and uses or retains moneys received from the disposition of illegal bonds³⁴ or notes,³⁵ an injunction will not lie in respect of the moneys so retained or used; nor will it lie against the payment of bonds, issued for a legal purpose, solely on the ground that the municipal authorities made an illegal use of the proceeds.³⁶ It has also been held that a taxpayer is not entitled to restrain the payment of warrants given for public improvements where the grounds for the injunction are based, not on lack of power by the city, but on irregularities in procedure.³⁷

The legislature has the power to confer on taxpayers the right to injunctive relief against the municipality's payment of securities which are payable from sources other than funds raised by taxation,³⁸ but the intention of the legislature to do so must be clearly expressed,³⁹ and a statute which merely authorizes a taxpayer to enjoin the payment of bonds or warrants from funds raised by taxation does not apply to obligations payable from other sources.⁴⁰

Judgments. Municipal authorities may be enjoined from paying a judgment if it was fraudulently or collusively obtained;⁴¹ but in the absence of fraud or collusion, if the liability of the municipality has been established by the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, it cannot be relitigated in a court of equity and its payment enjoined at the suit of a taxpayer.⁴²

d. Payment of Salary or Compensation to Officer, Agent, or Employee

In general, the right of a taxpayer to sue to enjoin the payment of salary to the incumbent of a municipal office has been denied where the granting of relief will involve a trial of the title to office; but the right of a taxpayer to prevent payments to a person who is neither an officer de jure nor de facto has been recognized or upheld.

ment of an excessive amount is threatened,⁴⁹ or where there is an invalid contract between the municipality and an officer in respect of the manner of determining his compensation.⁵⁰ The fact that incumbent did not take an oath of office has been regarded as insufficient to support a suit to enjoin a payment of salary, where the statutory provision for taking the oath is merely directory.⁵¹

Where the matter of payment of salary is within the discretion of the municipal authorities, an injunction will not be granted.⁵² The right to an injunction has been denied where plaintiff does not show injury to the taxpayers⁵³ and where services have actually been performed under claim of right and color of title;⁵⁴ but an injunction has been granted as to a payment for services already rendered under an invalid contract as to the method of determining the compensation.⁵⁵

In New York a taxpayer has the right, under Civil Service Law § 28, to maintain an action for an injunction to restrain the payment of salaries to persons who have been illegally employed and continued in their positions.⁵⁶ The action cannot be maintained where it involves primarily and directly a determination as to title and where such title depends on extraneous and disputable facts,⁵⁷ but the fact that a question as to title is collaterally involved does not prevent the maintenance of the action,⁵⁸ and, if otherwise maintainable, an action will lie where the question as to title turns on the construction or validity of a statutory provision,⁵⁹ or on admitted facts⁶⁰ or indisputable records;⁶¹ where in such situations it clearly appears that the incumbent is not entitled to the office or position, the court should enjoin payments of salary or compensation⁶² as illegal and a waste of the public funds,⁶³ and no special damage need be shown.⁶⁴

A taxpayer may sue to restrain the illegal payment of a salary under a general statute permitting taxpayers to sue to restrain an illegal expenditure of public funds,⁶⁵ but a showing that injury would result to the municipality or taxpayers from the proposed payment must be made.⁶⁶ A plain case should be established by plaintiff,⁶⁷ and an action will not lie to prevent the payment of salary to a person duly appointed, merely because such person is given an improper assignment to duty.⁶⁸

quire the property for the purpose proposed⁷⁰ or where no provision has been made for the creation of a fund for the discharge of the indebtedness which would result, as required by constitutional provision.⁷¹

Matters of discretion, policy, or judgment. Where municipal authorities are authorized to purchase property, a court of equity will not interfere with the exercise of their discretion in the absence of fraud or collusion or manifest abuse of their powers;⁷² but the court may properly grant an injunction where the conduct of the municipal authorities amounts to a manifest abuse of their discretion or a fraud on the rights of taxpayers.⁷³ While it has been held that the intention to pay a grossly excessive purchase price will, in connection with other circumstances, constitute a ground for injunction,⁷⁴ ordinarily the court will not base its action solely on the amount of the purchase price.⁷⁵

Necessity of showing illegality or other wrong, and injury. Plaintiff is not entitled to an injunction in the absence of a showing that the act complained of is illegal, unauthorized, or otherwise wrongful,⁷⁶ and that an injury or loss will result.⁷⁷ Where an action is statutory, plaintiff must bring his case within the statutory provisions.⁷⁸

- a. In general
- b. Statutory provisions

a. In General

As a general rule, in most jurisdictions a taxpayer may, independently of express statutory authorization, sue to enjoin an unauthorized or illegal disposition, or an illegal or unauthorized use, of municipal property other than money or other funds.

As a general rule, in most jurisdictions a taxpayer may, independently of express statutory authorization, sue to enjoin an unauthorized or illegal disposition,⁷⁹ or an illegal or unauthorized use,⁸⁰ of municipal property other than money or other funds. Accordingly, a taxpayer may sue to enjoin the municipality from wrongfully leasing municipal property,⁸¹ from drilling oil wells on land used for a street,⁸² from permitting the use of a park for other than park purposes,⁸³ or from illegally assigning a tax certificate without lawful consideration.⁸⁴

use of municipal property,⁸⁵ but where both the state and the municipality concur in the disposition or use of the property a suit for an injunction may lie at the instance of a taxpayer.⁸⁶ It has also been held that a taxpayer is entitled to maintain an action to enjoin the city from using property in a manner which may subject it to forfeiture for failure to comply with the conditions on which it was conveyed to the city.⁸⁷

Necessity of showing illegality and injury. A taxpayer cannot sue where the proposed act is not illegal, unauthorized, or otherwise wrongful.⁸⁸ The fact that the municipality had no power to acquire the property does not entitle a taxpayer to an injunction to restrain its sale,⁸⁹ and a proposed unauthorized use of a municipal building is not of itself ground for enjoining the completion of the building.⁹⁰ The necessity of showing that the rights of taxpayers will be injuriously affected by the act complained of has been recognized,⁹¹ although the injury shown need not be special or peculiar to plaintiff.⁹² Ordinarily a suit will not lie where the commission of the act complained of is not imminent.⁹³

Matters of discretion, policy, or judgment. A court of equity will not interfere at the suit of a taxpayer to restrain the authorities of a municipal corporation in the exercise of their discretionary powers with regard to the control or disposition of property of the municipality, in the absence of fraud or clear abuse of their authority.⁹⁴ So the court will not interfere on the ground of inadequacy of the price to be received from the sale or lease of the property if no fraud or abuse of discretion is shown.⁹⁵

b. Statutory Provisions

In the absence of statutory authorization, in some jurisdictions a taxpayer cannot sue to prevent waste or wrongful disposition or use of, or injury to, municipal property, but he may do so in a proper case where the right is conferred by statute.

Inconsequential injury

Possible interference with recreational uses of four thousand acres of park property for duration of emergency as result of use of one hundred and sixty acres of the park property for temporary housing purposes to help meet the emergency housing shortage caused by necessities of war having retarded construction of sufficient housing would be too inconsequential to justify interference therewith by the courts by issuance of an injunction on a taxpayer's application.—Griffith v. of is wrongful.⁹⁹ Ordinarily the mere illegality of the act is insufficient as the basis for an injunction,¹ where neither the public, the municipality, nor the taxpayers have sustained loss or injury;² but under a statute which permits an injunction merely if the act is an "illegal official act," it has been held that an injunction will not be refused on the ground that it is not shown that there will be a waste of, or actual injury to, the municipal property.³ The terms "waste" and "injury," used in a statute, have been held not to comprehend individual acts, but only illegal, wrongful, and dishonest acts of public officials.⁴ Where the issue involved is moot, an injunction will not be granted.⁵

Matters of discretion, policy, or judgment. The court will not interfere with matters which are within the discretion of the municipal authorities, in the absence of abuse or fraud,⁶ nor will they interfere with matters which involve merely questions as to policy, wisdom, or judgment.⁷

§ 2153. Grant or Exercise of Franchises, Rights, or Privileges

In a number of jurisdictions it has been held that a taxpayer may sue to restrain the illegal or unauthorized grant, sale, or carrying out of a franchise or other privilege by the municipal authorities, and also to restrain the grantee of a franchise or permit from enjoying, or from operating under, it; but there is authority holding that a suit by a taxpayer to restrain the exercise of a franchise is not the proper remedy where there is a claim that the ordinance granting the franchise is illegal.

remedy where there is a claim that the ordinance granting the franchise is illegal and was improperly enacted.¹²

Legislative functions. In some cases the rule is laid down that the courts will not enjoin the enactment of ordinances involving franchises on the ground that in the particular instance the governing body would be exercising a legislative function,¹³ as, for example, an ordinance recognizing or granting the right to use of the streets;¹⁴ but it has been held that the rule has no application in a suit to enjoin the issuance of street railway certificates secured by a mortgage covering the franchises and property owned by the municipality and granting the right to operate in case of default by the municipality.¹⁵

Matters of discretion, policy, or judgment. The courts will not interfere in the exercise of discretionary powers by municipal authorities in the absence of fraud or palpable abuse.¹⁶

Wrongfulness, injury, or loss; interest of plaintiff. Plaintiff must show that the proposed grant or exercise of a franchise or privilege is illegal, unauthorized, or otherwise wrongful,¹⁷ and in suits under a statute the act complained of must be brought within the provisions of the statute.¹⁸ City officials will not be restrained from interfering with the use of streets by a company without a franchise.¹⁹ Moreover, no injunction will be granted in the absence of a threatened loss or injury to the municipality or to the taxpayers.²⁰ A taxpayer has not necessarily such an interest under a franchise of a public utility corporation as will permit the maintenance of a suit by him to enjoin the repeal of such franchise²¹ and the grant of another franchise covering the same subject matter.²² A taxpayer cannot, by a suit for an injunction, challenge the validity of a franchise ordinance giving the city an option to purchase an electric plant where the plant, if acquired, would cost the taxpayers nothing.²³

§ 2154. Elections; Selection for Office

In some jurisdictions taxpayers may sue to enjoin the holding of an illegal or unauthorized election, but in other jurisdictions the rule is otherwise.

Where an election for the determination of certain questions, other than the selection of officers, would be illegal or unauthorized, the right of taxpayers to sue to prevent by injunction the holding of such election has been recognized or upheld²⁴ on the ground that municipal funds will be expended in the performance of the act of which complaint is made.²⁵ Even though the cost of the election is to be defrayed by private interests, the election may be enjoined under a statute which authorizes a taxpayer to restrain illegal official acts which are detrimental to public interests.²⁶ In order that an in-

Election of municipal officers. In some jurisdictions it has been held that a taxpayer may enjoin the holding of an election for a municipal office where the election would be illegal,³⁰ and that a taxpayer is entitled to an injunction to prevent election officers from printing on the ballots the names of candidates for certain offices where such offices are not elective offices³¹ and from holding an election of officers in subdivisions of the municipality which are wrongfully constituted.³² The basis for the right is that the holding of the illegal election would be a useless expenditure of public funds.³³ In other jurisdictions it has been held that a taxpayer, as such, has no right to an injunction to restrain election officers or other public authorities from holding an election for the selection of officers³⁴ or from holding an election for the

The general rule that a taxpayer may, in a proper case, sue to enjoin illegal acts of municipal authorities, as discussed supra §§ 2139, 2140, has been applied so as to permit a taxpayer to sue to enjoin a number of miscellaneous acts or transactions of municipal authorities,³⁷ such as the continuance of an illegal requirement pertaining to printing for the city,³⁸ the enforcement of an ordinance licensing as games of skill certain devices used for gambling purposes,³⁹ unauthorized examination of

(1) It has been held that the mere fact that the holding of an election involves some expense and therefore indirectly may affect all taxpayers does not entitle taxpayers as such to maintain action to enjoin the placing of a measure on a ballot at ensuing city election.—Portland General Elec. Co. v. Judd, 198 P.2d 605.

39. Ohio.—State ex rel. Sergi v. City of Youngstown, 40 N.E.2d 477, 68 Ohio App. 254, appeal dismissed 32 N.E.2d 852, 138 Ohio St. 123.

civil service employees,⁴⁰ the completion of an attempt to change boundaries or to incorporate another municipality on the ground of lack of jurisdiction,⁴¹ permitting ineligible persons to occupy houses provided by public housing projects,⁴² conducting a retail business without statutory authorization,⁴³ or installation of parking meters in violation of statute.⁴⁴ A taxpayer may restrain an examination of the city's financial affairs by the state comptroller where it is not being conducted in compliance with statute.⁴⁵

Interest, injury, or loss. The rule that interest or injury must be shown in order to entitle a taxpayer to sue for an injunction, considered supra § 2143, has been applied in suits by a taxpayer to restrain the municipal authorities from destroying slot machines,⁴⁶ from discharging municipal employees,⁴⁷ from enforcing a traffic regulation,⁴⁸ from infringing patents on paving materials,⁴⁹ from installing parking meters,⁵⁰ from operating a wholesale produce market,⁵¹ from permitting a police band to play in competition with private musicians,⁵² or from vacating a street.⁵³

b. Holding Office or Exercising Functions

A taxpayer as such cannot sue to enjoin a de facto officer from holding, or exercising the functions of, a municipal office.

A taxpayer as such cannot sue to enjoin a de facto officer from holding, or exercising the functions of, a municipal office.⁵⁴ The right to sue is properly denied on the ground that the suit is one to test the title to office.⁵⁵

4. ACTIONS OR PROCEEDINGS

§ 2156. In General

The nature and form of the remedy available to taxpayers seeking to prevent or redress municipal wrongs, conditions precedent, parties, etc., are discussed infra §§ 2157-2172. Actions by or against municipal corporations generally are discussed infra §§ 2186-2214.

Examine Pocket Parts for later cases.

§ 2157. Nature and Form of Action or Proceeding

Taxpayers' suits are generally equitable in nature.

Ordinarily taxpayers' suits, even where statutory, are equitable ones,⁵⁶ as, for example, the remedy of a taxpayer who seeks to contest the validity of the actions of municipal authorities,⁵⁷ including the prevention of unauthorized acts by them,⁵⁸ suits to cancel, set aside, or invalidate certain instruments or transactions, discussed supra §§ 2127-2136, and suits for injunctions, discussed supra §§ 2139-2155. Likewise, suits by taxpayers to enforce liability on behalf of the municipality for funds or other property wrongfully disposed of or taken usually are regarded as equitable ones,⁵⁹ in which equitable principles apply;⁶⁰ and it has been held that a common-law action for the use of the municipality to recover from municipal officers money misappropriated by such officers cannot be maintained.⁶¹ In some jurisdictions, however, a taxpayer's remedy to recover property for the municipality is by action at law.⁶² A taxpayer's suit for an injunction cannot be used as a substitute for a statutory appeal which is available to review municipal action.⁶³

Class or representative suit. Usually a taxpayer's suit is regarded as a class or representative suit,⁶⁴ and is designed to protect the interests of all taxpayers;⁶⁵ but in a suit under a statute the rule has been laid down that plaintiff is not suing on behalf of the public or in the interest of the public, but in his own name for the protection of his own property.⁶⁶

Petition or motion. It has been held that taxpayers who seek to set aside judgments against the municipality should proceed by petition and not by motion.⁶⁷

§ 2158. Conditions Precedent

- a. In general
- b. Security for costs
- c. Request for, and refusal of, action by municipal authorities

a. In General

Compliance with conditions precedent is essential to the maintenance of a taxpayer's suit.

Before a taxpayer may bring a representative taxpayer's suit it is essential that conditions precedent to the maintenance of the action have been complied with.⁶⁸ The requirement of a charter for the filing of a notice showing the nature and amount of a claim before a bill in equity thereon can be maintained against the municipality, discussed infra § 2199, has been held inapplicable to a taxpayer's suit to restrain the unlawful appropriation of public funds.⁶⁹ Realty taxpayers, suing for themselves and others similarly situated, cannot maintain a suit to enjoin the enforcement of a tax execution and to restrain tax sales on the ground that the assessors discriminated against realty and in favor of personalty in fixing the basis of value for taxation, without tendering amounts equal to the taxes which would have been due on realty if it had been assessed at the lowest proportion of value applied to personalty.⁷⁰

b. Security for Costs

Security for costs must be given in taxpayers' suits under some statutes.

In some jurisdictions the statutes require that plaintiff taxpayer shall give security for costs,⁷¹ sometimes in the form of a bond.⁷² The bond for costs need not necessarily contain provision for the payment of damages arising from an injunction pendente lite.⁷³ The court may permit a filing of the bond nunc pro tunc.⁷⁴ Failure to file the requisite bond justifies dismissal of the suit.⁷⁵

ities to act are frequently conditions precedent to a taxpayer's suit in behalf of a municipal corporation.

If it appears that the municipal authorities are ready and willing to take the steps necessary to protect the interests of the municipality and of the taxpayers, ordinarily, as discussed supra § 2138, the latter have no right to sue to protect such interests; therefore it is usually held that taxpayers may not maintain an action to recover on account of, or to compel an accounting for, municipal funds or other municipal property wrongfully misappropriated, taken, or held, in the absence of a showing that the proper municipal authorities have failed or refused to act after request by taxpayers;⁷⁶ and a like rule has been recognized in a suit to set aside a fraudulent conveyance of municipal property.⁷⁷ So the right of a taxpayer to sue to restrain alleged improper acts of municipal authorities has been denied where it was not shown that he had first sought to have the proper municipal authorities perform their duty.⁷⁸

On the other hand, a demand on the municipality to perform its duty has been held unnecessary as a condition precedent to a suit by a taxpayer to restrain the performance of an illegal act,⁷⁹ nor is a demand necessary as a condition to the institution of a suit to declare an ordinance invalid,⁸⁰ nor, it has been held, is it necessary first to request the law officer of the municipality to bring the action.⁸¹ No demand is necessary where the circumstances are such as to indicate affirmatively that such a request would be unavailing,⁸² as where the municipality is in control of officers who participated in the wrongdoing involved in the suit⁸³ or where the official on whom the demand must be made is the one whose acts are sought to be prevented or redressed.⁸⁴

Where a request to sue is necessary, it should be directed to the municipal officers who have authority to initiate litigation,⁸⁵ and it must be signed by the requisite number of qualified taxpayers⁸⁶ and be served as required by statute.⁸⁷ Where there are no technical requirements as to the contents of the notice or demand specified by statute, it must be sufficient fairly to advise the municipal officers of the matters complained of and the action demanded,⁸⁸ and generally be sufficient in form and substance to serve its purpose.⁸⁹ It must not be

Demand which challenges attention of public officers receiving the demand to an irregularity of expenditure or to an illegal or fraudulent contract or disbursement of public moneys, and demanding suit, is sufficient under statute in absence of an affirmative showing that substantial rights of public officers have been prejudiced by reason of fault or omission of demand.—State ex rel.

so indefinite as to mislead,⁹⁰ but absolute completeness of detail or technical accuracy is unnecessary if it is otherwise sufficient.⁹¹

Under the Ohio statute, before a taxpayer may sue to enjoin certain acts of, or abuses of corporate powers by, municipal authorities, the municipal solicitor must be requested in writing to sue, and must have failed or refused to act;⁹² but the requirement does not apply where the municipality has no solicitor,⁹³ or where plaintiff is suing not as a taxpayer to protect the public interest but to protect a private interest which the act sought to be enjoined will affect,⁹⁴ or where plaintiff sues as a water rent payer and not as a taxpayer.⁹⁵ Substantial compliance by the solicitor with the taxpayer's demand is essential to the end that the court will have presented to it all the issues of law and fact so that a full and complete adjudication may be had.⁹⁶ The failure to sue contemplated by the statute can be predicated only on a refusal to act or an actual failure to do so beyond a reasonable time required for investigation⁹⁷ and prosecution.⁹⁸ The solicitor may sue in the name of taxpayers with their consent without being requested by them in writing to do so.⁹⁹ The provisions of the statutes are held to be remedial and as such are to be liberally construed to accomplish the purpose for which they are designed.¹

§ 2159. Defenses and Loss of Right to Relief

- a. In general
- b. Estoppel or waiver
- c. Effect of prior, pending, or subsequent action or proceeding

a. In General

Defenses which might have been available against a municipal corporation had it instituted suit are available in a taxpayer's suit instituted on failure of the municipality to sue.

In addition to various matters constituting defenses in taxpayers' actions which have been discussed supra §§ 2122-2155, any defense which might be interposed in an action by the municipality is available in a taxpayer's suit brought after failure of the municipality to bring the action.² However, a contractor who has proceeded with full or presumptive knowledge of the invalidity of the contract cannot rely on equitable defenses in an action by a taxpayer to recover back on behalf of the municipality money paid under the illegal contract.³ The contractor is not relieved of his obligation by having employed another to do the work under the contract being attacked.⁴

In a suit to enjoin a municipal officer from making payments for an unauthorized purpose, defendant officer cannot set up a defense that the person to whom the payment is to be made has acted in good faith and in ignorance of the want of capacity on the part of the municipality.⁵ Where relief is sought in a taxpayer's suit on the ground that the municipality has exceeded its debt limits, whether such limits have been extended as permitted by statute is a matter of defense to be set up by the municipality.⁶ In a taxpayer's suit to enjoin a bond issue, in which the attorney general appeared to give the court jurisdiction to try the issues involved, the fact that the attorney general had theretofore approved the validity of such bonds cannot be urged as a defense.⁷ Defenses available to a municipality in a taxpayer's suit to restrain the municipality from paying certain warrants may be available in an action to restrain payment of bonds issued to refund such warrants.⁸

b. Estoppel or Waiver

Estoppel or waiver, under some circumstances, may bar relief in a taxpayer's suit.

Where the rights of persons who have dealt with the municipality in good faith are involved, the view has been taken that taxpayers may by acquiescence, in the acts complained of be precluded from obtaining relief.⁹ This rule has been applied in a suit to prevent payments to a contractor for work done,¹⁰ and also in an action to recover from a person who has dealt with the municipality moneys which were received in good faith by such person for benefits conferred on the municipality.¹¹ So taxpayers may be estopped by acquiescence to object to the levy of a tax to pay for an improvement which has already been completed.¹² However, in order that an estoppel may be available, the essential elements thereof must be present.¹³

On the other hand, it has been held that no rule of estoppel can operate against a taxpayer so as to validate a void thing,¹⁴ and there is authority for the view that inaction or failure to object,¹⁵ even where coupled with certain acts which might be construed as indicating assent,¹⁶ does not necessarily deprive a taxpayer of the right subsequently to sue. Thus the mere fact that plaintiff taxpayer participated in certain unauthorized or illegal acts of municipal authorities preliminary to certain payments does not prevent him ultimately from suing to prevent such payments.¹⁷ Moreover, the mere fact that such taxpayer had knowledge of such preliminary acts,¹⁸ or that he had knowledge of, and did not object to, the payments,¹⁹ does not estop him to sue to compel the municipal officers to refund the amount of the improper payment. The fact that a taxpayer did not take any action with respect to previous illegal or unauthorized acts similar to the acts complained of by him in a suit for an injunction does not preclude his maintaining such suit.²⁰ An estoppel, from acquiescence and the enjoyment of benefits, against plaintiff taxpayer to prevent him from suing to annul a levy for, and to enjoin the collection of, a special tax may not be indulged where the condition on which the tax was voted has not been complied with and the tax has not been earned.²¹ Where some of the complaining taxpayers are not estopped to sue in a representative capacity, a decree granting an injunction has been upheld.²²

Under some statutes the pendency of an action by a taxpayer does not prevent another taxpayer from instituting an action involving the same subject matter.

There is authority for the view that the pendency of an action brought by one taxpayer does not prevent the prosecution of an action by another taxpayer involving the same transaction.²³ However, under some statutes, where one taxpayer sues on behalf of the municipality on refusal of the municipal solicitor to do so, the pendency of such a suit is a bar to another suit by a different taxpayer for the same cause.²⁴ Where a municipality neglects to sue for money unlawfully expended by municipal officers, after demand by taxpayers, a taxpayer who sues has an interest in the cause of action which is not affected by the municipality's subsequent suit, and such subsequent suit does not constitute a defense to the taxpayer's suit.²⁵ The fact that a municipal officer has been directed by an order in mandamus to perform a certain act does not prevent a taxpayer's suit for an injunction against another officer who has wholly separate functions where the act which it is sought to restrain would tend further to complicate the situation.²⁶

§ 2160. Time to Sue; Limitations and Laches

- a. In general
- b. Delay in proceeding; laches
- c. Statutes of limitation

a. In General

A taxpayer need not wait until execution of a proposed undertaking before instituting suit if it appears reasonably certain that the municipal corporation will proceed unless enjoined.

Where it appears reasonably certain that the city officials will proceed with a proposed undertaking unless enjoined, the taxpayer is not obliged to wait until its execution before instituting suit.²⁷ Thus, it has been held that, in bringing suit to prevent an assessment against a municipality for its share of benefits from an improvement, a taxpayer does not proceed prematurely for the protection of the rights of the taxpayers as a whole where the improvement was completed and accepted before the suit was brought;²⁸ moreover, although no assessment against the city as a whole has been made, where the improvement has been completed and accepted, plaintiff may sue to prevent the levy of a tax against the property of the taxpayers generally,²⁹ or to prevent payments for such improvement,³⁰ on the ground that a debt in excess of the legal limit has been created. Likewise, it is not necessary for the taxpayer to postpone an action until the municipality is about to pay out money under the contract complained of.³¹

A suit for an injunction has been regarded as premature, however, where there were certain preliminaries to be performed before there would be imminent danger of the performance of the act complained of, in the case of a suit to enjoin the execution of a contract,³² and of a suit to prevent certain expenditures,³³ and also of a suit to enjoin the issuance of bonds.³⁴ Under a statute requiring that there shall be a request that the proper municipal officers shall sue and a refusal of such request before suit is brought by a taxpayer, discussed supra § 2158 c, the right to sue does not accrue before the performance of such requirement;³⁵ if the officer on whom demand is made is entitled to a reasonable time in which to act on the demand, a taxpayer's suit brought before the lapse of such time is premature.³⁶

Laches may bar a taxpayer's right to relief in a taxpayers' suit.

Taxpayers seeking to contest municipal action by a taxpayers' suit are generally required to act promptly,³⁷ and under general rules it is usually held that the right of taxpayers to equitable re-

More than ordinary promptness is relief,³⁸ including relief by injunction,³⁹ may be lost by laches. Similarly, under general rules, certiorari by a taxpayer to review acts of municipal authorities may be barred by delay in proceeding where conditions have changed during the period of such delay.⁴⁰ Moreover, a rule to show cause sought by a taxpayer in connection with the award of a municipal contract has been refused on the ground of laches.⁴¹

There is, however, authority for the view that the doctrine of equitable estoppel by laches is rarely applied in taxpayers' suits,⁴² and that all taxpayers of the municipality cannot be estopped by the laches of some of them.⁴³ Moreover, a person who might be precluded by laches from using a judicial remedy in respect of municipal acts, to protect his individual interests, may still be recognized as competent to sue to prevent the illegal use of municipal funds.⁴⁴ Delay in bringing suit has been regarded as not fatal where the transaction involved was fraudulent and void.⁴⁵

Where laches is available as a defense, the essential elements thereof must be present to charge a taxpayer therewith.⁴⁶ Thus, in order to charge a taxpayer with laches, it must appear that he had notice or knowledge of the facts on which his suit is based,⁴⁷ and it has been held that constructive notice is not sufficient.⁴⁸ It has also been held, however, that, for the purpose of determining laches, a taxpayer may be charged with knowledge of facts which he must have known.⁴⁹ Laches cannot be asserted to defeat the action if the situation has not changed during the delay and no injury has resulted therefrom.⁵⁰ The right to rely on the plea of laches in a suit to enjoin an expenditure by a municipal officer for an unauthorized purpose to persons not entitled to receive the payment has been denied on the grounds that the injunction would not injure such officer and would benefit the municipality.⁵¹ Taxpayers who sue to prevent the disbursement of public money under a void contract are not estopped merely because they did not commence their suit until the completion of the work.⁵² A contractor with the municipality cannot rely on alleged laches of plaintiff taxpayer where such contractor proceeded under the contract with due notice of illegality and for the purpose of inviting litigation.⁵³

Rescission of contract

The right to the rescission of a contract merely because of the inadequacy of the consideration is lost by a long delay in the bringing of not⁵⁵ chargeable with laches.

c. Statutes of Limitation

Taxpayers' suits must be instituted within the time prescribed by constitutional or statutory provision.

A taxpayers' suit attacking municipal action must be instituted within the time prescribed by constitutional or statutory provisions,⁵⁶ as in the case of a suit contesting the validity of a bond issue⁵⁷ or the payment of a bond issue,⁵⁸ or one seeking to enjoin performance of a municipal contract,⁵⁹ or one attacking a municipal election.⁶⁰ Certain statutes of limitations have been held to be⁶¹ or not to be⁶² applicable to taxpayers' actions.

§ 2161. Jurisdiction and Venue

In the absence of statute, general rules apply in determining the jurisdiction and venue of a taxpayers' suit.

Some statutes conferring on taxpayers the right to sue specify the courts which are to have jurisdiction.⁶³ Equity courts generally have jurisdiction of taxpayers' suits properly cognizable therein, such as suits for injunctive relief,⁶⁴ but the law courts have been held to be the proper courts for the recovery of money on behalf of the municipality by a taxpayer's action.⁶⁵ The view has been taken that certain statutes conferring the right to sue do not confer on courts of equity jurisdiction over subjects which have always been excluded from their cognizance.⁶⁶ Thus, where there is available to the taxpayer an adequate remedy at law, equity cannot take jurisdiction.⁶⁷ Some statutes limiting the jurisdiction of courts to issue injunctions against the erection or use of public works have been construed as applicable to taxpayers' suits.⁶⁸

Jurisdictional amount. Under general rules, where the matter in dispute is less than the amount fixed by statute, an equity court will not take jurisdiction of a taxpayers' suit.⁶⁹ The amount is sufficient where the taxpayer's interest in a particu-suit where the position of the parties has changed and the municipality will not benefit by a rescission.—Sharrow v. City of Dania, 180 So. 18, 181 Fla. 641.

lar fund, or the threatened damage to his property by reason of the misuse of such fund, equals the amount specified,⁷⁰ or where a taxpayer owns property worth the amount specified which is threatened with sale, or liable to a lien, for a tax, in consequence of the proposed misuse.⁷¹

Venue. A suit to enjoin payments under an illegal contract and to declare the contract void should be commenced in the county in which the contract was made, as that county is the one in which the cause of action arose.⁷² Under some statutes the action must be brought in the county where the defendant, against whom substantial relief is sought, resides, and an action brought in any other county may be dismissed on demurrer.⁷³ Parties against whom the relief sought is merely incidental to that sought against others are treated as nominal parties in determining the proper venue under such statutes.⁷⁴

All persons whose presence are essential to a complete determination of the controversy must be made parties to a taxpayers' suit.

In accordance with general rules, all persons who are interested in the subject matter of the suit and whose rights are to be affected by the judgment or decree to be rendered therein or whose presence is essential to a complete determination of the controversy must be made parties to a taxpayers' suit.⁷⁵ On the other hand, persons whose rights or interests are in no way involved in the suit and cannot be affected by any judgment therein are neither necessary nor proper parties thereto.⁷⁶

In a purely statutory proceeding the express provisions of the statute as to who may or must be made parties must be strictly followed.⁷⁷

b. Plaintiffs in General

A taxpayers' suit may usually be brought in the name of one taxpayer on behalf of all the taxpayers.

It is usually held that, where the rights of taxpayers as such are directly affected, suits may be brought by them in their own names,⁷⁸ but in some jurisdictions the rule is otherwise in the absence of statutory authorization, as discussed supra § 2140. Where the right to sue exists, one or more of the taxpayers as plaintiffs may be permitted to represent the other taxpayers.⁷⁹ It should, however, appear that the suit is brought on behalf of all taxpayers as well as those who are parties.⁸⁰ Where the municipality and the counsel have been made parties defendant in a suit to restrain an unlawful expenditure by certain officers, the municipality and members of the council are not entitled to a transfer to the position of plaintiffs.⁸¹

Persons not residents or taxpayers cannot, under statute requiring every action to be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, complain of the invalidity of an ordinance by a city of the third class not the county seat, or of its action in creating an indebtedness for the securing of the holding of the circuit court therein.—Patterson v. In Ohio suits under statute may be brought in the name of the taxpayer,⁸² and, as discussed infra subdivision e of this section, it is not necessary for him to sue in the name of the solicitor. However, the suit must be on behalf of the municipality.⁸³ The fact that a suit which is not brought under a statute is in the name of the municipality on relation of the taxpayer instead of in the name of the taxpayer for the use of the municipality, or on behalf of all the taxpayers of the village, does not require a denial of relief,⁸⁴ but the court may treat the suit as one in the name of the taxpayer on behalf of the municipality.⁸⁵

c. Defendants in General

Persons who are interested in the subject matter of the action and may be affected by the decree may be made defendants in a taxpayers' suit.

Under general rules, persons who are interested in the subject matter of the action and who may be affected by the decree or judgment may be made defendants⁸⁶ and, as discussed infra subdivision g of this section, may be joined as such. Thus, in an action against municipal officers, other persons who are necessary to a complete and binding judgment on everyone interested may be made defendants;⁸⁷ but this is only incidental to the cause of action against the officers.⁸⁸ Moreover, the enumeration in a taxpayers' statute of the persons against whom actions under it may be brought does not dispense with the necessity of bringing in as parties other persons who will be directly affected by the judgment and who are necessary parties to a complete determination of the controversy.⁸⁹

d. Municipality or State

The municipal corporation is a necessary party to a taxpayers' suit where its presence as a party is necessary to a complete determination of the case.

The propriety of making the municipality a party to an action under a taxpayers' statute has been recognized or upheld.⁹⁰ Moreover, in accordance with the general rule, under certain conditions the municipality may be a necessary party,⁹¹ as where the effect of the suit is to divest the municipality of its property,⁹² or where its presence as a party is necessary to a complete determination of the controversy,⁹³ as in a suit to set aside a conveyance of property already made to the municipality⁹⁴ or to set aside a contract of which it has received the consideration.⁹⁵ So the view has been taken that the municipality is a necessary party to a suit to cancel certain transfers or leases of municipal lands,⁹⁶ to enjoin payments to municipal employees,⁹⁷ to enjoin the creation of a debt,⁹⁸ to enjoin the issuance of bonds,⁹⁹ and to enjoin the collection of a tax for the payment of bonds.¹ It has been held that the municipality is a necessary party to a suit to prevent the making of a contract;² but there is also authority to the contrary.³

The municipality has been regarded as a necessary party to a suit to restrain the performance of a contract,⁴ including payments under a contract;⁵

but, where no relief is sought against the municipality or its presence is not necessary to a complete determination of the controversy, it is not a necessary party to a suit to enjoin the contractor from performing;⁶ and where there is no attempt to divest the municipality of any right or to impose any liability on it, and no relief against it is sought, it is not an indispensable party to an action to enjoin municipal officers from making an unauthorized purchase.⁷ Moreover, it has been laid down that the municipality should be made a party to an action to recover funds or personal property wrongfully taken or misapplied;⁸ but the view has also been taken, in the case of an action under a statute to compel the restoration of municipal funds or other property, that the municipality is not a necessary party,⁹ although in such case it has been regarded as a proper party.¹⁰

State or people. Ordinarily the taxpayer need not sue in the name of the state,¹¹ and under some statutes it is error to sue in the name of the state on the relation of the taxpayer.¹² However, the right of taxpayers to maintain a suit in the name of the people on behalf of themselves and other taxpayers interested to compel a municipal officer to account for certain taxes collected by him has been upheld.¹³ Under some statutes an action may be maintained by taxpayers in the name of the state for the penalty imposed because of the wrongful disposal of municipal funds or other property,¹⁴ where the prescribed conditions precedent, discussed supra § 2158, have been performed; but such an action cannot be maintained in the name of the state on relation of the county attorney.¹⁵ In a suit under a statute it has been held that the state cannot be made a party defendant.¹⁶

The state has been held to be a necessary party to a taxpayer's suit to enjoin collection of a tax which involved the annexation of territory by the municipality only where the annexation is merely voidable; where the annexation involved is absolutely void as beyond the power of the municipality, the state is not a necessary party.¹⁷

e. Municipal or Other Public Officers

Municipal officers are proper parties to taxpayers' suits involving their acts, and may be necessary parties.

The propriety of making certain municipal officers parties to taxpayers' actions has been recognized or upheld,¹⁸ and under some statutes a municipal officer may be a party defendant to a suit to prevent an illegal act, although he may not be guilty of any culpable wrong.¹⁹ Moreover, certain municipal officers have been regarded as necessary parties to particular suits,²⁰ as, for example, a suit to enjoin the perpetration of ultra vires or illegal acts in general²¹ or to restrain enforcement of an illegal ordinance which it is the duty of the officer to enforce.²²

On the other hand, the view has been taken that, since an injunction against the municipality binds its officers and agents, the suit may be brought against the municipality alone without making its officers and agents parties.²³ So, where the primary duty to perform certain acts is on the council, agents who act for the council in discharge of such duties are not necessary parties to an action to compel performance thereof by the council.²⁴ There is also authority for the view that officers who have no further action to take in connection with the transaction complained of are not necessary parties to a suit for an injunction;²⁵ and that an officer who is indirectly interested in a transaction pursuant to which a conveyance of municipal property was made is not a necessary party to a suit to rescind the conveyance.²⁶ Moreover, it has been held that, in an action to recover municipal funds which have been misappropriated, the municipal officers entitled to the custody of such funds are not necessary parties.²⁷

Officers in power when suit brought. In a suit under a taxpayers' statute to enjoin the acts of municipal officers those acting as such at the time of the suit have been considered proper parties defendant,²⁸ and former incumbents, although they were the authors of the initial wrong, are neither necessary²⁹ nor proper³⁰ parties where affirmative relief is not sought against them personally.

Municipal officer as plaintiff taxpayer. The right of a municipal officer to sue in his individual capacity as a taxpayer has been recognized.³¹

Legal officer of municipality. In a suit under a statute it has been held not necessary for the taxpayer to sue in the name of the solicitor.³²

State officers. It is ordinarily held that a ratepayer's or taxpayer's action need not be brought by, or in the name of, the attorney general;³³ nor is it necessary that such officer should be made a party.³⁴ While in some jurisdictions the propriety of a suit by the state's attorney on the relation of a taxpayer has been recognized,³⁵ under some decisions therein it would appear that in such a suit certain relief usually obtainable in a taxpayer's suit cannot be granted.³⁶ Where the expenditure of certain funds by the municipality requires the approval of a specified state officer, such officer is a necessary party to an action to restrain such expenditure.³⁷

f. Contractors and Other Persons Dealing with Municipality or with Municipal Authorities

As a general rule, all persons dealing with the municipal corporation or its officers who are interested in the subject matter of the suit and whose rights will be affected by the decree should be made parties to a taxpayers' suit.

Under general rules, all persons dealing with the municipal corporation or with municipal officers, who are materially interested in the subject matter of a taxpayers' suit in equity should be made parties if their rights are to be affected by the decree.³⁸ Thus it is usually held that, in a suit to set aside or annul,³⁹ or to restrain the performance of,⁴⁰ a contract, the person who contracted with the municipal corporation should be made a party, as for example in suits to restrain payments under such contracts.⁴¹ Moreover, the view has been taken that in a proceeding by certiorari instituted by a taxpayer to review a contract the contractor should be made a party.⁴² There is, however, authority for the view that the contractor is not an indispensable party to a suit to enjoin the municipality from performing a contract,⁴³ including the making of payments under the contract,⁴⁴ and in a suit to restrain municipal officers from making an unauthorized purchase and paying therefor the seller is not an indispensable party.⁴⁵ It has been held that, in a suit to prevent entering into a contract, the proposed contractor is a necessary party.⁴⁶ On the other hand, it has been held that the proposed contractor is not even a proper party to a suit by a taxpayer to restrain the execution of a contract as directed by an ordinance.⁴⁷

Holders of bonds or other evidence of indebtedness. It is usually held that, in a suit to cancel municipal bonds, to enjoin their payment or the payment of interest thereon, or otherwise to determine their validity, where the bonds have been delivered, the holders of such bonds must be made parties.⁴⁸ Similarly, in a suit to cancel, or to enjoin the payment of, warrants, the holders of such warrants are necessary parties,⁴⁹ as are the owners and holders of notes and a trust deed in an action to enjoin the payment of installments on an executed contract to purchase realty under which the notes and trust deed were issued.⁵⁰ Moreover, the view has been taken that, in a proceeding by certiorari to review the issuance of bonds in payment of work done under a contract, the contractor to whom they were issued should be made a party.⁵¹ On the other hand, it has been held that, in an action to compel the return of certain bonds to the municipality which issued them, the holders of such bonds who reside beyond the jurisdiction of the court are not indispensable parties,⁵² and, as discussed infra § 2172, that, where no fact is alleged which would affect their title to the bonds held by them, their omission as parties is not ground for reversal. The holder of a municipal note has also been held not to be an indispensable party to an action to restrain collection of a tax to pay it where the issue was the authority of the municipal officers to construct an improvement, funds for which were lent to the municipality on the security of the note,⁵³ although, as discussed infra § 2168, the court could not enter a decree invalidating the note without joining the noteholder as a party defendant.

Sureties on bond of municipal officer. Sureties on the bond of a municipal officer have been regarded as proper parties defendant in an action to compel such officers to pay over certain funds to the municipality.⁵⁴ On the other hand, in an action under a statute to recover a penalty for misappropriation of municipal funds, the view has been taken that sureties on the official bonds of the officers charged with the misappropriation are not proper parties.⁵⁵

Miscellaneous illustrations. In the notes will be found illustrations of cases in which certain persons or corporations have been held to be⁵⁶ or not to be⁵⁷ proper or necessary parties.

g. Joinder

Taxpayers may join as parties plaintiff in a taxpayers' suit.

Taxpayers may join as parties plaintiff, in a taxpayers' suit,⁵⁸ although some are resident and others nonresident taxpayers.⁵⁹ The joinder of the lowest bidder for a municipal contract with a taxpayer in a taxpayer's action to enjoin the award of the contract to any other person has been held not a misjoinder of parties.⁶⁰ The propriety of the joinder of the state by the state's attorney with a taxpayer as parties plaintiff, in a suit to restrain enforcement of a rule of a municipal board of education, has been recognized.⁶¹

A taxpayer suing on behalf of the municipal corporation to recover municipal funds illegally paid out may unite as defendants all against whom any relief is asked, and whose right will be affected by the determination of the action.⁶² Where the one common right which it is sought to establish is a decree that a municipal board is without authority to create a certain indebtedness, the joinder as defendants in a suit for an injunction and cancellation of two persons to whom notes were given in different capacities was proper.⁶³

h. Intervention

Persons with an interest in the subject matter of a taxpayers' suit ordinarily may intervene to protect their rights.

While a stranger without any interest needing protection in a taxpayers' suit is not entitled to intervene therein,⁶⁴ one who actually has an interest in the subject matter thereof ordinarily may intervene to protect his rights.⁶⁵ However, the prospective grantee of a franchise which taxpayers seek to enjoin does not have such an interest which entitles him to intervene.⁶⁶ Under general rules the right of intervention in taxpayers' actions has been recognized in particular instances where the right to intervene was sought by the municipality,⁶⁷ by another taxpayer,⁶⁸ or by third persons.⁶⁹ However, one not a taxpayer is not entitled to intervene in behalf of the municipality.⁷⁰ The application of a taxpayer to intervene in a taxpayer's action as plaintiff has been denied where the action had been pending for six years and applicant would not have been a competent party when the action was begun.⁷¹

Petition to intervene. The form and sufficiency of a petition to intervene in a taxpayers' suit are governed by general rules.⁷² It must show sufficient interest in the petitioner to entitle him to intervene.⁷³ In the absence of statute or rule, the petition need not be verified.⁷⁴ A petition to intervene in a taxpayers' suit is addressed to the sound discretion of the court,⁷⁵ but it should be granted if sufficient grounds therefor appear.⁷⁶

Alternative pleading

Allegation that local housing authority could complete its program only by diverting tax funds levied for other purposes or by an increase in the assessment was not sufficient to authorize injunction restraining local housing authority from performing its functions, since, allegation being in the alternative, conversion of funds levied for other purposes was not charged, but only the necessity for increase in tax assessment.—Woodworth v. (1) In General

As a general rule, the complaint in a taxpayer's suit must allege all the facts necessary to authorize the relief demanded.

Except as statute may otherwise provide,⁷⁷ general rules as to complaints, petitions, or bills apply in taxpayers' actions.⁷⁸ Thus, it must ordinarily allege all facts necessary to authorize the relief demanded,⁷⁹ as, for example, the facts showing illegality or lack of authority,⁸⁰ fraud, collusion, or bad faith,⁸¹ failure to perform duties specifically imposed,⁸² or the waste of, or injury to, municipal property,⁸³ as a necessary element of plaintiff's right to relief. Where the suit is in behalf of the municipal corporation, the complaint must disclose a ground of recovery in such behalf.⁸⁴ A complaint not based on or not involving the noncompliance with statutory provisions need not negative such compliance.⁸⁵

Certainty; conclusions. In accordance with general rules, the allegations must be definite and certain;⁸⁶ and all matters of substance must be alleged positively and not in the form of recitals.⁸⁷ Issuable facts and not mere conclusions or general

(2) Compliance with Conditions

The plaintiff in a taxpayer's suit should allege facts which show compliance with conditions on which his right to sue depends.

Under general rules plaintiff should allege facts which show compliance with conditions on which his right to sue depends.⁸⁵ Thus, where his right to sue depends on his having requested the municipality or the municipal authorities to take the steps necessary for the proper protection of the interests of the municipality and of the taxpayers unless such request would be useless, he should allege that he made such request⁸⁶ and that it was refused,⁸⁷ or he should allege such facts as will show that such request would be useless or a mere idle ceremony.⁸⁸ Where a statute requires objections to be made to the council against a proposed bond issue, the complaint in an action to enjoin the issuance of such bonds must allege that objections were so made.⁸⁹

(3) Description of, and Statement as to, Parties; Capacity of Plaintiff

The complaint in a taxpayer's suit should show that the plaintiff suing as such is a taxpayer.

Where plaintiff sues as a taxpayer, his pleading should show that he is a taxpayer.¹ Moreover, it has been held that ordinarily the complaint or bill should allege that suit is brought on behalf of all taxpayers as well as those who are named as parties.² However, the omission of such allegation is not fatal where the complaint or bill clearly shows on its face that the right sought to be vindicated is a public right and the primary relief demanded is relief to which the whole body of taxpayers only is entitled.³ Allegations showing plaintiff taxpayer's relations to the municipality, and his request to the solicitor to bring an action, and the refusal of such request, have been held sufficient to show plaintiff's capacity to bring an action under some statutes.⁴

(4) Interest of Plaintiff and Injury or Damage

The complaint in a taxpayer's suit must ordinarily allege facts showing a right or interest in the plaintiff entitling him to sue. Injury must also generally be shown.

Under general rules, in a taxpayer's action, the complaint or bill must allege facts showing a right or interest in plaintiff which entitles him to sue,⁵ distinct from that of the general public.⁶ The general rule that the bill or complaint should show injury applies,⁷ and the allegations should show that plaintiff's interests as a taxpayer are or will be affected or prejudiced by the act which it is sought to enjoin or to redress.⁸ However, it has been held that the bill or complaint in a suit for an injunction need not show damage or injury other than that which presumably results from the mere violation of the particular right involved.⁹ A complaint shows an injury to plaintiff where it shows that he is a taxpayer and that payments on an unauthorized contract are to be made out of the general treasury of the municipality.¹⁰

Amount of taxes or assessment; increase of tax.

The fact that plaintiff does not state in express terms that the burden of taxation will be increased by the alleged wrongful acts does not render the complaint insufficient;¹¹ it is sufficient for plaintiff to allege facts from which it will appear that the municipality will be deprived of certain revenue which otherwise must be raised by taxation.¹² However, a failure to allege facts from which it appears that plaintiff's taxes would be increased has been regarded as material.¹³ In a suit to en-

join the misapplication of public funds, it is not necessary to allege the amount of taxes paid or to be paid by plaintiff.¹⁴ Where the statute requires that plaintiff's assessment shall be a certain amount, the complaint should allege the amount of plaintiff's assessment.¹⁵

Miscellaneous illustrations. In the notes will be found illustrations of cases in which allegations as to the interest of, or injury to, plaintiffs have been held sufficient¹⁶ or have been regarded as insufficient.¹⁷

b. Plea or Answer; Cross Bill or Cross Complaint

The defendant in a taxpayer's suit must plead affirmative matter on which he relies as a defense.

General rules as to pleadings in defense apply in taxpayers' actions.¹⁸ Thus, defendant must plead affirmative matter on which he relies to meet plaintiff's case.¹⁹ The view has been taken that ordinarily the defense of laches must be set up by plea or answer,²⁰ but, as discussed infra subdivision c of this section, under certain conditions the question may be raised by demurrer. Where the right of plaintiff to sue depends on the "refusal, failure or neglect" of the proper officers to sue, an answer alleging that the municipality had not refused to bring the action is not sufficient to show that plaintiff was not authorized to sue in the absence of a further allegation that there had not been a failure or neglect to sue.²¹

A cross complaint which seeks relief foreign to the subject matter of the suit cannot be sustained.²²

c. Demurrer and Motions

In a proper case the sufficiency of the complaint in a taxpayer's suit may be attacked by demurrer or motion.

General rules as to demurrers apply in taxpayers' actions.²³ While ordinarily the defense of laches must be set up by plea or answer, as discussed supra subdivision b of this section, the question may sometimes be raised by demurrer.²⁴ A bill defective for failure to allege demand on, and refusal of, the municipality to sue has been held subject to special demurrer.²⁵ In passing on the sufficiency of a bill or complaint to which a demurrer has been interposed, the allegations of fact therein must be taken as true;²⁶ and the court can inquire only whether the pleading is sufficient under the rules of law to make a case, if its allegations should be supported by competent proof.²⁷ In accordance

Prematurity of suit

In suit to enjoin issuance and sale of bonds by town, allegation of bill that town commissioners failed to levy tax for liquidation of bonds, as directed by enabling act, was demurrable as premature, in view of presumption that commissioners, as public officials, would make such levy during remainder of current year after filing of bill.—Terry v. with the general rule, however, a conclusion of law is not admitted by a demurrer.²⁸

The denial of a motion to dismiss a taxpayer's complaint for insufficiency is not a holding on the merits of the matters presented by the complaint so as to entitle the taxpayer to a declaratory judgment on the pleadings on a subsequent motion.²⁹

Uncertainty in the allegations does not necessarily render a complaint subject to general demurrer.³⁰

Demurrer raising questions as to capacity to sue and parties. While the right to raise by special demurrer the claim that plaintiff has not legal capacity to sue has been recognized,³¹ the view has also been taken that the question as to whether certain taxpayers are authorized to act for and protect the rights of a municipality cannot be raised by demurrer.³² It has been held that the fact that a municipality was not formally impleaded in a taxpayer's action to compel municipal officers to pay into the municipal treasury money illegally expended did not render the complaint subject to a general demurrer.³³

Motion to strike. Under general rules irrelevant or impertinent allegations may be stricken out on motion.³⁴

d. Amended and Supplemental Pleadings

General rules as to amended and supplemental pleadings apply in taxpayers' actions.

General rules as to amended and supplemental pleadings apply in taxpayers' actions.³⁵ Thus, the court has upheld or recognized the right of plaintiff to amend his pleading by inserting a statement that the action is brought on behalf of the corporation instead of on behalf of plaintiff and other taxpayers,³⁶ and a statement showing that the amount of plaintiff's assessment equals the minimum fixed in the statute which authorizes the action.³⁷ It has been held that an amendment to a complaint in an action brought by plaintiff in an individual capacity, so as to convert the action into a taxpayer's action, should not have been granted, as such amendment was not in furtherance of justice under the circumstances.³⁸ Moreover, the refusal of an application to amend a complaint so as to permit litigation with respect to the interests of an adjoining municipality which forms no part of the defendant municipality has been upheld.³⁹

Under some statutes the complaint may be amended nunc pro tunc.⁴⁰ Where, pending a suit to restrain certain acts of municipal officers, some of the acts in question are performed, the right of plaintiff to file a supplemental complaint seeking redress for the acts so performed has been upheld,⁴¹ but plaintiff cannot set up by supplemental complaint a different cause of action from that stated in the original complaint, which did not exist when the original suit was commenced.⁴² result in waste may be corrected by amendment.—Birch v. Hule, 9 N.Y. S.2d 450, 169 Misc. 1011, affirmed 11 N.Y.S.2d 839, 256 App.Div. 1057.

Issues raised by denials

In suit to enjoin city's contract for constructing lighting system, defendants' denials raised issue of plaintiffs' right to maintain action.—Donovan Const. Co. v. City of Waterloo, 231 N.W. 499, 211 Iowa 506.

Anticipating successful bidder

Validity of lease of city property to corporation of which councilman is stockholder cannot be considered, in suit to enjoin execution of contract for lease to successful bidder, admitted by the answer, a general denial of such facts does not put them in issue.⁴⁴ A verified plea of general issue is sufficient to raise the question of the authority of a municipal officer to execute the contract under attack,⁴⁵ but a mere denial by municipal officers that they unlawfully approved, allowed, or ordered paid, or unlawfully paid, specified claims was held to raise no issue of fact,⁴⁶ as was a denial that such expenditures materially increased taxation.⁴⁷

Evidence as to questions or issues not raised by the pleadings is not admissible;⁴⁸ on the other hand, evidence, otherwise proper, as to matters so raised is admissible.⁴⁹

Variance. In accordance with general rules, the pleading and proof in taxpayers' suits must correspond; a material variance is fatal.⁵⁰

§ 2165. Evidence

- a. Presumptions
- b. Burden of proof
- c. Admissibility
- d. Weight and sufficiency

a. Presumptions

There is a presumption in taxpayers' actions that the municipal authorities have acted within the limits of their authority.

General rules as to presumptions in civil actions apply in taxpayers' actions.⁵¹ Thus, in accordance with general rules, the presumption is that the municipal authorities have acted and are acting regularly within the limits of their authority and without intention of violating the law,⁵² and in good faith and not fraudulently.⁵³ The presumption as to the regularity and legality of official acts may be rebutted,⁵⁴ but, as discussed infra subdivision b of this section, the burden in this respect is on plaintiff.

Acts or intention of electors. In a suit to enjoin the issuance of bonds, the presumption has been indulged that all the electors are presumed to have voted at an election to authorize the bonds,⁵⁵ and that electors who failed to vote assented to the affirmative vote as shown by the returns.⁵⁶

Injury or damage. The view has been taken that, where the act complained of is illegal or unauthorized, the law presumes that injury may result to the municipality, and through the municipality to the taxpayers,⁵⁷ and that in a suit to restrain the un-

Good faith

Want of good faith and honest motives on the part of municipal authorities in making contract will be presumed from a reckless and wanton disregard of the taxpayers' interests.—Hanrahan v. Corrou, 12 N.Y.S.2d 536, 170 Misc. 922.

lawful use of municipal funds or other property, it may reasonably be presumed that the taxes of plaintiff taxpayer would be increased by the illegal act in question.⁵⁸

Continuance in office. Under the general rule a presumption of the continuance in office of certain municipal officers charged with the commission of a wrongful act has been indulged.⁵⁹

b. Burden of Proof

The plaintiff in a taxpayer's suit generally has the burden of proving the material allegations essential to authorize the relief demanded.

General rules as to the burden of proof in civil actions apply in taxpayers' actions.⁶⁰ Thus plaintiff has the burden of sustaining material allegations or claims essential to authorize the relief demanded,⁶¹ such as illegality or lack of authority,⁶² fraud or collusion,⁶³ bad faith,⁶⁴ undue influence,⁶⁵ or diversion of municipal revenues.⁶⁶ In a taxpayer's action for recovery of a statutory penalty the burden is on the taxpayer to prove all the facts necessary to bring the case under the provisions of the statute.⁶⁷ Where a municipal contract is attacked as having been let without compliance with the competitive bidding statute, the burden of proving that the contract so let comes within a statutory exception is on the party claiming the benefit of the exception.⁶⁸

Fact or extent of injury or interest. In his capacity as a taxpayer plaintiff must show that he has a special interest in the subject matter, distinct

Bona fide holding of bonds or warrants

A taxpayer who seeks to enjoin the collection of taxes by a municipality to pay bonds or warrants for an improvement has the burden of showing that the bonds or warrants are not in the hands of bona fide holders, where the municipality would be estopped to assert their invalidity against such holders.—City of Del Rio v. Lowe, Civ.App., 111 S.W.2d 1208, reversed on other grounds Lowe v. City of Del Rio, 122 S.W.2d 191, 132 Tex. 111—Marshall v. Elgin, Tex. Civ.App., 143 S.W. 670.

Estoppel of municipality

Taxpayers who sought to restrain payment of nonnegotiable warrants had burden of proving that city was not estopped to allege invalidity of the warrants as against the holder thereof as by proving that the city had not received the benefit of the improvements, but in absence of such proof were not entitled to relief.—City of Del Rio v. Excessive indebtedness

(1) The party attacking municipal action because it creates an excessive indebtedness must prove such fact.—Premier Const. Co. v. Kimmell, 20 S.W.2d 77, 230 Ky. 439—City of Covington v. O. F. Moore Co., 290 S.W. 1066, 218 Ky. 102—Waddle v. City of Somerset, 134 S.W.2d 956, 281 Ky. 30—44 C.J. p 1433 note 98 [b] (1), (2).

(2) The rule has been applied in actions to enjoin the issuance of funding bonds.—City of Frankfort v. Fuss, 29 S.W.2d 603, 235 Ky. 143.

(3) However, under a statute requiring the municipality to prove a proposed funding bond issue to be within the debt limits in actions seeking approval of such issue, the municipality has been held to have such burden of proof in an action to enjoin the issue of bonds.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. City of Jackson, 136 S.W.2d 1051, 281 Ky. 639—Ehert v. Board of Education, 128 S.W.2d 185, 278 Ky. 75.

Knowledge of illegality

In suit to recover statutory penalty for illegal expenditure of city funds from recipient thereof, taxpayer had burden of showing that recipient had notice that contract under which funds were paid was unlawful, fraudulent, or void.—State ex rel. Prunty v. Dowler, 69 P.2d 68, 180 Okl. 265—Dowler v. State ex rel. Prunty, 66 P.2d 1081, 179 Okl. 532—Buckeye Engine Co. v. City of Cherokee, 153 P. 1166, 54 Okl. 509.

from that of the general public,⁶⁹ but in a representative suit to enjoin the dissipation of municipal funds plaintiff taxpayer need not prove the extent or amount of his damages if an injunction prayed for should be refused.⁷⁰ It is not necessary for plaintiff to show the amount of taxes which he has paid or which he is to pay,⁷¹ although, where he seeks to enjoin performance of an illegal contract, he must prove that he would save in taxes from the granting of the injunction.⁷²

In accordance with general rules, only competent, relevant, and material evidence is admissible in a taxpayer's suit.

Rules as to the admissibility of evidence in civil actions in general apply in taxpayers' actions.⁷³ Where the motive of plaintiff in instituting the action is immaterial, evidence as to his motive is not admissible.⁷⁴ Where taxpayers do not lose their right to relief, if with knowledge of the fact they do not object to certain illegal or unauthorized acts of the municipal authorities, evidence as to such knowledge and failure to object⁷⁵ and as to participation in such acts to a certain extent on the part of some taxpayers⁷⁶ is immaterial. Evidence as to the validity of, or as to other matters involved in or affecting, elections has been held admissible⁷⁷ or inadmissible⁷⁸ under the particular circumstances of the case.

Fraud and bad faith. The rule has been laid down that the widest latitude should be permitted in the introduction of evidence to support allegations of fraud in a suit to enjoin payments under a contract.⁷⁹ Where, in a suit to prevent the making of a contract on the ground that statutory requirements as to letting to the lowest bidder have not been complied with, parol evidence to the effect that the municipal authorities acted fraudulently and from improper motives is admissible, notwithstanding the existence of the official records.⁸⁰ On the other hand, legal evidence to show good faith on the part of municipal officers is admissible where the matter is in issue.⁸¹

d. Weight and Sufficiency

Arbitrary or illegal action by municipal officials must be clearly proved.

General rules as to the weight and sufficiency of evidence in civil actions apply in taxpayers' actions,⁸² and it must be clearly proved that the mu-

§ 2166. Dismissal, Discontinuance, or Nonsuit

Failure of the plaintiff to prove the essential allegations of his complaint authorizes dismissal of his suit.

General rules as to dismissal, discontinuance, and nonsuit apply in taxpayers' actions.⁸⁸ Accordingly, a bill in a taxpayer's suit may be dismissed for want of equity.⁸⁹ So, failure of plaintiff to establish the essential charges of his complaint requires dismissal of the suit.⁹⁰

Want or defect of parties. In accordance with general rules, in a suit for an injunction, it has been held that the omission of a necessary party is not ground for dismissal,⁹¹ and that the bill should be retained in order that the proper parties may be brought in;⁹² but a dismissal is proper where a necessary party is omitted after a reasonable opportunity to have such party brought in has been given.⁹³

Want of jurisdictional amount. In some jurisdictions a bill to enjoin the misuse of a municipal fund must be dismissed whenever it appears affirmatively in the case that the amount involved is less than the minimum jurisdictional amount fixed by a general statute.⁹⁴

Abandonment of intention to perform illegal act. It has been held that a suit may properly be dismissed where, in its answer, defendant municipality alleges an intention to abandon the course complained of, and plaintiff thereafter persists in his prosecution of the suit.⁹⁵

Discontinuance. A motion by a taxpayer to restrain plaintiff taxpayer from discontinuing a suit has been denied where no effort was made for several years to bring the case to trial and the case was one of doubtful merit.⁹⁶

§ 2167. Hearing or Trial

Rules governing the trial and hearing in civil actions generally apply in taxpayers' actions.

Rules with respect to trials and hearings in civil actions in general apply in taxpayers' actions.⁹⁷ The court will not consider or determine irrelevant or collateral matters,⁹⁸ such as the legality of the municipality for which certain officers propose to act,⁹⁹ the qualification of the officers whose acts are in question,¹ and title to property.² In a taxpayer's suit to invalidate a grant by the municipal board of a permit to operate busses on the city streets, the sole concern of the trial court was the determination of whether the statutory or charter requirements were met.³ In a suit to enjoin the issuance of bonds by an improvement district in a municipality, the court has no jurisdiction to determine for property owners what property was to be included within the district.⁴

6. Md.—Baltimore v. Keyser, supra.

There is authority for the view that matters which are not responsive to the bill will not be considered on an application for a preliminary injunction.⁵ So, the court will not consider on an application for a temporary injunction the question as to the motive of plaintiff in bringing the suit,⁶ and as to whether he is the real party in interest;⁷ these matters should be determined by proof on the final hearing.⁸ It has also been held that the right of a public utility to occupy the streets under a street lighting contract or otherwise would not be determined in a suit to enjoin the construction of a municipal light plant and interference with such contract, where quo warranto proceedings were pending in which such rights could be determined.⁹

Foundation for evidence. It has been held that plaintiff need not call as witnesses the persons who were in charge of, or who made certain entries in, the municipal books in order to render admissible, on behalf of plaintiff, testimony as to such entries.¹⁰

Findings. Findings by the court in taxpayer's suits based on sufficient evidence are proper.¹¹ In an action to recover money wrongfully appropriated, the fact that a statute expressly forbade the appropriation in question warrants a finding by the court as a matter of law that the members of the municipal council acted in bad faith.¹²

§ 2169. — Relief

- a. In general
- b. Right to preliminary or interlocutory injunction in general
- c. Time to which relief relates, changed conditions, and ineffective or unnecessary injunction
- d. Relief in relation to parties
- e. Relief in relation to pleadings
- f. Incidental, alternative, or additional relief; relief to defendant

a. In General

The relief granted in a taxpayer's suit should fit the needs and equities of the situation.

The general rule in equity that, subject to certain definite rules, the court will grant such relief as will be just and equitable under the circumstances, as discussed in Equity § 599, has been applied in taxpayers' suits,¹⁵ but the relief must be consistent with the findings of the court.¹⁶ Where the only plan of the municipal authorities for the construction of an improvement is related to a proposed illegal contract for the use of such improvement, the judgment in a suit to enjoin the making of such contract should confine itself to restraining the execution thereof, and should not determine the question of the power of the authorities to make the improvement.¹⁷ The court will not declare an ordinance to be emergent in proceedings to enjoin a referendum vote where the ordinance itself does not do so since this would be the assumption of a legislative function.¹⁸ Where a part only of an issue of municipal bonds is illegal, according to some cases an injunction against the whole issue will not be granted,¹⁹ but, as to that portion which would exceed the permitted amount of indebtedness, an injunction is proper.²⁰

In a taxpayer's suit to cancel a release of lien for a special assessment, plaintiff is not entitled to an adjudication that such assessment is valid.²¹ In a suit to enjoin payments for certain purposes the injunction should be limited to payments out of funds which could not properly be used for such purposes.²² On the other hand, it is improper to restrict the operation of an injunction to payment of an indebtedness out of a particular fund where the indebtedness is illegal and no equities warranting such a restriction are established.²³ Where, in a suit to enjoin the issuance of bonds, it appears that the only real ground of complaint is that the transaction is not to be handled by the proper officers, the decree has been limited to restraining the delivery of the bonds to persons not duly authorized, for negotiation and sale, and to prohibiting the receipt and expenditure of the proceeds by such persons.²⁴

Where municipal electors authorized the expenditure of a specified amount for the erection of a building, the court enjoined the municipal authorities from entering into any contracts for a building, the total cost of which would exceed the unexpended balance or amounts authorized by the electors,²⁵ but a decree enjoining defendants from letting any additional contracts for a particular improvement has been held to be too broad because the municipality was entitled thereafter to provide a method for meeting further expenses without improperly increasing the municipal indebtedness.²⁶

The issuance of a preliminary injunction in a taxpayer's suit is a matter within the discretion of the court.

Preliminary or temporary injunctions are permissible in taxpayers' actions,²⁷ in the discretion of the court;²⁸ but in order to justify the issuance of such an injunction plaintiff's rights must be certain as to the law²⁹ and the facts.³⁰ However, if the court believes that the taxpayer has a meritorious cause and waste of public funds may result, it should grant preliminary relief.³¹ A preliminary injunction may be refused under the doctrine of the balance of convenience,³² and where no pressing necessity therefor is present.³³ Moreover, a preliminary injunction has been refused on the ground that plaintiff was fully protected, pending the suit, by a restraining order already issued.³⁴

Security. It seems that security for damages should be required on the issuance of a preliminary injunction in a taxpayer's suit.³⁵ Under some statutes a bond conditioned for the payment of costs may also constitute the security for damages on the issuance of a preliminary injunction.³⁶

c. Time to Which Relief Relates, Changed Conditions, and Ineffective or Unnecessary Injunction

Ordinarily, an injunction should not be issued in a taxpayer's suit where at the time of the decision conditions have so changed that no unlawful act is threatened; nor should it be issued where the act complained of has already been performed.

While the acts of the parties after a bill or complaint in equity is filed in a taxpayer's suit cannot deprive the court of jurisdiction to give some relief,³⁷ what relief is to be granted may under certain circumstances depend on the condition of the case when it is decided.³⁸ The fact that an injunction is probably unnecessary does not of itself render the granting of such injunction erroneous as a matter of law.³⁹ Ordinarily, however, an injunction should not be issued where at the time of the decision conditions have so changed that no unlawful act is threatened,⁴⁰ but the discontinuance of the illegal course or act does not necessarily deprive plaintiff of the right to relief.⁴¹ In accordance with the general rule an injunction will not be granted where the issuance of the injunction would be ineffective,⁴² as where the act complained of has already been performed;⁴³ but in such case the court is not prevented from granting some relief,⁴⁴ and the rule has no application where the relief sought is to prevent the proposed payment by the municipal authorities of special assessments on the property of abutting owners, although previously such authorities had formally attempted to relieve such owners of liability for such assessment and to provide for payment thereof out of the municipal funds.⁴⁵

Recall of injunction. Where the conditions obtaining at the time of the issuance of an injunction in a taxpayer's suit have changed through the

d. Relief in Relation to Parties

As a general rule the decree in a taxpayer's suit should adjudicate only the rights of the parties.

In accordance with the general rule in equity, a decree in a taxpayer's suit should be confined to an adjudication of the rights of the parties to the suit.⁴⁷ Thus, while the holder of a note may not be an indispensable party to an action to restrain collection of a tax to pay it, the court cannot enter a decree invalidating the note without joining the noteholder as a party defendant.⁴⁸ Even where certain persons have been made parties, if neither the municipality nor the taxpayers have any rights against such persons, a decree against them in favor of plaintiff taxpayers should not be granted,⁴⁹ but ordinarily the rights of persons who are parties may be determined,⁵⁰ even though other persons who are not subject to the jurisdiction of the court may be interested in the subject matter generally involved.⁵¹ Recovery may be had against municipal officers who participated in an illegal purchase, although their liability is shared by other officers who were not made parties to the action.⁵² Where several defendants are officers of a municipality, and the acts complained of were done under color and in excess of their authority, it has been held that the recovery may be against them both as individuals and in their official capacity, although they were formally sued only as officers.⁵³ Notwithstanding a default by a municipal treasurer who is made a party defendant with the municipality to a suit to enjoin the wrongful expenditure of municipal funds, an injunction may properly be granted against the treasurer.⁵⁴ In an action to recover funds which have been misappropriated, the court may include in its judgment a direction that the money recovered shall be paid to the office of the municipal clerk for the use of the proper authorities, notwithstanding the omission as parties of the officers entitled to the custody of municipal funds.⁵⁵

e. Relief in Relation to Pleadings

As a general rule the relief in a taxpayer's suit should be based on, and conform to, all the pleadings in the case.

In accordance with general rules, the relief granted in a taxpayer's suit must be based on, and authorized by, the allegations and prayer of the bill or complaint;⁵⁶ but relief which is in accordance with such allegations and prayer, if otherwise proper, may be granted,⁵⁷ and a like rule applies with respect to relief which is within the allegations of defendant's pleading.⁵⁸ While a prayer for general relief is ordinarily given a broad construction favorable to plaintiff,⁵⁹ the view has been taken that it is ineffective to obtain relief of which defendant has not been fairly apprised by the other prayers.⁶⁰ In particular instances the decree rendered or considered has been regarded as authorized⁶¹ or not authorized⁶² by the allegations of the bill.

f. Incidental, Alternative, or Additional Relief; Relief to Defendant

Incidental, additional, or alternative relief may generally be granted in a taxpayer's suit.

In accordance with general rules, the court in taxpayers' suits may grant incidental, additional, or alternative relief.⁶³ Where conditions have changed since the commencement of a suit for an injunction, the court may in a proper case require restitution⁶⁴ or compensation⁶⁵ if the pleadings and proof authorize such relief. There is authority for the view that if, in a suit by a taxpayer to rescind a conveyance of real property made by the municipality, it appears that the property is in the hands of an innocent purchaser, the court may grant relief

by awarding damages where the complaint contains a prayer for general relief.⁶⁶ In a suit for the cancellation of releases of liens for special assessments, a successful plaintiff is entitled to an order requiring a surrender of the releases.⁶⁷

In a suit to compel reimbursement on the part of municipal officers, an injunction preventing them from disposing of their property has been held improper where there is no proof that they purchased the property with moneys belonging to the municipal corporation.⁶⁸ Where, in a suit to enjoin an alleged conspiracy by defendant municipality and defendant mining company to destroy, by mining, a part of the municipality, plaintiff is not entitled to an injunction, the court cannot retain the case to award damages for possible injuries to plaintiff's property which may arise in the future,⁶⁹ and in such suit defendant mining company cannot be compelled to seek the vacation of streets involved in the transaction between such company and the municipality.⁷⁰

Relief to defendant and against plaintiff. While the view has been taken that taxpayers will not be required, in a suit to restrain payments under an illegal contract, to offer payment for what has already been done under the contract,⁷¹ it has been held, in a suit by a taxpayer to cancel a contract, that the municipality will be required to do equity by paying the reasonable value of what it has received under the contract prior to the institution of the suit.⁷² Moreover, under other circumstances relief has been granted to defendant.⁷³

§ 2170. — Construction, Effect, and Enforcement

A temporary injunction in a taxpayer's suit should be construed in the light of the allegations of the bill and the purpose of the suit.

In accordance with general rules discussed in Injunctions § 207, a temporary injunction or restrain-ing order in a taxpayer's suit must be construed and given effect in the light of the allegations of the bill and the purpose of the suit.⁷⁴ A decree enjoining certain officers of a municipality from entering into a proposed contract has been construed as not an injunction against the exercise by the municipal council of its legislative powers, although the officers enjoined had not been authorized by the council to enter into such contract.⁷⁵

The decision of the court in a taxpayer's suit enjoining the municipality from issuing bonds for the purpose of paying the award in a condemnation proceeding has been held to nullify the prior condemnation proceedings.⁷⁶

Enforcement. Where, in a taxpayer's suit, one of the defendants has been directed to account to the city for moneys wrongfully received, the right of plaintiff to take proper proceedings for the enforcement of the decree has been recognized.⁷⁷

§ 2171. Costs and Expenses

Costs in taxpayers' suits may sometimes be decreed against the municipal corporation.

In taxpayers' actions the court in a proper case may decree costs against the municipal corporation,⁷⁸ and, according to some cases, a reasonable amount to cover plaintiff's expenses,⁷⁹ including a fee for plaintiff's attorney.⁸⁰

Award against municipal officers or employees. A municipal officer or employee who is a party defendant may be liable for costs;⁸¹ but the view has been taken that in actions against municipal officers relating to their official duties costs should not be awarded against them in the absence of any showing of gross negligence, bad faith, or malice, although the act complained of is shown to be unauthorized and is enjoined.⁸²

Award against persons dealing with municipality. Plaintiff may be entitled to an award of costs against a person who has dealt with the municipal authorities and who is a party defendant.⁸³

Liability of plaintiff; defendant's right to costs. Under certain circumstances defendant may be entitled to costs as against plaintiff.⁸⁴ However, since taxpayers' suits under some statutes are considered in the public interest, costs therein are not awarded against the taxpayers bringing suit, although they are unsuccessful.⁸⁵

Investigation of financial affairs of municipality. Under some statutes providing for an investigation into the financial affairs of a municipality on application of a specified number of freeholders, the court may direct payment of the costs of such investigation by the municipality.⁸⁶ The petitioners under some of such statutes are liable for costs and expenses if the institution of the proceeding is not justified.⁸⁷ In such a proceeding the officers whose acts are in question must defend themselves at their own expense,⁸⁸ and costs therein may be awarded against such officers if the plaintiffs establish their case.⁸⁹ The costs of the proceedings may be payable out of municipal funds where the investigation benefited the municipality and no dishonest motive or corrupt act by the officers is shown.⁹⁰ It has been held that the award of costs in such investigation is governed by statutory provisions relative to costs in special proceedings.⁹¹

In a suit under the Ohio statute, where the city solicitor has refused to sue, plaintiff taxpayer may be allowed costs,⁹² and reasonable compensation for his attorney⁹³ payable out of funds recovered by the taxpayer for the municipality;⁹⁴ but compensation for plaintiff's attorney cannot be awarded under the statute where judgment is not in favor of plaintiff,⁹⁵ where suit is not actually in behalf of the municipality,⁹⁶ or where the municipality has no solicitor.⁹⁷

Rules governing appeals in civil actions generally apply in taxpayers' suits.

Rules governing appeals and writs of error in civil actions in general apply in taxpayers' actions.⁹⁸ It has been held that certiorari will not lie to review a determination in a proceeding under a statute authorizing the institution by freeholders of an investigation of municipal finances;⁹⁹ an appeal is the proper method for reviewing such determination.¹ A suit to enjoin certain municipal officers from entering into a contract is not premature so as to prevent the appellate court from considering questions involved in an appeal from a decree in such suit, although the municipal council had not authorized such officers to enter into the contract.² On an appeal from an order granting an injunction pendente lite, the court will not decide on an ex parte affidavit the question as to whether plaintiff was a mere dummy in bringing suit.³ Where only moot or abstract questions are involved in the appeal, the appeal may be dismissed.⁴

Questions as to pleadings and proof. A complaint containing allegations of waste and illegal, corrupt, or fraudulent official action on the part of municipal officers has been held sufficient on appeal to sustain the jurisdiction of the lower court to grant an injunction order restraining such action.⁵ On appeal from a judgment of dismissal the petition has been so construed as to uphold the judgment.⁶ However, an order entered without proof or sufficient allegations in a proceeding to supercede a special tax levy should be reversed and the case remanded for further development.⁷

Questions as to parties. Where the municipality is vitally interested in the questions to be determined in a particular suit and it is, therefore, a necessary party, its omission as a party is ground for reversal;⁸ but where, in a suit to have returned to a municipality certain bonds issued by it, no fact is alleged which would affect the title of certain bondholders, it has been held that their omission as parties to the suit is not ground for reversal.⁹

XX. CLAIMS AGAINST MUNICIPALITY

§ 2173. Necessity for Presenting

- a. In general
- b. Claims within requirement
- c. Sufficiency of presentation

a. In General

Claims against a municipal corporation must usually be presented to a particular officer or board for audit and allowance or rejection.

As commonly required by the statutes relating to municipal corporations, or by the municipal charters or ordinances, all demands¹⁰ or all unliquidated claims against the municipal corporation must be presented to a specified officer or board for audit and allowance or rejection.¹¹ Such a statutory or charter provision is known as a "cash basis",¹² or "non-claim"¹³ statute or law, and may be waived, since it does not constitute a prerequisite to a right of recovery.¹⁴

A distinction is to be observed between presenting a claim as a statutory condition precedent to the bringing of an action for tort as discussed supra §§ 922-930, or as a statutory condition precedent to bringing an action in general, as considered infra § 2199, and the presentation of a claim for audit, in that the former is not a presentation for audit,¹⁵ although there is authority for the view that certain provisions for the presentation of claims for audit are exclusive and that claims which may be so presented cannot be made the subject of an action.¹⁶

b. Claims within Requirement

All claims or demands against a municipal corporation which come within the provisions of the statute, charter, or ordinance should be presented.

All claims or demands against the municipal corporation which come within the provisions of the statute, charter, or ordinance should be presented.¹⁷

17. Cal.—Trower v. San Francisco, 109 P. 617, 157 Cal. 762.

Under some provisions all demands of every sort must be presented to, and approved by, the auditor before payment can be made from the treasury,¹⁸ and this has been held to include a contractual obligation of the municipality.¹⁹ Other provisions apply to claims for damages arising from tort as well as to those arising on contract,²⁰ although some of the provisions have been held to refer only to claims arising on contracts,²¹ especially when the claim is required to be itemized.²² Still other statutory or charter provisions have been held applicable only to claims for damages of a specified nature.²³

On the other hand claims which are not within the meaning of the statute or charter need not be presented.²⁴ Accordingly it has been held that presentation is not necessary of a demand under a contract which has not been made directly with the municipality,²⁵ of a claim for compensation for property taken or damaged for public use,²⁶ or of a claim of the state for moneys improperly withheld by the municipality.²⁷ The requirement of such presentation or filing does not apply to a claim which was in process of adjudication when the requirement went into effect.²⁸ Charter provisions relating to the filing of claims do not apply to persons making levies against a city under a statute providing a special form of garnishment for the benefit of a person who holds a judgment against a defendant to whom money is owing and unpaid by the city.²⁹

Claims for salary or fixed charges. A claim for the salary of an officer or for other like fixed charges generally is not required to be presented for audit.³⁰ Where, however, a claimant is to be paid by the day during the term, not of his office, but of his employment, it has been held necessary for him to present his claim.³¹ A statute requiring presentation of "all accounts and demands against a city" applies to claims against the city arising in the ordinary course of carrying on the city government, and not to contracts where the time and amount of payment are definitely and specifically determined by express agreement between the parties, and all under the intendment of other provisions of the statute.³² A charter requiring "all claims for damages" to be presented does not apply to a claim on a contract constituting a direct promise to pay money.³³

Moral and equitable claims. Except as limited by the constitution and general laws, a municipality, under its delegated powers, may allow and pay moral and equitable claims,³⁴ and the extent to which such claims should be recognized is primarily for municipal determination.³⁵ In the absence of a law prohibiting a city from paying a claim which has not been properly filed, a city may recognize a moral obligation founded on a just claim of substantial pecuniary right and pay the claim,³⁶ even though no recovery thereon might be available by action at law.³⁷

c. Sufficiency of Presentation

The presentation must be made to the officer or board authorized to receive it, and must at least substantially comply with the requirements of the statute or charter as to the manner of making it.

The presentation must be made in at least substantial compliance with the method prescribed by the statute or charter,³⁸ and must be made to the officer or board designated by the statute or charter to receive and audit it,³⁹ or authorized to order its payment,⁴⁰ unless the officers themselves are the wrongdoers.⁴¹ A claim is presented to the common council when it is filed with the clerk of the council,⁴² or presented to the mayor and by him to the council.⁴³ A presentation, however, which is made to an officer or board which has usurped the office is invalid.⁴⁴

§ 2174. Time for Presenting

A claim against a municipal corporation must, when presentation is necessary, be presented within the time prescribed by statute or charter.

The presentation of a claim should be made within the time prescribed by the statute or charter,⁴⁵ after the claim or cause of action has accrued to claimant,⁴⁶ that is, within the specified time after the accrual of the last item of the claim or account;⁴⁷ and, if not presented within the prescribed time, the claim is barred, at least as far as the municipal authorities are concerned.⁴⁸ The time begins to run from the time claimant has knowledge of his right to a claim.⁴⁹

§ 2175. Statement and Verification or Proof of Claim

The statement and verification and proof of a claim presented against a municipal corporation for audit should at least substantially comply with statutory or charter requirements.

There must be at least substantial compliance with the requirements imposed by statute, charter, or ordinance with respect to the formal statement of the claim as a condition precedent to its allowance,⁵⁰ such as to the manner of its being itemized, by stating in detail the particulars of the claim,⁵¹ unless itemization is not required by the statute or charter.⁵² However, no narrow rule of construction should be applied to the wording of the claim;⁵³ and, where the claim consists of a single item, dates and amounts need not be separately stated.⁵⁴ Moreover, if the mode or extent of itemizing an account is not specifically fixed by statute, if the common council to which the account is presented regards the account as insufficiently itemized, it owes a duty to claimant to bring the objection to his attention.⁵⁵

Verification and proof. There must also be substantial compliance with the statute or charter as to verification and proof of the claim presented.⁵⁶ The verifying affidavit must show that claimant has such personal knowledge of the facts that the auditing officer or board may intelligently act thereon;⁵⁷ and, if the affidavit is made by an assignee of the claim, it must appear that he has such personal knowledge of the facts stated in the affidavit, and not merely that he verily believes the facts.⁵⁸ It has been held, however, that verification is not required where the claim is wholly repudiated and claimant is obliged to prove the justice of his claim in an action at law.⁵⁹

Objections. Except where the statute absolutely prohibits allowance of a defective claim,⁶⁰ objections as to the manner of presenting the claim,⁶¹ and as to its verification or itemization,⁶² may be waived, such as by a failure to urge the objections within the time provided for rejection on that ground.⁶³ It has been held, however, that the failure of a board of trustees of a village to return a bill presented to it for audit, on the ground that it was not verified as required by statute,⁶⁴ or to object to the bill on such ground,⁶⁵ is not a waiver of the defect.

§ 2176. Audit

- a. Auditing officer or board
- b. Nature and extent of auditing powers and duties in general

a. Auditing Officer or Board

The power and duty to audit claims against a municipal corporation are generally vested in a particular officer or board.

The question as to what officer or board has the power to audit claims is usually fixed by statute, charter, or ordinance,⁶⁶ and, accordingly, as so pro-

Except where the statute or charter provides otherwise,⁷⁶ the powers and duties of a municipal auditing officer or board are not merely clerical,⁷⁷ but are judicial⁷⁸ or quasi-judicial.⁷⁹ In passing on a claim it functions as a special tribunal,⁸⁰ and may judicially fix the amount of the liability,⁸¹ make adjustments thereon,⁸² and certify the conclusion reached.⁸³

claim is just and legal, in whole or in part,⁸⁶ and to pass on its reasonableness,⁸⁷ an auditing officer violates his public duty if he authorizes the payment of claims that involve an illegal expenditure of public funds.⁸⁸ A limitation on a right to audit and contest the reasonableness of a claim will not be read into a statute by inference.⁸⁹ An audit is invalid if it is not made within the time therefor prescribed by statute,⁹⁰ such as prior to payment.⁹¹ An auditing officer or board is bound to audit an unpaid legal claim, if its payment is authorized by law,⁹² and it has been held that it cannot be restricted in the exercise of its office by a city ordinance.⁹³ A council, as the governing body, may, by ordinance, allow just claims which are not collectable by action,⁹⁴ and, under some statutes, such allowance may be made even after the claim has been disapproved by other officers.⁹⁵

Audit by governor. Under a statute providing that the compensation of a person designated by the governor to make an investigation in a proceeding for the removal of a public officer shall be fixed by the governor, if the governor has audited and allowed a claim for services rendered on the hearing of charges against a former mayor, and has made requisition on the city board for money to pay it, the amount so fixed by the governor cannot thereafter be reduced by the city comptroller,⁹⁶ although in other respects the claim may be audited by the comptroller.⁹⁷

quiring a city to pay the reasonable expenses incurred by a state agency in compelling the payment of money by the city to such agency, a city comptroller has no jurisdiction to pass on the reasonableness of an award made by the attorney general to the trustees of a public building for fees and disbursements expended in proceedings to require the city to make an annual payment for the maintenance of the building.⁹⁸ An allowance by the attorney general of the claim of a special deputy appointed to conduct prosecutions within the city has been held to be final if there has been an appropriation therefor by the legislature, and the comptroller has been held to have no authority to audit the claim;⁹⁹ but such an allowance is not final if the expenses are not covered by appropriations, and the city comptroller may audit it and reject it if it is excessive.¹

The term "audit," as applied to claims against municipalities, is well understood, and means to hear and examine a claim,² and, in its broadest sense, it includes the adjustment or allowance, disallowance, or rejection of the claim.³

§ 2177. — Hearing

The municipal auditing officer or board should ascertain the reasonableness and correctness of a claim before allowing it, and for this purpose should conduct a hearing at which the claimant and opposing witnesses may be summoned and heard.

The audit of a claim must be conducted as directed by the charter or other governing statute,⁴

Appropriation of money as audit

An ordinance appropriating money for reimbursement of property owner for expense of repaving occasioned by error in city engineer's specifications could be construed as audit by city council of claim based on valid subsisting contract rather than acknowledgment of tort liability.—City of Houston v. and it is generally the duty of the auditing officer or board to ascertain the reasonableness and correctness of any claim before approving or allowing it.⁵ Claimant generally has the right to offer his proof and to confront and examine opposing witnesses;⁶ and in passing on the claim the auditing officer may hear evidence,⁷ and, under some statutes, may require any person presenting a claim to be sworn concerning it and answer orally as to any facts relevant to the justness thereof,⁸ unless the claim is not one presently pending against the city,⁹ and such power is not affected by the fact that it may be abused without the restraining hand of a court to keep it within proper bounds;¹⁰ but the auditing officer must confine his investigation to questions pertinent to the claims and issues raised thereby.¹¹

The auditing officer may fix the time and place of the hearing or examination,¹² provided such time or place is reasonable under the circumstances;¹³ and he may issue and serve a subpoena directing claimant to appear before him at the hearing,¹⁴ as a necessary corollary to his right to examine claimant, although the charter is silent on his power to issue a subpoena.¹⁵

Money taken from person arrested. Under some statutes, the city police commissioner may issue a subpoena requiring a claimant of money, taken from him at the time of his arrest and deposited with the property clerk, to appear and be sworn before such clerk and to answer orally as to facts relative to the justness of his claim,¹⁶ notwithstanding an action is pending by claimant against the property clerk to recover damages for the conversion of such money.¹⁷

§ 2178. — Decision or Award in General

The decision or award should show that the claim was duly audited and allowed, in full or for some exact amount, or that it was rejected; and it should comply with necessary formal requisites.

The claim, where not rejected, must be audited in full or for some exact amount,¹⁸ although a claim may be allowed conditionally, as where it is allowed to be paid when there is money in the treasury.¹⁹ In making his decision, the auditor is not justified in showing any favoritism by auditing the claim of one person in preference to that of another, on the theory that there may not be suffi-

The purpose of the statute authorizing comptroller to require any person presenting a claim against the city to be sworn before him and to testify as to justness of his claim is to allow comptroller an opportunity to examine into the claim and decide how to dispose of it.—Daniel J. Rice, Inc., v. City of New York, 42 N.Y.S.2d 532, 180 Misc. 860.

Duplicate legislation

The New York City charter 1936 § 93 subd. d, authorizing the city comptroller to administer oaths to settle claim in favor of or against the city is a duplication in function and power of administrative code section authorizing the comptroller to require claimants to be sworn before him touching claims against the city and, therefore, is viewed in the same light.—In re Allen Street, City of New York, 43 N.Y.S.2d 316, 181 Misc. 860.

9. N.Y.—In re Allen Street, City of New York, supra.

Return of assessments paid

Under statute authorizing city comptroller to require claimants to be sworn before him touching claims against the city, the comptroller is not authorized to subpoena attorneys bringing on motions in court for orders directing him to return assessments paid pursuant to certain local laws.—In re Allen Street, City of New York, supra.

Requested time

Although comptroller has statutory authority within limits of reasonableness to fix time and place of examination of one presenting a claim against city, claimant corporation being unable at the time fixed by comptroller to produce any person having extensive information concerning claim did not interfere with orderly procedure by requesting comptroller to fix a time at comptroller's convenience for examination when some three years later a person allegedly having such information returned to city.—Daniel J. Service on attorney

(1) As regards validity of service of notice by city on claimant to appear for examination by service on attorney representing claimant, service of original claim on city is not tantamount to commencement of action and attorney is not an attorney appearing in any action.—Threat v. City of New York, supra.

(2) Where claimant retained attorney, designated him as such in filed claim against city, and further affirmed his acts in her complaint, claimant could not repudiate authority of attorney to receive notice requiring claimant to appear for examination.—Threat v. City of New York, supra.

cient money in the treasury to meet all demands on it.²⁰ An award of an auditing board is insufficient where it is not signed by all of the board, as required by statute,²¹ or where it does not receive the concurrence of a majority as required by the municipal charter,²² or, where the claim is for materials furnished to the city, it is not shown to refer to a contract for such materials.²³ In the absence of proof to the contrary, it will be presumed that the auditing officer properly performed his duty, and that the account or claim, as audited and allowed, is correct;²⁴ and, where the proper board passes on a claim presented to it, the common council has been held to have no power to review such action and increase the amount of the award.²⁵ Where an order for the payment of a claim against a city is passed over the mayor's veto by a two-thirds vote, one vote of which is cast by an alderman who is one of the claimants, and whose vote is necessary to pass it over the veto, the record has been held not admissible in evidence to prove the city's liability on the claim.²⁶

Duty to allow or disallow. If the auditing officer or board finds the claim to be reasonable and just, it is its duty to allow the claim;²⁷ but a disallowance of a claim which exceeds the revenue for the current year, has been held to be proper,²⁸ and a claim which is made without legal authority should be rejected.²⁹ An allowance of a claim after the expiration of the time prescribed by statute for its allowance or rejection is a nullity,³⁰ as is the allowance of an unenforceable claim where a statute expressly prohibits its recognition.³¹ Power to audit mandatory claims does not give arbitrary power to reduce or reject such claims.³² A decision of a board which is invalid for the lack of a majority vote may be validated at a subsequent meeting by a majority vote of the board passing a resolution adopting, ratifying, and confirming its previous action.³³ It has been held that the execution of a note for a claim, which has been before the council, is a sufficient allowance of the claim whether or not it is valid as a note.³⁴

§ 2179. — Review of Decision

Under some statutes, an appeal may be taken from the allowance or disallowance of a claim against a municipal corporation, but only such decisions as come within the meaning of the statute providing the remedy may be reviewed.

Under some statutes, or charters, the proper mode of review is by an appeal to a particular court from the allowance or disallowance of a claim against a municipal corporation, as provided for in the statute or charter;³⁵ and a substantial compliance with the statutory provisions in taking an appeal gives the appellate court jurisdiction thereof,³⁶ such as with respect to the time of taking an appeal after the decision,³⁷ the verification of the claim,³⁸ the giving of an appeal bond,³⁹ and as to the pleading on appeal.⁴⁰ Under some of these statutes, the right of appeal is also given to taxpayers,⁴¹ and pending the appeal an order allowing the claim is suspended.⁴² Where one resolution allows combinable claims of the same claimant, a single notice of appeal by the requisite number of taxpayers is sufficient.⁴³

Under other statutes, the remedy is by certiorari,⁴⁴ and with respect to the right to the remedy of certiorari the examination of a claim against a municipality ordinarily constitutes a trial, and its allowance or rejection is a judgment of a statutory tribunal charged with the duty of passing on the account.⁴⁵

Action. Under some statutes, where a claim against a city or village is disallowed, the appropriate remedy of claimant is by action,⁴⁶ but claimant's remedy in such a case against a town is by certiorari.⁴⁷ A statutory provision that, on rejection of a claim, claimant may appeal to a specified court by a bill of exceptions has been construed as not providing an exclusive remedy, but as permitting the bringing of an action where the claim has been presented and rejected.⁴⁸

§ 2180. — Effect of Allowance or Disallowance

An allowance or disallowance of a claim against a municipal corporation in the absence of fraud or collusion, is final and conclusive and not subject to collateral attack; and, unless it is tainted with fraud or collusion, or is ultra vires or void, it is generally binding on the parties thereto.

The acts of an auditing officer or board, within its jurisdiction, in the absence of fraud and collusion, are final and conclusive, and cannot be questioned in a collateral proceeding.⁴⁹ However, since such officers or boards, in allowing accounts or claims, are limited to the powers conferred on them by the statute or ordinance, as discussed supra § 2176 b, when they transgress these limitations, their acts, like those of any other tribunal of limited jurisdiction, are void,⁵⁰ even though the parties have acted in good faith.⁵¹ The fact that the auditing board has attempted to act favorably on a claim which is presented in a defective form does not legalize the audit,⁵² although the municipal corporation has received value from claimant.⁵³

Generally the allowance of a claim, where the officer or board has jurisdiction, constitutes an adjudication binding on the municipality,⁵⁴ and a recovery may be had thereon, even though the allowance is a conditional one,⁵⁵ or although the allowance is for a smaller amount than that claimed, if it is unconditionally accepted by claimant.⁵⁶ An allowance, however, has been held not binding where it is tainted with fraud or collusion,⁵⁷ or where it is an ultra vires⁵⁸ or void⁵⁹ contract. Under some statutes, the allowance of a claim by the auditing officer or board is not an adjudication,⁶⁰ and, as has been held, an allowance for less than the amount claimed is not a judgment, but an offer, which is not binding on either party until it is accepted.⁶¹

Bar to action. Under some statutes, an audit of a claim against a city or village, as distinguished from a town or county, does not bar an action thereon;⁶² and a claimant's right to resort to the courts for recovery is not precluded by the fact that the municipality has rejected his claim,⁶³ or has by a duly authorized vote refused to recognize the claim as valid;⁶⁴ nor is such a recovery precluded by the auditor's refusal to issue proper warrants for the payment of the claim.⁶⁵ A statutory provision that the audit of a claim against a city by the common council shall be final and conclusive as to the amount thereof does not bar an action thereon by a claimant aggrieved by such order,⁶⁶ but such determination is final and conclusive only as to city officers challenging it.⁶⁷

Waiver or estoppel. Where claimant takes no steps to review the order or to compel a further audit, ordinarily he cannot sue for the balance of his claim in excess of that allowed;⁶⁸ and the acceptance by claimant of the amount allowed, although less than the amount claimed, is a waiver of the right to insist on payment of the balance rejected,⁶⁹ but not where such waiver has been expressly excluded.⁷⁰

Rescission of allowance. The allowance of a claim may be rescinded⁷¹ before the rights of third persons have vested,⁷² or before claimant has changed his position to his own disadvantage,⁷³ although not after he has been actually paid.⁷⁴

Reaudit. The auditing officer or board has no power to reaudit claims which have been passed on by their predecessors in office,⁷⁵ and the fact that a public officer has submitted to a reaudit of his accounts for certain years by the comptroller does not estop him from objecting to a new audit by a new comptroller.⁷⁶ Where the claim is disallowed, and thereafter a corrected bill is presented to the same auditors, claimant may not thereafter allege that they were without power to re-examine and allow or disallow the claim.⁷⁷

Except to the extent that it is limited or forbidden by statute or charter, a municipal corporation may compromise and settle claims for or against it, either before or after suit has been commenced on the claims.

A municipal corporation, except to the extent that it is limited or forbidden by statute or charter,⁷⁸ has the power, even without express authority, and either before or after suit has been commenced on the claim,⁷⁹ to compromise and settle a disputed claim for or against it,⁸⁰ arising out of subject matter concerning which the municipality has the general power to contract, if at the time of the settlement there is a bona fide reasonable doubt or dispute as to the liability of the municipality,⁸¹ which is not based on a total lack of authority to incur the debt or obligation;⁸² and, under such circumstances, compromises are favored.⁸³ This power to compromise is implied from municipal capacity to sue or to be sued.⁸⁴

84. U.S.—Columbus Gas & Fuel Co.

A municipal corporation may compromise a claim equitably payable by it,⁸⁵ although the claim is not legally binding on it;⁸⁶ but it may not exercise its power of compromise to the extent of destroying or impairing any governmental function.⁸⁷ It may not make a gift under the guise of a compromise of an entirely unfounded claim,⁸⁸ but the right to compromise and settle an existing and asserted claim does not depend on the ultimate decision for or against its validity.⁸⁹ Before satisfaction the compromise may be revoked by the municipality;⁹⁰ and the promise of an annuity in satisfaction of a claim,⁹¹ or a compromise of illegal claims,⁹² or an agreement to pay a person having no claim whatever,⁹³ is not binding.

Board or official authorized to compromise. Power to compromise doubtful claims is inherent in the common council as the representative of the municipality⁹⁴ where the claim is of such a nature as to come within its jurisdiction.⁹⁵ It has also been held that a board of park commissioners may compromise and settle claims within its jurisdiction.⁹⁶

The fact, however, that the municipality may itself compromise claims does not give such authority to one of its officers or agents.⁹⁷ The mayor cannot, unless specially authorized, compromise any claim, or, by acting under such a compromise, estop the assertion of the city's legal rights;⁹⁸ and it has been held that the corporation counsel has no power to compromise claims rejected by the comptroller without the comptroller's knowledge or consent,⁹⁹ or to make a settlement concerning tax refunds without approval of the city council.¹ Claimant may appoint an attorney to make a compromise on his behalf.²

Statutory provisions. Under some statutes which have been held constitutional,³ express provision is made for the adjustment or composition of claims of creditors of a municipality,⁴ and as to the compromise being conclusive, except on the ground of fraud or collusion.⁵ Under some statutes, the compromising power may be specially conferred by statute on officers or boards other than the common council,⁶ but statutes conferring authority on municipalities, boards, and commissions are to be strictly construed;⁷ and the power of a municipality in this behalf may be defined and limited by the statute or charter.⁸

Effect of compromise. If a compromise agreement of a claim against a municipality is made in good faith by an authorized board or official,⁹ and is based on a valuable consideration,¹⁰ it is valid and binding and imposes a liability on the municipality, and, if the municipality, by resolution, directs the city manager and clerk to execute and deliver a draft in payment of the amount of the settlement, it imposes a duty on such manager and clerk to execute and deliver such a draft,¹¹ and, if the manager and clerk refuse to do so, the municipality is exonerated from default in its obligation to claimant.¹² A compromise is not binding on claimant's surety unless he also consents thereto.¹³

§ 2182. Arbitration

A municipal corporation, unless prohibited by positive law, generally has power to submit to arbitration claims asserted by or against it.

The power to contract, as discussed supra §§ 976-987, and to sue and be sued, as considered infra § 2186, generally implies in a municipal or quasi-municipal corporation power to submit to arbitration claims asserted by or against it,¹⁴ unless it is prohibited from doing so by positive law.¹⁵ A statute providing for arbitration by "all persons" includes municipal corporations,¹⁶ although their power in this behalf may be restricted by construction of a statute;¹⁷ but the legislature has no power to direct that claims against a municipality shall be ascertained by arbitrators instead of a jury, without requiring the consent of the corporation.¹⁸

The officer or board who may consent to arbitration may be fixed by statute;¹⁹ but generally such power must be vested in the governing body which has the power to maintain or defend suits;²⁰ and independently of statute, it has been held that the municipal attorney may consent to an arbitration for the city,²¹ and a fortiori the council may intrust the selection of arbitrators to him.²² An agent appointed by a municipality to compromise a claim may submit it to arbitration.²³

A demand for an arbitration, when required, must be made on the municipality within the period specified in the arbitration clauses of a written contract.²⁴

§ 2183. Assignment

In the absence of a statute or ordinance to the contrary, claims against a municipal corporation may be assigned.

Unless there is some statute or ordinance forbid-

The board of commissioners of a city which, pursuant to statute, on assuming power specifically reserved to itself the power to approve all claims against municipality and order payment thereof, had authority to adjust a claim against the municipality for commissions of an architect relative to a veterans' housing project for the municipality, as against claim that only the mayor and director of department of public works had sole power to adjust the claim—*De Muro v. Settlement with injured employee

Agreement of city, whose charter authorized it to maintain disabled

employees who were injured in performance of their duties, to pay a certain amount in one lump sum to a street and bridge department employee who was disabled by injury received while removing trees and trash from streets, was in full and final settlement of its assumed obligation under its charter, and therefore was based on valuable consideration, and hence imposed liability on city, as against contention that city was not liable because injuries were sustained in work which was purely a governmental function—*City of Beaumont v. ding it,²⁵ claims against a municipal corporation are assignable the same as other choses in action;²⁶ but notice to the municipality, through the proper officer, is essential to perfect the assignment,²⁷ although knowledge of the transaction by the municipality may constitute notice to it.²⁸ The fact that there is no fund in existence from which the claim can be paid at the time of its assignment, or that the claim is not presently enforceable by action because it is based on an unauthorized contract, does not prevent the assignment of the claim operating as an equitable assignment if the municipality should subsequently voluntarily recognize its liability or become bound to pay the claim.²⁹

Partial assignment. A claim or demand against a municipality generally cannot be split and portions thereof assigned to different individuals, unless the municipality consents thereto,³⁰ although, as has been held, such an assignment may be recognized and enforced in equity,³¹ and a creditor may not compel his debtor to assign any part of the sum due him by a municipality in partial payment or total settlement of the creditor's debt.³² The partial assignment, however, of a claim against a city is not against public policy,³³ and, in the absence of a statute to the contrary, has been held to be valid,³⁴ and, where such an assignment has been assented to by the municipality, a recovery in an action at law by one of the assignees does not prevent a recovery by the others.³⁵

Wages. Under some charters or ordinances which have been held to be a valid exercise of municipal powers,³⁶ the sale or encumbrance of a municipal employee's wages is prohibited, and an assignment in violation thereof is void.³⁷ Such an ordinance or charter, however, does not prevent an employee from exercising his statutory right to appoint a trustee to sue the city, for the employee's benefit, for matured and disputed claims for wages;³⁸ and an ordinance prohibiting the assignment of unearned wages does not prevent the assignment of earned wages.³⁹

§ 2184. Interest

Although there is authority to the contrary, interest ordinarily is not allowable on a claim against a municipal corporation, except to the extent that it is provided for by statute or by express agreement between the parties.

According to some authorities, a municipal or quasi-municipal corporation ordinarily is liable for interest on its debts to the same extent as an individual.⁴⁰ On the other hand, according to other

Interest is recoverable where expressly provided for by statute,⁴⁵ and the terms of a general interest statute have been held broad enough to embrace cities,⁴⁶ but as to this there is authority to the contrary.⁴⁷ Interest is not recoverable on amounts, the payment of which has been tendered and re-

cial rate of interest for the particular claim or indebtedness is fixed by agreement between the parties⁵² or is fixed by statute.⁵³ A statute fixing the rate of interest on claims against a municipality has been held to be not unconstitutional,⁵⁴ and, in the absence of express language indicating a contrary intent, it has also been held to be prospective only, and not retroactive, in its effect,⁵⁵ and not to affect or impair any existing right which has accrued prior to the effective date of the statute,⁵⁶ and, accordingly, interest may be allowed at the old rate on as much of the claims as accrued prior to the taking effect of the new rate, and at the new rate on as much of the claims as accrued thereafter.⁵⁷

Time from which interest accrues. A statute providing that rate of interest to be paid by a municipal corporation on judgments or "accrued" claims against corporation shall not exceed four per cent per annum is not retroactive, the word "accrued," although grammatically in the past tense, being required to be construed as a description and not as referable to a date previous to the effective date of the statute—*People ex rel. Demand on disbursing officer

N.Y.—Rapid Transit Subway Const. Co. v. City of New York, 182 N.E. 145, 259 N.Y. 472.

Reason for demand

The rule that to entitle claimant against municipality to interest demand must be made although demand would not be necessary against individual under similar circumstances is based on fact that it would be burdensome to require officers of municipality to seek out creditor and tender payment.—Logan v. City of Two Rivers, 278 N.W. 861, 227 Wis. 499.

Claims against a city for unpaid salaries of city employees do not draw interest until demand is made against city for payment, and, hence, interest should be awarded against city in action on claims at six per cent per annum, simple interest, only from date of commencement of action where there was no proof of demand for payment other than filing of action.—Coleman v. Kansas City, 156 S.W.2d 644, 348 Mo. 916.

treasury and the municipality fails or refuses to pay;⁶² and, where the statute provides that no suit can be brought except on audited bills, interest may be allowed only from the time of the audit.⁶³ It has also been held that, where, by statute, no right of action exists against the municipality until the lapse of a specified time after the presentation of the demand, interest can be allowed only from the lapse of such time after presentation.⁶⁴

A demand, when necessary to entitle a claimant to interest on his claim, must be for the sum actually due;⁶⁵ and, while no particular technical form of demand is required, the total absence of a request for payment is not a sufficient demand.⁶⁶

Additional interest. Where a claimant has given a receipt in full, on receiving partial progress payments, without reserving an additional claim for interest, he cannot recover additional interest.⁶⁷

A claim against a municipal corporation which has been allowed by the proper auditing officer or board, should be paid.

Disbursing officers, performing only municipal functions, must make payment of a claim allowed by the proper auditing officer or board,⁶⁸ except that they are not required to pay a claim for an unauthorized expenditure, and not properly chargeable to the municipality, even though it has been properly certified as correct.⁶⁹ A statute authorizing a particular officer to adjust any claim on which a suit has been brought, and, when adjusted, duly to provide for its payment, has been held mandatory in respect of providing for payment.⁷⁰

Manner of payment or collection. Under statutes providing that no money shall be paid except on a warrant, payment cannot be compelled on a mere showing of an audit of the claim,⁷¹ and under such a statute a payment of a claim against a city in cash without a warrant is an illegal act.⁷² On the other hand, where a board allows a claim, illegal on its face, the auditor may refuse to draw a warrant in payment thereof.⁷³

Claims or judgments against a municipality must be collected in the manner provided by statute;⁷⁴ but, in the absence of a constitutional or statutory requirement, claims against a municipality need not be paid in the order in which they accrue.⁷⁵ A claimant is not authorized to appropriate public funds coming into his hands in payment of his claim.⁷⁶

Administrative officers. Merely administrative officers have no authority to pay claims, except when ordered to do so by the municipal council,⁷⁷ fiscal board,⁷⁸ or officers clothed by law with authority to order the payment of claims.⁷⁹ However, it will be presumed, in the absence of anything to the contrary, that claims paid by a city auditor were approved and certified to him as required by statute.⁸⁰

XXI. ACTIONS

§ 2186. Capacity to Sue and Be Sued and Right of Action

- a. In general
- b. Right of action

a. In General

As a general rule, a municipal corporation may sue and be sued.

As a general rule, a municipal corporation may sue⁸³ and be sued.⁸⁴ While this power or capacity is frequently based on charters or other statutes,⁸⁵ according to some authorities an express authorization by the municipal charter is not essential,⁸⁶ and the power to sue and be sued is incident to the existence of the corporation.⁸⁷ According to some authorities the immunity of the state from suit does not extend absolutely to municipal corporations.⁸⁸ It has been held or recognized, however, that a municipality, with respect to the performance of delegated sovereign governmental powers, is exempt from suit unless permission to sue is expressly granted,⁸⁹ and in some jurisdictions a municipality, as an integral part of the sovereignty of the state, may not be sued in the absence of consent or of statutory authorization.⁹⁰ The liability of municipal corporations for torts is discussed in detail supra §§ 745-918.

The mere absence of authorization by the governing body to the law officer to bring a particular action does not affect the corporation's capacity to sue in such action.⁹¹

As a general rule, the dissolution of a municipal-ity terminates its capacity to sue⁹² and be sued.⁹³

Prior to incorporation no action will lie by⁹⁴ or against⁹⁵ an alleged municipal corporation, at least where it is not a de facto corporation.⁹⁶

Scope and extent of capacity. As an incident to its capacity to sue or to be sued, a municipal corporation may perform every act required to prosecute or to defend an action.⁹⁷ Usually, however, it has no special right not common to corporations in general,⁹⁸ and its standing in a court of equity in its proprietary capacity is not greater than that of any private litigant.⁹⁹ A constitutional provision governing actions against the state does not apply to actions against a municipal corporation.¹ A municipal corporation having capacity to sue and to be sued may sue or be sued both at law and in equity, as considered infra §§ 2188-2193.

b. Right of Action

- (1) Against municipal corporation
- (2) By municipal corporation

(1) Against Municipal Corporation

Some statutes have specified the grounds on which actions against municipal corporations may be maintained, and, according to some authorities, a strict construction of a statute giving a right of action is essential.

The grounds on which actions against municipal corporations may be maintained have been specified by some statutes,² and it has been stated broadly that a right of action against a municipality is a matter of legislative favor and may be withheld, granted absolutely, or granted on condition.³ The fact that plaintiff may not be able to obtain satisfaction of a judgment against defendant municipal corporation does not affect his right to sue and obtain judgment.⁴ According to some authorities a statute which gives a right of action against a municipality must be strictly construed,⁵ and a statute which creates a right of action for certain acts does not include the right to sue a municipal corporation unless such right to sue is expressly included.⁶ It has been stated broadly that a citizen of a municipality may not complain of an act done or threatened by the municipality unless the injury to him is greater than, or different from, that suffered by the members of the public generally.⁷

Relief against a municipal corporation may be obtained in actions to recover money⁸ or the value of other property⁹ to which the municipal corporation is not entitled, to quiet title, as shown in the C. J.S. title Quieting Title § 56, also 44 C.J. p 1456 note 48, and to foreclose a vendor's lien.¹⁰ While it seems that, if a municipal corporation fails to provide funds to meet obligations where it is required by statute so to do, an action will lie against it,¹¹ the municipal corporation is not liable, in the first instance at least, where it has, in accordance with the statute, placed the necessary funds in the hands of the particular board or department which has contracted the obligation in question.¹² A municipal corporation may not be sued to enforce a liability properly chargeable against another distinct municipal entity.¹³ No action may be brought against a city as administrator or collector of a fund where a receiver of such fund has been appointed.¹⁴ Creditors of a municipal corporation have been permitted to maintain a suit to set aside as fraudulent a conveyance to a third person by another than the municipal corporation of land paid for by the corporation as a gift to the grantee.¹⁵ A proceeding for the purpose of collecting a claim of one individual against another may not be maintained against a municipal corporation.¹⁶

The right of action against a municipal corporation for tort is considered supra § 919; and the right of action against a municipal corporation on contract generally is considered supra §§ 1024, 1026.

Representative actions. A municipal corporation may be made defendant as representative of private persons whose interests are affected where it represented such persons in the transaction out of which the action has arisen,¹⁷ and it may also as defendant represent the public where certain public rights are involved.¹⁸ Its capacity to be sued in respect of the private rights of its citizens or inhabitants, however, has been denied where it is not in any sense their representative in respect of such rights.¹⁹

(2) By Municipal Corporation

Some statutes have specified the grounds on which actions by municipal corporations may be maintained, and, in order to maintain an action, it is essential that a municipal corporation should have the requisite interest in the subject matter of the litigation.

The grounds on which actions by municipal corporations may be maintained have been specified by some statutes.²⁰ In order to permit the maintenance of an action by a municipal corporation, such corporation must have the requisite interest in the subject matter involved.²¹

It has been held or recognized that a municipal corporation may maintain an action of ejectment,²² to rescind a sale of municipal lands,²³ to cancel municipal water-right obligations,²⁴ and to quiet title or to remove a cloud from title, as discussed in the C.J.S. title Quietening Title § 55, also 44 C.J. p 1457 note 64, 51 C.J. p 210 note 76. A municipal corporation, however, may not sue in the name of the state on an official bond running to the state, where the state has no interest in the moneys involved.²⁵ A municipality may question the constitutionality of a statute changing its form of government²⁶ and may invoke the protection afforded by the constitution to prevent a violation of its rights by a statute.²⁷ A municipality cannot maintain an action for defamation²⁸ even in its proprietary capacity.²⁹

The right of action by a municipal corporation on contract generally is considered supra § 1025.

Representative actions. The right of a municipal corporation to sue to protect the rights of its citizens or inhabitants, where it represented them in the transaction out of which the action has arisen, has been upheld.³⁰ Such actions are usually actions in equity, as discussed infra § 2190, and a reason sometimes given for permitting the action is that it will avoid a multiplicity of suits.³¹ Moreover, the municipal corporation may sue as representative of the public for the vindication of certain public rights.³² On the other hand, the right of a municipal corporation to sue in respect of the private rights of its citizens or inhabitants has been denied where it cannot in any sense be regarded as a representative of the public or of its inhabitants or citizens,³³ and it has been held that such corporation may not maintain an action to protect the rights of its resident taxpayers where the litigation does not affect such corporation directly.³⁴ It has been held that a municipal corporation cannot maintain an action for damages as a trustee of an express trust on an agreement alleged to have been entered into by it for the benefit of certain of its inhabitants.³⁵

§ 2187. Authority to Institute or Defend Actions

What officer or body has power to bring action in behalf of, and to defend actions against, a municipal corporation is sometimes determined by statutory provision.

While, if a municipal corporation has a right of action, either in its governmental or in its proprietary capacity, some person must represent it in an action in order to render the right of action effective,³⁶ and a municipal corporation as plaintiff cannot come into court without being represented by its duly authorized officers,³⁷ according to some authorities a municipal officer cannot initiate an action on behalf of the corporation except where authorized, expressly or by implication, by statute or ordinance or resolution of the governing body.³⁸ By statute the power and duty to initiate actions on behalf of a municipal corporation may be conferred expressly or by implication on the municipal council or other governing body,³⁹ on the legal officer or official counsel of the corporation, in certain specified cases, as discussed infra § 2206, or on other officers in certain cases.⁴⁰ There is authority for the view that the corporate name may generally be used by any officer or board authorized to represent the corporate interest involved in the action⁴¹ and that by virtue of his office and the general powers conferred by statute the mayor is authorized to initiate actions in the name and on behalf of the corporation.⁴² Under some statutes the mayor and treasurer of the municipality are authorized to direct in writing the commencement of particular actions.⁴³ A stranger cannot, without authority, prosecute a suit in the corporate name.⁴⁴

There may be a ratification of the act of one purporting to act on behalf of the corporation in instituting proceedings.⁴⁵

Where several different agents are authorized to sue in behalf of a municipality, it has been held that the court has the power to see that the agent who first sues is acting in good faith,⁴⁶ and that, where it appears that such agent is not conducting the litigation in good faith and in the real interest of the municipality, the court may authorize another agent to appear, file appropriate pleadings, and take steps essential to protect the interests of the municipality.⁴⁷

Defending actions. Some statutes confer the power and duty to defend actions against a municipal corporation on the municipal council or other governing body,⁴⁸ and as to particular matters certain departments are sometimes authorized to defend in the name of the corporation.⁴⁹

As a general rule a cause of action against a municipal corporation may be enforced by an action in any form which would be appropriate in an action against a private corporation or an individual.

As a general rule, whenever a cause of action exists against a municipal corporation, it may be prosecuted by an action in any form which would be appropriate in an action against a private corporation or an individual,⁵⁰ and, where it has capacity to be sued, it may be sued both at law and in equity.⁵¹ Assumpsit will lie against a municipal corporation to recover on an unliquidated claim⁵² or on an obligation implied in law.⁵³ An attorney at law who is entitled to fees for the taking of acknowledgments to instruments by a municipal officer may maintain an action for money had and received to the use of plaintiff against the municipal corporation where such fees have been paid into the municipal treasury.⁵⁴ In certain cases, instead of proceeding by mandamus, the enforcement of a claim against a municipal corporation by an ordinary action at law has been regarded as proper,⁵⁵ and, where a claim is unliquidated or disputed, as necessary.⁵⁶

In a proper case a municipal corporation may enforce its rights by a suit in equity or may maintain assumpsit to enforce a claim.

The right of a municipal corporation to resort to a court of equity has expressly been recognized.⁵⁷ Suits by a municipal corporation to protect its citizens or inhabitants, where it represented them in the transaction out of which the suit has arisen, are usually suits in equity.⁵⁸ Assumpsit will lie in a proper case to enforce a claim of a municipal corporation.⁵⁹

§ 2191. — Attachment and Garnishment

A municipal corporation may be entitled to take advantage of attachment statutes, and some statutes authorize the attachment of property of a municipal corporation or authorize garnishment against such a corporation as defendant.

The right of a municipal corporation to take advantage of attachment statutes has been upheld.⁶⁰

Particular statutes may be broad enough to permit the attachment of property of a municipal corporation⁶¹ or to authorize garnishment against such

61. Municipal corporation of another state

(1) It has been held that property of a municipal corporation of a state other than the state of the forum may be subject to attachment.—Harman v. City of Ft. Lauderdale, 234 N.Y.S. 196, 134 Misc. 183.

(2) Funds of such a corporation acting in a proprietary or private capacity, in the hands of a depository in the state of the forum, are subject to attachment.—Doyle v. City of Astoria, Or., 262 N.Y.S. 572, 147 Misc. 127, affirmed 262 N.Y.S. 973, 238 App. Div. 833.

(3) In this connection it has been held that funds forwarded to a bank to pay bonds of such a corporation must be treated as part of the municipality's free funds held in its corporate capacity and subject to its control, and, therefore, subject to attachment.—Doyle v. City of Astoria, Or., supra.

(4) Such municipal corporation, by maintaining a water system to supply private consumers for compensation, was engaged in a business activity, and funds held for such purposes were held in a proprietary, not in a governmental, capacity, and therefore, were subject to attachment.—Doyle v. City of Astoria, Or., supra.

(5) In this respect the functions of a port authority organized and existing under the laws of another state and empowered to construct, manage, operate, and control a harbor improvement were private and proprietary, and not governmental, a corporation as defendant.⁶² So, under some statutes, there may be reached by garnishment debts due a municipal corporation⁶³ of a private nature.⁶⁴ However, taxes and public revenues of such corporations cannot be reached by garnishment,⁶⁵ and the right to obtain jurisdiction in an action against a municipal corporation of another state by the attachment of property of such corporation in the state where the action is brought has been denied.⁶⁶

Whether a municipal corporation may be garnishee is discussed in Garnishment § 39 c (4).

§ 2192. — Injunctions

A municipal corporation may maintain a suit for an injunction to protect public rights.

A municipal corporation may sue to protect by injunction public rights⁶⁷ in the same manner as a private person or corporation may seek redress in a proper case.⁶⁸ It has been held that an injunction will not issue at the suit of a judgment creditor restraining municipal authorities from paying claims due the judgment debtor.⁶⁹

General rules as to procedure in injunction suits, considered in Injunctions §§ 162-223, usually apply in suits to which a municipal corporation is a party.⁷⁰

§ 2193. — Receivers

As a general rule, courts may not appoint a receiver for a municipal corporation in the absence of statutory authorization.

There is authority for the view that, in the absence of statutory authorization, courts do not have power to appoint receivers for local political subdivisions of the state,⁷¹ and in some jurisdictions the courts may not appoint receivers for a public corporation in an action against it.⁷² In any event, in general a receiver will not be appointed in the absence of insolvency or of threatened irreparable damage.⁷³ The view has been taken that the court and certificates of indebtedness deposited by such authority in the state of the forum were subject to attachment.—Harman v. City of Ft. Lauderdale, 234 N.Y.S. 196, 134 Misc. 133.

62. Nonresident municipal corporation

Injunction not authorized

New Jersey township sued on note was not entitled to have plaintiff enjoined from prosecuting its action to judgment because New Jersey municipal finance commission, pursuant to New Jersey statute, had taken over financial affairs of township, which was unable to pay its debts, since statute did not prohibit entry of judgment against such a municipality, but merely prohibited enforcement of judgment.—*Township of Delaware v. Repeal of charter

Where, however, taxes had been duly levied in pursuance of law before the repeal of a municipal charter, the court had power to lay hold by its receiver of the assets belonging to the city when its charter was repealed, including such taxes as were levied and collected, but undisposed of, and all taxes uncollected, and all property of every description, except property held for strictly public uses, and could administer such assets for the benefit of the creditors.—*Garrett v. § 2194. Actions or Suits in Corporate Name

Except as otherwise provided by statute, a municipal corporation may, and under some circumstances should, sue and be sued in its proper corporate name.

Except where it is otherwise provided by statute,⁷⁵ a municipal corporation may sue⁷⁶ and be sued,⁷⁷ and in some jurisdictions or under some statutes should sue⁷⁸ and be sued,⁷⁹ in its proper corporate name, and not in the names of the individuals who compose it or of the municipal council or authorities.⁸⁰ In some instances slight or technical variances in the corporate name have not been regarded as fatal in actions or proceedings by municipalities.⁸¹ The municipality may sue in its own name on contracts made by some officer or agent for its benefit.⁸²

Change of name. After a lawful change of the corporate name, as a rule action should be brought in the new name in the case of an action by⁸³ or against⁸⁴ a municipal corporation.

§ 2195. Actions by or against Municipal Officer or Department, and Use of Name of Officer or Agent

Except as otherwise provided by statute, a municipal corporation may not sue in the name of its officers or agents, and, in the absence of statutory authorization, a department of the municipality may not sue or be sued in the departmental name.

A municipal corporation may not sue⁸⁵ or be sued⁸⁶ in the name of its officers or agents except as otherwise provided by statute;⁸⁷ and the names of its officers or agents need not be designated.⁸⁸ An officer of the corporation usually cannot maintain an action in his official name without statutory authorization,⁸⁹ but a statute may authorize a municipal officer to maintain a suit in his own name with respect to certain matters.⁹⁰ It has been held that a municipal officer can prosecute in his own name an action for certain fees due to him in his official capacity, where he is obliged to account for, and to pay over, such fees to the municipality.⁹¹ In order that a municipal corporation or unit may be regarded as a party to an action or proceeding brought only against its officers, as such, such corporation or unit must in fact be the real party in interest.⁹² Actions against municipal officers for personal liability are discussed supra § 545 b (3).

In the absence of statutory authorization, a department of the municipal government may not, in the departmental name, sue⁹³ or be sued.⁹⁴ Some statutes authorize an action in the departmental name by⁹⁵ or against⁹⁶ a municipal department. It has been held that in determining the rights of the parties an action against a municipal department is regarded as one against the municipal corporation itself.⁹⁷

§ 2196. Actions by State or State Officer on Behalf of Municipal Corporation

As a general rule a state may not sue with respect to, or for the recovery of, property or funds belonging solely to a municipal corporation, in the absence of statutory authorization; but some statutes have authorized a suit by the state or state officers for the benefit of municipal corporations.

Except where there is a statutory provision giving a right of action to the state,⁹⁸ it has been held that the state may not maintain an action with respect to property which belongs to a municipal corporation with regard to which the state has no interest or right of possession or control,⁹⁹ that the state may not sue for the recovery of funds belonging to a municipality,¹ that, where moneys belonging to the municipality are misappropriated, it alone, and not the state, can sue for their recovery,² and also that the state cannot maintain an action to prevent or to avoid the sale of corporate property.³ The right of the attorney general to maintain an action to restrain a municipality from making an unauthorized contract, however, has been recognized.⁴ The state, and not the municipality, has been held the proper party to enforce a forfeited bond where the statute provides summary proceedings in the name of the state for the collection of such bonds, even though the amount of the forfeiture inures to the benefit of the municipality.⁵ Statutes sometimes expressly confer on a state officer the right to maintain an action for the use and benefit of a municipal corporation,⁶ and the fact that the corporation has the right to bring the action in its own name and right does not affect the right of such state officer to sue;⁷ moreover, the fact that causes of action in favor of two different corporations are joined in the suit by the state officer is not fatal where the causes grow out of the same act and there is only one defendant.⁸

§ 2197. Compromise and Settlement of Pending Action

As a general rule, a municipal corporation may compromise or settle pending actions brought by or against it.

As a general rule, a municipal corporation may compromise or settle pending actions brought by⁹ or against¹⁰ it. While the power to compromise is sometimes expressly conferred by statute,¹¹ it is generally considered that the power arises out of the power to sue and to be sued.¹²

The usual requisites of a valid compromise and settlement, discussed in Compromise and Settlement §§ 2-12, must exist.¹³

Compromise of content of will

(1) In an action by the heirs of a testator against a municipal corporation to set aside the residuary clause of a will in which such corporation was designated as beneficiary, where plaintiff's claim was based on reasonable grounds and was asserted in good faith, the municipal corporation could lawfully compromise its claim to the residuary estate, especially when compromise was to become effective only after approval by the court.—Schnack v. City of Larned, 186 P. 1012, 106 Kan. 177.

Doubtful claim

Where there is no dispute as to the amount of the liability to the municipality or a contention that the entire amount is not collectable, a municipality is without authority to settle for less than the full amount,

Compromise of claim against a municipality generally is discussed supra § 2181, compromise of claim for taxes supra § 2073, arbitration of claim against municipality supra § 2182, and compromise and settlement of final judgment infra § 2211.

By whom made and method of authorization. Usually the municipal council or other governing body is authorized to compromise a pending action by¹⁴ or against¹⁵ a municipal corporation. According to some authorities a law officer of defendant municipal corporation has no authority to compromise a pending action in the absence of statutory authorization,¹⁶ but a compromise effected by the law officer with the concurrence of another officer who has the power to compromise has been upheld.¹⁷ There must be due compliance with a statutory provision authorizing the law officer to enter into an agreement to compromise.¹⁸

An ordinance which authorizes the municipality to settle a claim involved in litigation against former officials, is not legislative in character and, therefore, is not within the purview of a charter provision for initiative and referendum in the enactment of legislation.¹⁹

Taxpayer's action. The right of a municipal corporation to compromise a taxpayer's action to recover money from a third person has been upheld even though the corporation had failed to take the initiative.²⁰

§ 2198. Conditions Precedent in General

There must be due compliance with conditions precedent to actions by or against municipal corporations.

Usually a municipal corporation is not held to the performance of acts other than such as are required of an individual, in order to maintain an action.²¹ Under some statutes no action can be brought in the name of the municipality where it has not authorized the action²² and notice has not been given to its law officer.²³ Under other statutes particular actions may not be commenced unless commencement is directed in writing by certain municipal officers.²⁴ A statutory provision prohibiting the law officer from commencing an action unless directed by the mayor, however, has been construed as not creating a condition precedent to the right to sue.²⁵

Some statutory provisions exempt municipal corporations from furnishing sureties or cash as security as a condition to maintaining a proceeding or obtaining relief, except in the case of specific regulation.²⁶ Charter provisions exempting municipal for that would be an attempt unlawfully to divert the public money to a private use.—People v. Holten, 122 N.E. 540, 287 Ill. 225—44 C.J. p 1459 note 31 [a].

Regulation by constitution

(1) A constitutional provision that the general assembly shall not have power to release, extinguish, or authorize the releasing or extinguishing, in whole or in part, of indebtedness or liability to any municipality of the state denies the power to compromise where the liability is fixed and certain.—Steele v. Taylor, for Use and Benefit of Laurel County, 113 S.W.2d 423, 272 Ky. 11.

(2) Such constitutional provision does not, however, forbid the compromise of pending litigation to recover on claims that are unliquidated and uncertain in amount at any time before final judgment.—Steele v. Taylor, for Use and Benefit of Laurel County, supra.

Settlement justified

Where special assessment was annulled by trial court and landowner, pending city's appeal, offered over one half thereof in settlement, city had power and duty to accept settlement if concluding that settlement should be accepted, as regards claim that city negligently dismissed appeal and was liable to owners of street improvement bonds for difference between amount of assessment and amount of settlement.—Blanchard v. City of Casper, C.C.A.Wyo., 81 F.2d 452.

18. Writing and approval

Where alleged compromise agreement with corporation counsel of city of second class providing for discontinuance of two tax certiorari proceedings and payment by city of specified sum was neither in writing nor approved by board of estimate and apportionment, the alleged compromise agreement was not enforceable, in view of the requirements of the governing statute.—Fischer v.

Sufficiency of notice

Under a statutory provision that no action shall be brought by any city officer in the name of the city without notice to the regularly chosen solicitor, it has been held that notice to the assistant of the solicitor who was duly authorized by the solicitor was sufficient.—Rafferty v. Pittsburg, 15 Pa.Super. 77.

Actions against municipal corporation. The legislature may prescribe conditions precedent to an action against a corporation,²⁸ as where the right of action is created by statute.²⁹ While there must be a compliance with conditions precedent,³⁰ as a general rule substantial compliance is sufficient.³¹ Since conditions precedent are not favored,³² the creation of such conditions will not be presumed where the intention to create them is not plain.³³ The courts have refused to regard as a condition precedent the obtaining of a warrant.³⁴

§ 2199. Notice, Demand, or Presentation of Claim

- a. In general
- b. Validity of statutes or ordinances
- c. Nature and purpose; construction and operation in general
- d. To what claims, actions, or proceedings requirement applicable
- e. Form and contents
- f. Presentation or service
- g. Objections, waiver, or loss of right to object, and excuse for noncompliance

a. In General

In the absence of statutory or charter requirement, presentation of a claim or giving notice is not a prerequisite to an action against a municipal corporation, but some statutes require the giving, making, or presentation of a notice, demand, or claim as a condition precedent to such an action.

In the absence of a statutory or charter provision to the contrary, it is not necessary, as a prerequisite to an action against a municipal corporation, that the claim or demand should have been presented for payment, or a notice given.³⁵ As a general rule, however, statutes requiring that a notice, demand, or claim shall be given, made or presented, and also similar charter provisions adopted by municipalities pursuant to due authorization, are mandatory,³⁶ and create conditions precedent,³⁷ and a failure to comply with such a provision defeats recovery.³⁸

While it has been stated that strict compliance with statutory or charter provisions for the presentation of claims against municipalities is required,³⁹ and in any event substantial compliance with such a provision is required,⁴⁰ substantial compliance has been regarded as sufficient, in the absence of an intention to mislead.⁴¹ It has been held that in no case is a second presentation of claim necessary.⁴²

Notice or presentation of claim before bringing action against a municipal corporation for tort is discussed supra §§ 922-930, and notice or presentation of claim before bringing action against a municipal corporation on contract generally is considered supra § 1024.

Effect will be accorded a provision making the rejection of the claim or application in whole or in part,⁴³ or the neglect or refusal of the governing body or a particular officer to make adjustment or payment within a specified time,⁴⁴ a condition precedent. A statutory or charter right of the officer on whom the power to adjust and settle claims has been conferred to examine a claimant has a bearing on whether such officer has neglected or refused to adjust the claim,⁴⁵ and there is no such neglect or refusal where want of adjustment or payment is due to the refusal or inability of claimant to appear for examination if examination is sought,⁴⁶ in the absence of waiver or any loss of right of such officer to examine claimant.⁴⁷ There is authority for the view that, where, after presentation, no action is taken on the claim for an unreasonable time, claimant may sue notwithstanding the charter provides that the rejection of the claims shall be final and shall be a bar to any action other than by appeal to a specified court.⁴⁸

Several conditions for one action. Sometimes different statutory provisions requiring notice or presentation of claim are applicable to the same action,⁴⁹ and compliance with such provisions is necessary.⁵⁰

b. Validity of Statutes or Ordinances

As a general rule statutes requiring notice or presentation of a claim or demand as a condition precedent to an action against a municipal corporation are valid.

The legislature has power to enact a statutory provision requiring notice or presentation of a claim or demand as a condition precedent to an action against a municipal corporation,⁵¹ as where the right of action is created by statute⁵² or even where the right exists at common law.⁵³ The right of a municipal council to require by ordinance the presentation of a claim as a condition precedent has been denied in the absence of statutory authorization;⁵⁴ but, where the corporation has authority to frame its own charter, a charter provision adopted by it, which requires the presentation of a claim within a specified time, is valid⁵⁵ where it does not contravene any constitutional or statutory provision.⁵⁶

Reasonableness of provision. There is authority for the view that provisions in this regard must be reasonable whether enacted by the legislature⁵⁷ or by the corporation itself,⁵⁸ including a provision as to the time after accrual within which a claim must be presented.⁵⁹ The view has been taken, however, that, where the right of action is purely a statutory one, whether the limitations imposed are reasonable or unreasonable are questions for the legislature and not for the courts.⁶⁰

c. Nature and Purpose; Construction and Operation in General

Whether or not a requirement for the presentation of a claim or for giving notice constitutes a condition precedent to an action against a municipal corporation depends largely on the terms of the requirement duly construed.

The express terms of some statutes or charters make clear the legislative intent to create a condition precedent.⁶¹ So, usually, a condition precedent is created by a provision that no action against a municipal corporation shall be maintained unless a claim shall have been presented,⁶² unless there

Failure to present claim as defense see infra § 2200.

Submission of bill of account

U.S.—Potts v. Village of Havestraw, C.C.A.N.Y., 93 F.2d 506.

62. In New York

(1) The rule stated in the text has been announced.—Benreither v. New York, 89 N.E. 1096, 196 N.Y. 506.

(2) The view has been expressed that the presentation of a claim to the comptroller provided for by the charter of the city of New York is not an essential part of a cause of action but is a condition of main-

shall have been neglect or refusal to adjust or pay the claim within a specified time,⁶³ or unless notice of intention to commence an action shall have been filed or given within a specified time after the cause of action shall have accrued.⁶⁴

While the fact that a statute provides for the presentation of a claim does not necessarily make such presentation a condition precedent to an action thereon,⁶⁵ some provisions have been construed as creating conditions precedent, even though they do not expressly forbid the bringing or maintenance of an action if the statutory requirement is not complied with.⁶⁶

According to some authorities under a provision that failure to present a claim or to give notice within a specified time after accrual or after the occurrence on which the action is based shall be a bar to an action against the municipality, presentation of a claim or giving notice is a prerequisite to the right to bring an action,⁶⁷ and such provision is not a statute of limitations.⁶⁸ According to other authorities, where failure to present a claim within a specified time after accrual is specifically made a bar to the claim, presentation is not a prerequisite to the bringing of an action,⁶⁹ and failure to present the claim is a matter of defense, as discussed infra §

2200; but, while such a statute has been referred to as one of limitation,⁷⁰ it is not technically a statute of limitations.⁷¹

In some decisions, in construing provisions, the language of which might be regarded as creating conditions precedent, a distinction has been made between rights of action created by statute and those which exist independently of statute.⁷² Accordingly, where the statute creates the right and also imposes a requirement as to notice or presentation of a claim, such requirement is regarded as a condition precedent to the right of action;⁷³ but, where the right of action exists independently of the statute which requires a notice or presentation of a claim, such requirement affects the remedy⁷⁴ and is in the nature of a statute of limitations,⁷⁵ unless the provision is such as to prohibit the court from taking jurisdiction in the event of noncompliance with the statute.⁷⁶

It has been held, with respect to an action against a municipal corporation brought in a state other than that in which such corporation exists and is situated, that a requirement for presentment of claim obtains only if present in the law of the state where action is brought,⁷⁷ and that a statute of the state in which such corporation exists and is situated
